Rubbish Is Your Headache! Householders: Combustible

Householders, not the city, are responsible for the disposal of garden refuse, lawn cuttings, tree trimmings, etc., from private property, acording to an announcement made yesterday by the Los Angeles Board of Public Works. Noncombustible rubbish (tin cans, ashes, etc.) is collected regularly by city forces but all combustible rubbish must be disposed of by the householder.

Reports to the board from the Bureau of Maintenance and Sanitation reveal that many residents have been placing palm tree fronds and other combustible rubbish in street gutters with the hope that city forces will collect and dispose of this waste. Officials point out that it is unlawful to place refuse in a public street.

It is the direct responsibility of the householder to dispose of all garden refuse, either by burning in an incinerator, between the hours of 6 and 9 a. m., or by employing a private rubbish collector to collect and dispose of the rubbish in the municipal incinerator, the Board's announcement stated.

The Los Angeles Realtor, local realty board journal, recently ran a two page list of uses allowed in the various zones. This was a cooperative gesture that assisted both their members and the Department of City Planning.

Rep. Arthur Mitchell in San Diego

SAN DIEGO—At San Diego Memorial Junior High School Auditorium a large audience heard our distinguished Congressman, Arthur W. Mitchell of the First Congressional District, Chicago, Ill., in a splendid non-manuscript address on war conditions relating to the Negro race. Exceptionally interesting, his talk was punctuated occasionally by witticism.

The Memorial Junior High School orchestra furnished the music. Mr. Cline, principal of the evening school opened the program with a few timely remarks. Dr. Edward Baily, prominent physician introduced the speakers of the evening. Mrs. Irene Prince rendered a well received number at the closing of the program.

Power Sewing Student, 65, Has Job as Operator

Among the many students of the Jefferson Adult Power Sewing Class now employed in various factories and defense plants, one student stands out as an example of what can be done if older people accept the challenge that they can learn and accomplish anything any other person can.

Mrs. Quillie Fox, 65 years young, enrolled in Power Sewing last September, finished the course outlined, and has for the past 6 weeks been gainfully employed in a factory near her home making uniforms. Mrs. Fox is very happy. Her work hours are short, her tasks are pleasant and her salary is good. Her employers say there is no difference betwen her workmanship and her performance and that of their best younger operators.

The class in Power Sewing at Jefferson Evening High School conducted by Mrs. Lucille Pulham is now open to new students, Monday, Wednesday and Friday. Enroll at the Evening School Office. There ale many openings in industry for those who can qualify. The course includes Dressmaking, Power Sewing Machines and Special Machines.

Structural Worker Held on Charge of Grand Theft

Thomas Callion, 1335 E. 45th street, structual worker employed at Terminal Island has been held to answer on a charge of grand theft person perferred by Mrs. Bessie Sampson, 1305½ E. 12th street. Mrs. Sampson testified that she had only been in the city eight months and charged that on the night of Nov. 29th Callion invited himself to be a member of her party of five who were dining out at a Central Avenue cafe. She stated that the man insisted on remaining in the party and that after she and her friends decided to call a taxi and go home Callion got into the taxi also and stated that he lived in the same direction.

The woman testified that after the taxi had arrived at her home near 12th street and Central Avenue as she alighted from the cab Callion suddenly snatched her pocket book and ran. He was apprehended, however, by the taxi driver and the other members of the party who took him to Newton Street police station where according to police officers he attempted to escape twice and was caught each time. Callion is represented by Attorney Curtis C. Taylor.

Clears Butler of Hit-Run Charges

John Whitmore, 1138 E. 40th Pl. and Hollywood butler, employed at 1820 Courtland Terrace, was acquitted of felony charges of hit-and-run driving last Friday morning by Judge Thomas L. Ambrose in Dept. 42 of the Superior Court after defense Attorney Curtis C. Taylor, had rested his case on the testimony of Whitmore alone and then moved to dismiss the charges for lack of sufficient evidence.

Whitmore had been arrested and charged with the running down of Mrs. Selina Skilling of 6108 York Blvd. on the night of August 16th at which time her shoulder was broken and she received such severe internal injuries that she was forced to remain in the hospital for six weeks.

Whitmore was arrested after Mrs. Emma Stephen, sister-in-law of the injured woman, secured his automobile license immediately after the accident occurred. Whitmore admitted that he passed the scene of the accident at the time it happened, but insisted that the car which caused the near fatal injuries was a car of similar make but driven by a white man who drove speedily away from the accident.

Attorney Taylor pointed out that in the confusion and in the darkness it would be impossible for Mrs. Shipley to know exactly which car struck her sister-in-law since under cross-examination she admitted that she did not see the actual impact. Judge Ambrose ruled that the evidence was insufficient and Whitmore walked out of the courtroom a free man.

California Bank Officials Vote Xmas Bonus for Staff

The executive committee of California Bank has authorized payment of additional compensation during the Christmas season to all members of the staff, it has been announced by Arch W. Anderson president.

Those in the employ of the bank a year or more will receive a bonus on December 15 equal to a half month's salary with a maximum of $75 and a minimum of $50. Those employed less than a year will share in the distributions proportionately, it was stated.

Employees of California Trust Company have been awarded a similar Christmas bonus, it was announced.

Speaking for the directors and officers of the bank and trust company, Anderson said payment of the bonus was an expression of gratitude on the part of the directors and senior officers to the employees for their loyal cooperation in facing the abnormal problems brought about by a year of war during which many of the more experienced members of the staff were called to arms.

A large Christmas box containing the things every soldier wants, including fruit cake and candy, cigarettes, tobacco, playing cards, etc., has been or will be sent to approximately 125 former members of the bank's staff now in the service of the country, Anderson said.

Jefferson High School to Have Nursery School

Plans are already under way for the organization of one of the finest Nursery Schools in Los Angeles at Jefferson High school.

Already temporary approval has been secured from the Federal Works Agency and from the Los Angeles Board of Education for its establishment. As soon as forty children of pre-school age enrolled, it will be possible to put the project into full operation.

The Practice House and the large three-room bungalows at the northeast corner of the campus are being fitted with every modern convenience to take care of these children.

The project is being sponsored by the Jefferson High School Parent - Teacher Ass'n through its president, Mrs. Mabel Mumford, as well as the Board of Education and the Federal Works Agency.

Mothers who are working away from home are encouraged to register their eligible children if they live within a reasonable distance from the High School.

Those interested can register either with Mrs. Mumford, with Mrs. Ella Mae Smith, Vice-Principal of Jefferson High School, with Mr. Robert H. Presley, Principal of the Evening High School or Mrs. Canita Lancaster, Evening School secretary.

"The Delightful Side"

—Copyright 1942—

When midnite becomes again a part of me
Your shadow, creeping over my heart,
Dances to primitive rhythm
And this soulless body becomes the torch
Held tightly in your hand . . .
Hot, naked feet, beating a tom-tom, never still, never still (Early dew on my agonized face revives me
And I am still . . . then murmur your name . . .)

I dunno . . . but, somehow, all along . . . we never really thought . . . "Jo" Baker . . , was lying dead in some . . . obscure, far-off cemetery . . . so — it's with a heluva lot of relief . . . and glee . . . that we read again and again . . . the recent release attesting to her safe-being and glamour, if dimmed . . . Vive la "Jo!"

To officers training in Certainly am sorry we didnt get to see Margaret Bonds while she was here! In private life she's Mrs. Larry Richardson (he's a social worker) and their NY apt. is often the scene of petite gatherings of interesting folk who come to sip, chew and exchange engrossing talk. Twas she who set the Langston Hughes poem (NAACP) to music—no, wait a minute, now let's see, was it THAT poem? Well, anyhow, it was ONE of Langston's poems, I recall . . . its always nice to welcome such interesting folk to these sunkist shores, eh?

I can visualize the Xmas scene at the Leigh Whippers in NY. Holiday time is always a brilliant season in their household, what with their adopted twin sons. The four of them have a time, and I know this Xmas will be extra-special for Fannie and Bill Robinson, neighbors nearby, will be in their NY home, too, and the Whipper and Robinson households are inseparable . . .

The art work to be seen at the AWVS canteen is worth a visit from you. It's done by a young girl who answers to the rather delectable name, Queenie King. Queenie, let me add, has what the more informal art critics dub "something on the ball." I understand her AWVS display, as now viewed, is incomplete . . . I dunno how THIS got mixed up in last wk's batch of trivia, but the line mentioning the Hezz Howards shouldve read "their 2nd anniversary" and NOT their 22nd! Lan' sakes! . . . Pvt. Luther Thompson, so word comes dashing over the mts from Huachuca, no sooner got his bearings than he was in the midst of rehearsals for a drama! His experiences in "Blackouts" were so vividly successful, the lad obviously has taken the stage unto his bosom, army or no darn army. Good luck, fella . . .

Earl Johnson is home from Oakland, and glad to be . . . In a quandary: Frances Peterson, who is trying to choose betwixt the WAACs and the more local AWVS . . . mentioning the WAACs, nobody feels prouder of our commissioned officers in their snappy turn-out than this dept. and commends their effective campaign to encourage local volunteers. All well and good—but what's being done back in Des Moines to stamp out that flagrant jim-crow suffered by our girls? . . . March O' Events: Remember how, not so long ago, you'd shudder at the sight of travellin' folk toting lunch boxes? Now its a case of pitying those folk who don't have lunchtits to take on the train, for you sure ain't getting anything for your cash in diners! . . . Scene: Admiring the chic picture Mrs. Willie Covan makes in her furs, entering her car, and pausing to wave at someone.

Acute problem: Somebody somehow has got to do something about the plight of many of our lads in town on furlough and no place to sleep! The other midnight, I'm told, four actually were sleeping on car stop benches. I've seen several sleeping in hotel lobbies on the avenue. The army, or somebody, must do something about such a terrible situation, and darn quick . . .

Dear Santa Claus: Please bring a recital date for "Jo" Cooper . . .

The ballet: Glad to again report many tan tone folk well in evidence, and obviously enjoying it all tremendously. Gee, how we enjoyed "Rodeo!" . . . Inserted recollection: With daily mention of "Cabin, etc." our thoughts go winging back to Dooley Wilson's facial expressions while La Waters sang the title song in the show. That remains a highlight in the long parade of enjoyable moments in our theatre-going . . . Major Curtis Carpentier is on the recovery list at the Marion Davies Hospital . . . That's an interesting set-up for Elijah Hodges on his new job in the defense industry. It marks the first time his co. has placed tan tone folk in the dept. in which he is. So far so good, Elijah sez . . . This is interesting, too, I think: A father and son recd 2nd Lieut. commissions on the same day in the State Guard. They are Lonnie and Hugle Hudson.

Have you noticed how older folk predominate church attendance these days? Its a sentimental note. Many young women are working defense shifts, young men are in uniform. That leaves church-going to the older folk, and they carry on in their usual dependable, quiet and strengthening way. What would we do without them? . . . I, for one, hope our young women keep their femininity thru here! A postwar generation of women with cropped heads, pants, weatherbeaten faces and a line of mechanics lingo would be more than we could survive.

Rene McDonald was a Sunday nite hostess at her place . . . Chi folk will learn here velvet-brown Mattie Anderson is now Mrs. Mattie Scott and lives in Okla. City, but radiantly . . . Incident: Cocoa-brown boys drove a few truckloads of paleskin soldiers to a Beverly Hills party last wk. The commanding officer insisted the drivers join the party, only to have the dowager hostess thumbs-down the idea. The entire group left as one man, and glad to do so. If THAT is Beverly Hills democracy—fooey! . . . That was a sparkling Sunday nite party given for Myrtle Anderson (she's joined the WAACs), whose speaking voice always reminds us of Libby Holman. Tall glass touching, folk coming and going, a nice time in all . . . and photogs aiming cameras at her more glamorous guests . . . life begins at Sunday nite parties! ★ What's Doing in the Younger Set

By JESSIE MAE BROWN

The University clubs of SC and UCLA have changed their way of doing things a bit this year and are presenting their first annual pre-game dance instead of the old after-game affair. The combined clubs plan to start things off with a bang this year, therefore the popular Plantation club has been taken over by the University clubs, and invitations have been issued to several hundred younger setters, who plan to be on hand, if they can find enough gas to get there. The affair is sport, as in the past, and entrance will be made by invitations only.

Comes Saturday afternoon and the college crowd journies to the Coliseum to witness the long-awaited SC, UCLA football fracas. Here's hoping the best team will emerge victorious. Saturday night the crowd will find its way to the Elks auditorium as guests at the Brigadettes Fourth annual formal. Several before and after affairs are planned.

ALPHA FORMAL

Keeping in step wit hthe others, the Alphas are presenting their dawn formal on the eighteenth. This sudden onrush to keep all formals may be due to the rumor that eligibles will be in the army by Chirstmas.

Oakland's De Fremery USO Club Reports Happiest, Busiest Week

OAKLAND, Dec. 11.—The Reverend J. P. Hubbard, pastor of the Beth Eden Baptist church, 10th and Magnolia streets, inaugurated the happiest and busiest week in the history of the De Fremery USO club, 1651 Adeline street, on Sunday, Nov. 29, when he informally addressed a group of service men and friends on the subject of "Faith."

"It was that faith that saved Major Rickenbacker after he had landed on the treacherous seas of the South Pacific, not so long ago," said Rev. Hubbard. "'I knew all along that I would be saved,' said Eddie Rickenbacker, 'for I have my own religion. I have faith, and I had the faith to know that I would be saved'."

Rev. Hubbard is a great favorite among the service men, and they received his message very enthusiastically. He promised to return shortly.

On Wednesday, Nov. 25, the junior hostesses, under the direction of their dean, Mrs. Gladys C. Matthews, entertained the men with a dance and reception. Several hundred men joined in the dancing and enjoyed the games and refreshments that had been prepared for them.

Thursday, Thanksgiving Day, will long be remembered by the men who were fortunate enough to have been at the club. There were turkey dinners, with all the trimmings, for every man who came. The canteen and game rooms were the busiest places in the house. Every plate that came back for more was filled as if it had been the first helping. On Sunday afternoon, Camp Stoneman, at Pittsburg, (Calif.) sent down about 100 men. They ate their suppers, and after a musical engagement at one of the local churches, returned for a late bite. They all left with a mince or pumpkin pie.

The club is indebted to the canteen committee for its untiring efforts to bring joy to the hearts of the men. They never seem to tire in their efforts to please the men.

The club gratefully acknowledges the contribution of the ladies of the Hospitality house, at 660 13th street, through Mrs. Lyons, for the many turkeys and pies which they so graciously sent the men visiting the club. They made a lot of men know that they had friends in Oakland; friends who always remember them.

We received a letter the other day, from a fellow serviceman, who chanced to pass this way. He wrote to the chairman of one of our committees. It is the "Letter of the Week." We want to share it with our readers:

Dear Friend:

I am writing just to say I really enjoyed my little stay in Oakland and at the De Fremery, but it was a short and limited one. I only pray to God that our soldiers and sailors will only be gentlemen and realize how important it is to have a place as fine as the one you have there for us boys. And I am sure if they have ever been in any of the USOs other than the one here they will find them quite different.

I am hoping and praying that you will always be able to keep up the fine work, so when the boys are a long way from home they can always drop in where they are welcomed as we are when we are at home. My only regrets are that I had to leave so soon.

Remember me to the entire staff.

May God ever smile upon all of you and keep us all in guidance.

I remain
Sincerely and respectfully yours,
Pvt. William F. Stanley.

SAYS CLUB IS BUILDING MORALE

The commanding officer of one of our neighboring camps writes of the work of the club as follows:

"Each time the USO holds one man away from the saloon, the gambling house or the brothel, it renders a service for which some mother, wife or sister should give thanks.

"Each time it gives an evening of happy relaxation in wholesome atmosphere to a group of our men, we officers of the army recognize a major contribution to morale, and we give thanks.

"The De Fremery USO club, at 1651 Adelone street, in Oakland, does these things, and much more that is good.

"Very truly yours,
"John H. Sherman
"Lieutenant Colonel, QMC,
"Commanding."

It will be held on the evening of Dec. 10, at the Jewish Community center, at 724 14th street, Oakland. The dance will be limited to the capacity of the hall. Each man's dances will be rationed. The hostesses must be conserved, if they are to last for the duration.

Announcement is made of the completion of the board of managers. It is a bi-racial board, composed of outstanding men and women of both races. They are planning a great program.

"CAPTAIN" J. RAYMOND HENDERSON and his good ship "S. S. Booker T. Washington." The photo was taken during the recent All States Tea at famous Second Baptist church, of which the Rev. Henderson is minister. This replica of the liberty ship, recently launched, and captained by Hugh Mulzac, was a feature of the very successful church affair.

'All States Tea' at Second Baptist Church Called 'Grand Affair'

One of the most outstanding affairs of the season was the presentation of the annual "All States Tea" which was held Friday evening, November 27, at the Second Baptist Church.

Mrs. Vassie D. Reese, served as president of the affair, she is the clerk, financial secretary of the Second Baptist Church and is connected with a number of worthwhile civic movements, and is well known in the city for many affairs promoted through her leadership with the Booster Club of the church. Mrs. Reese is the originator of the All States Tea and should be commended for the financial success she has had during the years she has been promoted. This year the All States Tea netted $1,500.00. This year's winner was none other than the state of Texas, under the fine leadership of Miss Emma Esther Murphy, who served as Governor, raising $270.00. Miss Murphy's name will be engraved on a Silver Loving Cup, also the name of the state. This is the third consecutive time that Texas has won. Coming in second place was the state of Louisiana, Governored by Mrs. Attealia James, who received the second award, bringing in $168.00. The third winner was Mr. A. L. Jenkins of Georgia, who brought in $114.00.

An outstanding program was presented in the auditorium of the church, with Mrs. Anna G. Morow, program chairman. A capacity crowd enjoyed the numbers from the different section. Mrs. Morrow deserves much credit, for the program was unusual, in that it was presented from the deck of a replica of the S. S. Booker T. Washington ship which was on the pulpit. The Rev. J. Raymond Henderson attired in a complete naval outfit acted as captain of the ship and staged the launching. The ship was constructed by Messrs. Virgil Morrow, Robert Manning and Edgar Lester, others assisting were Mr. and Mrs. Ben Vaughn, Mrs. Mary Barfield, Elizabeth Manning, Vodray Henry. Mrs. Geneva Bass Moore served as accompanist for the evening.

After the program there was a parade of states downstairs to the social hall where exhibits of the various booths of the states were seen. The booths were so attractively decorated until it was difficult to state which were the most outstanding; however, in first places were Arizona, with it senormous cactus, Harriett Robinson, Governor. Pennsylvania, portraying coal in the winter and beautiful flowers in the summer. Maps and pamphlets of the state were given to hundreds of people, which had been sent from the commonwealth of Pennsylvania for distribution through the courtesy of its governor, also a film of outstanding places, reached us just to late to be shown. Mrs. Lillian Webster was the governor. In second places were California, featuring airplanes and pottery made by Indians with Mrs. Ester Beck, governor. Oklahoma with its oil wells, Pearl Smith, govenor, honorable mention; Tennessee, Florida, Alabama, Georgia, Arkansas and Indiana, who also gave out pamphlets of 101 reasons why you should visit Indiana. Ohio was outstanding with a large yellow plater with the seal of Ohio painted on it. This year the All States Tea was bigger and better because of the kindness of the governors of various states who sent literature, maps, etc.

Another impressive sight was the White House where refreshments were served, it was headed by Mrs. Hassie Reed. Young girls who were classified as NYA girls acted as usherettes. This group was headed by Ms. Arbezine Walder. Mrs. Rose Weaver headed the rationing board where sandwiches and coffee were served. M. A. B. Williams was responsible for the interior decorations in the social hall.

Members of the cabinet were vice-president, Katheryn Graham, Chalmers Gaithers, sec'y; treasurer, E. W. Fisher; the Victory Army, Mrs. V. J. Dunlap; publicity, Miss Doris Young; Speaker of the House, Mrs. Charlotta A. Bass; Governors: P. L. Walton, Georgia Banks, Hattie Eldridge, Hariette Henderson, Viola Anderson, Beatrice Spaulding, Eva S. James, Alments Brown, Anna Mae Livingston, Della Meredith, Ethel Holt, Julia Lee, Edward Jones, L. M. Ervin, Mildred Taylor, Gladys Stewart, D. F. Mabry, Mattie Hurd, Edith Rankins, W. P. McCalpin, Annie Graham, Parl Gallerson, Edna Savage, Lydia Hilton, Drucilla Tolbert, Margaret Pett, Aurora Banks, Cora Dillingham, Charlotta A. Bass. Visiting governors under the leadership of Mrs. Ida Robertson were Abbie McCollum, Beatrice Dixon, Marion Evans, Tillie Baker, LaGula Shaw, Marie Winfrey, Mary Kitt and Leola Wilson.

KRYL SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA THRILLS SPELMAN AUDIENCE

ATLANTA, Ga., Dec. 11.—The large 30-piece Kryl Symphony orchestra, under the direction of its celebrated conductor, Bohumir Kryl, played before a capacity house last Thursday in Sisters chapel, Spelman college, in the course of its 38th annual nationwide tour.

The audience, delighted with the presentation, gave hearty applause, and the musicians graciously responded with five encores.

This was the third appearance of the famous Kryl orchestra on the campus and from the warmth of the reception, it was by far the best received. In spite of the fact that the war has made serious inroads into Mr. Kryl's organization, the conductor has been able to continue his fine performances by adding talented young women to his orchestra. At the present time the orchestra is in large part, a woman's ensemble.

Dr. Watkins, Dentist, Robbed

Things really go on after hours now-a-days, but if you are on guard as Dr. Watkins was Dec. 4, you'll catch them. By the flashlight of some robber's, Dr. Watkins was awakened at 1.50 a. m.

By turning the key in the door of his room two robbers attempted to rob Dr. Watkins but he was prety smart by firing his gun, however, the robbers did get away with the Doctor's pants containing $100 and some checks, also a purse from his daughter's rom containing he glasses and records.

Calling the police to the residence found that the robbers wore gloves and left no finger prints, nevertheless, the officers did give Dr. Watkins the credit for firing his gun when he did.

BILL OF RIGHTS WEEK PROCLAIMED

Los Angeles' Mayor Fletcher Bowron proclaimed December 12th to December 19th as Bill of Rights week to commemorate the 151st anniversary of the signing of this historic American document, which was signed December 15, 1791. Picture above at the signing of the proclamation are left to right: Federal Judge Paul J. McCormick, Senior Judge of the United States District Court, Joe Crail, Los Angeles County Bill of Rights Commemoration Committee Chairman, Mayor Bowron, Minor Moore and B. Rey S. Schauer, Judges of the District Court of Appeals and Superior Court Judge Walter Desmond.

McDonough New Head of Supervisors

Supervisor Gordon L. McDonough will direct the government of the Los Angeles County as chairman of the Board of Supervisors as a result of his election Tuesday as chairman of Los Angeles County Board.

Representing this district--the Second Supervisorial district--since his appointment in August, 1933, Supervisor McDonough has been a consistent advocate of efficient service in County government and economical operation.

His election as chairman is recognized as a tribute to his capabilities as a goernmental official and his accomplishments for the betterment of Los Angeles County.

Following his election Supervisor McDonough declared that it is his intentions to utilize all resources in this County for the successful prosecution of the war effort, and in his statement of aceptance he so promised the President and pledged the continued support of this county.

Supervisor McDonough also said: "We must not lose sight of the fact that the services which assure health and safety and general welfare of the people must be continued during this emergency because these services are more essential today than ever before."

To the taxpayers McDonough promised that he would continue his fights for economic operation in county government and to the needy and unfortunate he said that he would also continue his policies and proposals that the Board of Supervisors must give every assistance possible to those who need the assistance of the County.

Cafe Loses Jim Crow Case

In the case of Frederica Garrot, Florence Johnson, Tervalone George and Urban Grass, the motion of the defendant cafe for a new trial was denied by the Hon. Chales Newell Carns, in Division 19 of the Municipal court. The case was tried before a jury in Division 19 on the 30th day of October, 1942, and all of the jurors were women of the white race. The defendants in question are the owners and operators of the Q and Q Grill, on East 7th Street.

The gravemen of the argument of counsel was based upon a recent decision of the Municipal Judge, Ray Brockman, who declined ot award damages for the discrimination against a Negro in a liquor store. It is likewise, to be remembered that Judge Brockman, after two juries had decided in favor of Attorney Posey, for discrimination, had seen fit to philosiphyzed upon the subject, decide the case against Attorney Posey, even as he saw fit to decide the case, sitting without a jury, in the liquor house case.

It is exceedingly significant to note, however, the impending slide of prejudice ,and the particular fact that there are still a few judges and many jurors whose minds are leveled in accord with the rapidly changing social world.

I think that we, and each of us, should do our utmost best to promote, even in our small way, such eminent jurists as the Honorable Judge Charles Newell Carns, to the highest judiciary in this our beloved state.

The echoes of the Honorable E. Burton Ceruti, who tried the most famous Civil rights case in the State of California, rang loud, this morning. Attorney E. C. Jennings, likewise did well in his case. But the distinguished law firm of Griffith and Griffith enjoys the credit of having written the first law of the Supreme Court of this state on the subject of the civil rights for Negroes.

In the event that Judge Brockman should return to the private practice of law, he may well read these decisions and find, even as most good lawyers have found, that a law prohibiting discrimination, whether said discrimination may have been in a liquor house, restaurant, dance hall, golf course, club house or in the forum where fast and wild horses run, if not wrong unreasonable unconstitutional.

This is a time when all men born free and equal are as equal as they were when they were born.

Hooray, for Judge Carns. And may he live as long as Methuselah and be as happy as the mocking birds in Texas.

RIKER BLAMES ARREST ON FATHER DIVINE

preached racial hatred.

Testimony at the opening day of the trial before Federal Judge A. F. St. Sure, whose courtroom was packed by more than 200 spectators including several members of Riker's religious clan at Holy City, Calif., included:

1—Second Lieut. Cherril Hannon, who said Riker asked him to post literature at Moffett field advocating the United States make peace with Hitler. Hannon testified Riker said Hitler had "something on the bail," that the Nazi treatment of the Jews "shows understanding of life" and that "we must make slaves of the Negroes and Orientals."

2—Corp. Lyle B. Whitehair of army intelligence, who visited Holy City June 18, said Riker told him he had communicated with the Nazis and that Hitler had "used some of my ideas." Riker allegedly said England would lose the war.

3—A secretary to Hitler replied to one of Riker's letters regarding the race problem that "your ideas are some of the best we've seen," acording to Robert E. Lanctot, FBI agent.

4—Riker showed Corp. Paul F. Black a diagram of the human body, representing "humanity," in which the white race ruled the heart and stomach—"the most important parts"; the Jews controlled the head, the Orientals the arms and the Negroes the legs.

Riker, Black asserted, said whites should not fight whites and that the Axis and the United States should make peace. "If I were president, the war would be over in three weeks," Black quoted Riker.

Assistant United States Atty. William Licking introduced several pamphlets into evidence purporting to show that Riker advocated the supremacy of the white race and servitude of the Negroes and Orientals.

The jury of six men and six women was promised a treat when, at Riker's request, St. Sure issued a subpoena ordering "Father" (Peace It's Wonderful) Divine, Negro religious cult leader, to appear as witness December 10. Riker, who claims to be the "Wise Man of the West," asserted that Divine claimant to the title of "Wise Man of the East" had made him the victim of "criminal libel."

Riker alleged in an affidavit filed in court that Father Divine, who heads a large religious cult in New York city's Harlem, was esponsible for his arrest.

Used Cars Sought for Women Aircraft Workers

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 11.—With women expected to comprise 60 per cent of the southern California aircraft industry personnel by spring, the State Council of Defense today advocated that these women workers be supplied with used cars for their transportation to and from work.

The State Council will ask the Office of Defense Transportation to procure used cars in good condition to transport women aircraft employes on a group-riding basis.

Transportation, already a serious problem in the state, is especially critical for aircraft workers, the council pointed out. Most of the plants are located outside established bus and street car lines and existing transportation facilities cannot be expanded to meet increased demands.

Since few present or prospective women employes on their own cars, solution of their transportation problem must be forthcoming, the State Defense body declared.

Soldiers See That Dixie Kiddies Have Happy Xmas

SIOUX FALLS, S. D., Dec. 11.—Negro children of the South are going to have a happy Christmas, says $1,200 collected last pay day by soldiers of the Negro 85th Aviation Squadron stationed at the Sioux Falls, S. D., Air Forces Technical school.

1st Sgt. Horace L. Kee may soon be speeding South with the money, for Col. N. L. Cote, commanding officer of the post, has requested authority from the War Department to dispatch him by military plane to Tuskegee, Ala., where the gift will be presented to F. D. Patterson, president of the famous Negro university there, for distribution to distressed Negro families.

Aware of the wartime needs of southern Negroes, increased by the dislocation of manpower, the squadron voluntarily "chipped in" an average of five dollars per man.

It is expected that a reply to the request to fly Sgt. Kee to Tuskegee will be received from Washington shortly.

★ 'My Brother's Keeper'

By MARGARET HANEY

Attention American Citizens:

Have you heard the latest program that comes on the radio every Sunday morning from 10:45-11:15 Station KFOX? Well you really miss a treat, our own little Johnnie Kinloch is one of the announcers along with Sylman Pasternak. It's only on the fine side. All of you folk who don't get there to the 11 o'clock service at least take time to turn over and dial KFOX. Take it fom me you won't regret it.

Two Sundays ago John interviewed some of the members from the Mexican Youth Council which was very inspiring. Also this past Sunday there appeared on there Obie Bartlett, Calship employee who does his bit for our Uncle Sam with the use of one arm, that goes to show you what our Negro boys can do even though handicapped.

May Mr. Kinloch and his associates have all the luck and happiness with their program.

It is time our young people know whats going on in the world since the great blow has hit us. We are now living in a time when we young people should prepare ourselves for the things of tomorrow htat are in store for us.

I think John and Sylvan deserve every bit of encouragement, one is able to give.

oNt only in radio work is John doing a great part for the young people but also in private life, he is a very efficient president for the Junior Council of the NAACP, a very good newspaper man, and a swell fellow just to know. Keep up John old boy some of these days I'll vote you Gov. for the State of California and if we meet in the South I'll vote you Senator of Mississippi.

Our bravest and best lessons are not learned through success, but through misadventure.—A. Bronson Alcott.

Owenses Will Attend Institute of World Affairs

Invited to attend the Institute of World Affairs, which convenes in Riverside Sunday, Dec. 13, and which is sponsored by the Los Angeles University of International Relations, of which Chancellor R. B. von KleinSmid of the University of Southern California is head, was John H. Owens, corresponding secretary of the Los Angeles Forum, and former assistant clerk to U. S. Senator Medill McCormick who was a prominent member of the Senate Foreign Relations committee, and Mrs. Christeale L. Owens, accredited delegate to interracial conventions in both Chicago and New York just before America's entry in the war.

The importance of this institute at the present time is due to the fact that Africa, India, China and the South and Central American nations bulk large in the settlement of questions of democracy at the conclusion of the present conflict and all these nations are composed of predominantly dark-skinned peoples.

Africa and India especially are playing a very important part at the present time since it appears that the "second front" is being fought out on the sands of Africa, rather than in Europe, and the continent of Africa may become the springboard for reconquering Europe.

Since both Mr. and Mrs. Owens are Negroes it is well that they attentively scan the proceedings of this convention in preparation for the final peace conclave to see if these delegates are sincerely interested in the upgrading of races now regarded as secondary or if there is to be a continuation of the old "status quo" which practiced oppression against large sections of the populations of various nations.

FEPC Tells D. C. Transit Co. to Halt Discrimination

Committee on Fair Employment Practice this week directed the company to bring its employment policy into line with executive order 8802, requiring that there shall be no discrimination against war workers because of their race, creed, color or nation origin.

Announcement was made here by Clarence Johnson, regional Negro Employment Director.

"In the light of all the facts, and in keeping with its duty to redress grievances which it finds to be valid, the committee called upon the Capital Transit Company to take seven steps to bring its employment practice in line with the national policy as expressed in executive order 8802—the seven directions are:

1. Issue formal instructions to all of your personnel officers and employees to recruit, employ, train or upgrade prospective workers or workers solely on the basis of the qualifications of applicants or workers without regard to their race, creed, color, national origin or citizenship.

2. Issue formal instructions to the appropriate officer of your company to delete from its application for employment form any reference to race or religion which may be included in it.

3. 6. Furnish the President's Committee on Fair Employment Practice with a copy of each of these instructions and notices on or before December 5.

7. Submit a monthly report beginnig December 1, 1942, indicating the number of Negroes employed, the number in employment at skill levels, skilled, semi-skilled and unskilled, the number in employment as bus and street car operators, and similar statistics covering white workers.

Get your heart into your wohk, whatever it may be, for work without heart is dead.

Call Mass Meet Here Sunday

for rent here. War workers are foced to inhabit hundreds of Eastside homes which have been condemned by the City Health department.

Further, through deed restrictions a legal trick by which independent sellers and buyers place anti-Negro clauses in property sale papers), Negro workers are denied housing available in communities close to the factories at which they are employed. Thus, in a majority of cases, Negro workers must travel almost two hours to reach their places of employment. Not only is the workers' efficiency impaired but the city's bulging transportation problem recklessly expanded.

QUOTA SYSTEM MUST GO

According to the admission of the City Planning Director and Councilman Karl Rasmussen last Monday, the City and Federal Authorities operate under a quota system for Negroes. The Negro "quota" in all housing projects has been filled. Yet there is available housing in a number of them! That is, Negro war workers ARE TODAY being forced to inhabit rat-infested condemned property while Housing units remain unoccupied!

Sunday's mass meeting will also focus community attention upon the Los Angeles Railway Company, whose continued policy of refusing to hire Negroes as motormen or conductors ranks as one of the most glaring of refusals to obey the President Executive Order 8802. The whole city is forced to suffer because L. A. Railway clings to its ante-bellum race notions, say mass meet leaders. It is pointed out that only 1500 workers have been secured in the transit system to fill 2400 jobs. Eight cars are not operating on the 'U' car line alone manpower shortages.

That the L. A. Railway is in its last legs in this policy was indicated by the action of the FEPC in a similar case in Washington, D. C.

In Memoriam

In memory of my darling mother, Levirgin Virginia Parry, who departed this life Dec. 10, 1939.

A precious one from us is gone. A voice we loved is still. A place vacant in our home, that never can be filled. God in His wisdom hath recalled the boom His love hath given, and though the body slumbers here, her soul is safe in Heaven.

"Gone but not forgotten."

Storekeeper Hits Axis Propaganda

By MARTINEZ HEWLETT

When Alex Folb, storekeeper at Santa Barbara and Wall streets, opened his store Monday morning he beheld a sight which made his staunch soul quiver.

Now, Mr. Folb is a mild mannered Jewish fellow and it was our contention at the time we saw him that something intensely disturbing must have created the shocked expression which we observed on his face.

What he saw was something which has stirred the hearts of many honest men like him and sent them away seething with white-hot rage. There on the sidewalk in front of his store, right where everyone could see it, in large letters, was a sign. Not just an ordinary sign, but one that almost brought tears to the eyes of Mr. Folb.

Member of a persecuted and oppressed race, brother in misery to the Negro people, he saw on the sidewalk the words, "WE DO NOT HIRE NEGROES HERE." To the unsuspecting public this might mean that Alex Folb did not or would not hire Negroes. This might mean that Alex Folb was a race baiter, a Negro hater and worse of all, a Fascist.

But is this the case? Let's look at the situation from a logical point of view. First of all, 75% of Mr. Folb's patronage is colored. Why should he, in any sense, economically or otherwise, create a situation that would ruin his livelihood. Secondly, Mr. Folb is a small business man and he and his family run the store. It is needless to state here how small businesses are suffering during this emergency, especially the food business. But with all of this Mr. Folb had need of a delivery boy and gladly offered the job to a colored boy in the neighborhood.

This offer of employment to the colored lad was not one of appeasement for his colored patrons but sprung from a feeling of deep understanding. Victim of persecution and discrimination, whose people are goats for the Fascist altar, Alex Folb knows full well the problems of the Negro people.

Then if Alex Folb did not, and we know that he couldn't have painted the letters on the sidewalk, then, who did? And why? It might appear that some frustrated colored person might have, but where is the percentage? What possible good could an attack have on such a small business, in a neighborhood where everyone knows everyone else. Then we must probe deeper. On the surface it only appears that this is a sign of the times. That Negroes are demanding recognition.

As it was pointed out above, there was no motive that might lie behind such an act by a Negro. Again, who and why?

We must first answer the question why.

The ever increasing unity between Jewish and Negro people is a dangerous threat to the Axis and to the American Fascists. Welded into one fighting unit, with the same aims and purposes, the Negro and Jewish people would prove just as effective against the Axis as a squadron of Flying Fortresses.

A campaign of Anti-Semitism among the Negro people would serve a very delicate purpose for the American Fascist. Such a campaign would becloud the true issues facing the Negro people today. The day by day formulation of mass action against the forces of Fascism is another grave danger to the Axis.

Then, too, we must consider that old Axis adage, divide and conquer. The lettering on the sidewalk in front of Mr. Folb's store is just such a divisionist move.

Who would benefit most by creating discord, and disunity between the Jewish and Negro people?

What group could carry on their vicious plan if the Negro people were stirred up with Anti-Semitic propaganda?

Who would conquer if the American people were divided?

The Axis. The Fascists. Hitler, arch enemy of civilization.

To the Negro people: Don't be misled. Be careful. Study the situation. Try to learn the facts. We have been the scapegoats of fascism for too long. And now we have a chance to fight it. Let's keep fighting.

To the Jewish people, like Alex Folb and his family, who have dedicated their lives to a never ending battle against our common enemy at home and abroad: Keep fighting, the end is near.

To all people: Fascism is making its last stand and every foul plan that it can conceive will be brought to bear on the people of the world. Stay in the battle until it is won. Know your allies.

As Alex Folb said, "I know what Fascism is. I hear it, see it and feel it every day of my life. The Negro people are my friends. Ours is the same struggle. My help in this fight will come from the Negro people."

Langston, PV Will Meet New Year's

By R. W. HILLIARD

PRAIRIE VIEW, Tex., Dec. 11.—According to an announcement by Dr. E. B. Evans, director of athletics at Prairie View, he has been fortunate in securing Langston as the opponent for Prairie View in the annual New Year's Day classic to be played in Houston, Tex.

The Langston Lions and the Prairie View Panthers played a thriller in Oklahoma City the night of Nov. 21 with Prairie View taking the contest, 13-12, thanks to some fancy running by Jack Finley and "Tommy" Tucker and some pass snatching by the great Panther left end, Frank Robinson, hailed by some to be the greatest wingman to perform at Prairie View since Henry Staton and other greats.

Zip Gayles' tricky Lions lost only one other game in a heavy schedule and that was to the Southwest Conference champions—the undefeated Texas College Steers. Sam Taylor's charges lost to Texas college, 6-0, for their only defeat of the season.

Necessity is always the first stimulus to industry, and those who conduct it with prudence, perseverance, and energy will rately fail. —Smiles.

"Be not thou envious against evil men, neither desire to be with them: For their heart studieth destruction, and their lips talk of mischief." Prov. 24:1-2.

People's Fight for Victory

Take the fight to the people!

This was the overwhelming determination of a round-table emergency meeting of community leadership which gathered Monday night to chart a new offensive for win-the-war activities of the Negro people here.

A mass meeting was called by the representative leadership body for Sunday night at 8 p. m. at the First AME church Eighth and Towne avenue.

Two major objectives of this new marshalling of community pressure will be all-out battles against housing restrictions in the city and anti-Negro employment policy of the Los Angeles Railway company.

Pressing urgency of the need for a radical change in the housing situation of the city was shown in the case of a Negro mother, employed in vital aircraft production. Her husband is physically disabled. There are six children. They live in a dilapidated, rat infested (some as large as cats), bed-bug ridden, house at 1000½ E. 55th street. The place has been condemned by the City Health Depatrment. But for the last FIFTEEN DAYS there has not been a house for rent within the Negro ghetto (the area in which Negroes may legally live: 5 per cent of Los Angeles).

This mother, faced with the revolting spectacle of rats devouirng her children's shoes, appealed for housing in the Pico Gardens Federal Housing Project. Though VACANCIES existed, she was denied because the Negro quota had been filled!

This is not an isolated case. The Eastside is largely populated today by workers vital to the war effort. The bulk of people living in the Negro ghetto are essential to the production of arms to lick Hitler. This vast, vital working group, faced with gas rationing, find themselves removed BY MILES from the aircraft factories and shipyards at which they labor for America's victory. Because of the ridiculous racial proscription of real estate business-as-usual, these thousands are bottled up in a community which is the center of the worst slum area in Los Angeles. They are forced to jam our transport lines with daily migrations to distant factories often requiring more than two hours, one-way! Further, these men and women, whose ability to produce is the fundamental of Los Angeles' war production, are crammed into areas of limited sanitary facilities and into rat infested homes which are a threat to the health of the whole city.

Housing restrictions are a peace-time racket operated by unscrupulous real estate interests in order to extort high rents for inferior dwellings from Negroes. To exist, this racket must exploit the vilest race animosities of backward whites. In time of total, global, war-for-survival, the restrictions sabotage:

1—Defense production.

2—Defense transportation.

3—Defense housing.

4—Workers' health.

5—National unity.

The organized anti-Negro propaganda bureaus used by realty boards to rouse race hate in so-called white communities as a means of perpetrating the restriction racket are as effective Hitlerite organs as anything in Der Fuehrer's own bag of tricks. One and all, these saboteurs of victory should be shut up, exposed and, if necessary--jailed.

Sunday's mass meeting will serve as the entering wedge of the campaign to smash Los Angeles' housing restrictions.

Mobilization in an all-out effort to batter down the defeatist bars raised against the employment of Negroes by the Los Angeles Railway company will be a second important consideration of Sunday's mass meeting.

A full throated DEMAND that the poweful siege guns of the Fair Employment Practice Committee be turned upon the transportation firm will be voiced.

The position of the LARY amounts to nothing less than sabotage--open sabotage-- of the war effort. While thousands of man hours are lost in this city due to the shortage of transportation workers, the company maintains racial bars in direct violation of a war emergency order by the nation's commander-in-chief. The street car and bus lines of Los Angeles are vital arteries through which virtually the city's entire manpower must flow. At the very moment of its greatest test, scores of cars and busses are removed from service in Los Angeles because of manpower shortwhich could be immediately corrected thourgh simple compliance. Yes. Sabotage ages which could be immediately corrected through simple compliance with the President's executive order outlawing job discrimination against racial minorities in industries vital to the war effort. Yes. Sabotage is the word.

Watch for Xmas Number

Next week the California EAGLE goes to press with its annual Christmas edition, one of the traditional events of the community's yuletide.

This year, our newspaper will greet you with an unprecedented Chirstmas display.

It is within the last twelve months, we believe, that this publication has rendered the clearest service to its community of its 63 year history. We believe that to a degree unequalled by any Los Angeles publication we have recognized the progressive, anti-fascist nature of the war. We believe it has been correctly analyzed in our columns as the gigantic, determining factor in the struggle for Negro liberation in America and the freedom of peoples all over the world.

Of no less importance is the fact that in order to secure victory, in the military as well as political sense, radical changes in United Nations policy must be made. We contend that the extension of democratic rights to Negroes in America is a vital war necessity not alone on the basis of "justice" or for the welding of national unity but as a means of winning the war through the direct, political annihilation of those defeatist forces in the Congress of the United States which are the friends of Hitler, the enemies of the whole American people, and the sinister phalanx of fascist invasion.

Having recognized, first, that this is a progressive war, and (2)—that radical changes in the position of Negroes in America is vital to the winning of this progressive war, we have urged, more than this, we have participated in a militant, offensive effort to secure those changes of policy.

At great expense, this newspaper devoted the bulk of its news columns and editorials to the recent anti-poll tax fight, which still ranks as the basic home front task of the Negro people and win-the-war forces generally.

In Los Angeles, we believe a direct, frontal attack upon housing restrictions is vital to war production. That direct, frontal attack will be made.

We have recognized the natural allies of Negro America. In every case, they are the important win-the-war sections of U. S. political life. Aid to the struggle of Negro America is, in fact, an infallible test of the extent of war support on the part of any individual, class or group of Americans. There is the President of the United States. There is Wendell Willkie. There is the labor movement, especially its Congress of Industrial Organizations. On the other hand, the enemies of United Nations' victory, are the very saboteurs of national unity and the fight of Negro America. Witness the reactionary Republican section of Congress and its new bed-fellow, the defeatist poll-tax South. Witness Messrs. Hearst, Roy Howard, McCormick and Patterson of the newspapers.

There lies ahead a year of great, decisive warfare. We Negroes stand in the forefront of that battle, a politically conscious, tremendously powerful element of America's progressive, win-the-war forces. As in the Civil War, it is our job to hold the front-line positions of American progress.

Tighten Our Belts

Los Angeles county Defense Council got into the second year of the war with over 16,000 people enrolled in its services and with the problem of morale heading the list of problems to be tackled during the coming year, according to Harold W. Kennedy, executive director.

"Civilian Defense is more than just a system of protecting the lives and porperty of our people," Kennedy said. It offers a realistic program for handling the entire war effort. There is much to be done now in the matter of building morale which will serve as a cushion against the impact of war. Right now we are going through a period of food shortages and rationing. We must tighten our belts and take these things in stride and move on to the bigger aspects of the over-all war effort."

"It's your own fault. I keep tellin' you stop kiddin' Bootsie about his draft board."

★ SPEECH OF THE WEEK

(Speech of FERDINAND C. SMITH, secretary, National Maritime Union, CIO, at Tom Paine Forum, Philadelphia, Dec. 6.

I am very happy to be here tonight, on this eve of the anniversary of Pearl Harbor, and speak to a forum bearing so illustrious a name as Tom Paine.

Tom Paine has always been one of my favorite American heroes. He was a fearless skirmisher on the outposts of democracy. He was a delegate-at-large in the cause of human rights.

The slaveholders hated him because he was an abolitionist; the wealthy and aristocratic hated him because he was a democrat; the churchmen hated him because he was unorthodox. Their attacks blackened his name and reputation and for a long time he was revered only by the obscure men and women whose unrelenting energies in the face of oppression build democratic governments.

His zeal cost him dearly in reputation. The tories hunted him in packs. His books were burned. He was regarded as worse than a felon because he was more dangerous. Snooty John Adams dubbed him "the filthy Tom Paine," a phrase that stuck like a burr to his reputation. But, at middle age, after an apparently shipwrecked life during which he was twice removed from the office of excise-man for what today would be regarded as union activity, Tom Paine's pen provided the exhortation and clarity that spurred the American Revolutionists to victory.

Tom Paine believed in a People's War. He believed in the kind of war we are fighting today. No mere idle spectator was he when history was on the march. When the French people were stirred to revolt against the despotism of King Louis, Tom Paine went to France to participate in that struggle.

I think we can say that he would have been a potent force in all of the great people's movements.—not only the American and French Revolutions, but the Latin American revolutions of the Bolivian era, the German revolution of 1848, and the Russian revolution of 1918. Each spoke for the common man in terms of blood on his battlefield. What Tom Paine worked for was described so well by Vice President Wallace in his historic "Common Man" speech when he said "The people's revolution aims at peace, not at violence."

From what we know of Tom Paine, we can safely say that he would not have weaseled in 1932 when the Japanese invaded Manchuria. He would have done all he could to stop Mussolini from bringing Fascist "civilization" to Ethiopia. He would have fought in the ranks of the 3,000 members of our Union and the thousands of other anti-Fascists who went to Spain to try to make Madrid the tomb of Fascism.

. . . We in the labor movement have at our conventions and at our meetings and in our speeches urged:

(a) The efficient and democratic planning of our total production effort;

(b) An orderly and democratically administered system of allocation of raw materials;

(c) Maximum production of needed raw materials;

(d) Full utilization of scrap in all forms;

(e) Maximum avoidance of waste and useful, practical substitutes for scarce materials so that there will be an end to shut-downs and curtailment of production;

(f) Unified control through the management-labor policy committee of the Manpower Commission, of allocation of manpower as between the fighting forces and production forces so as to put an end to the existing confusion between the policies of the War Manpower Commission and Selective Service;

In this regard let me tell you that Selective Service has taken from the ranks of the active merchant marine men more than 500 seamen and has put them into the Army. At the same time the Government is scouring the country trying to recruit new manpower into the merchant marine. It is a case of the left hand not knowing what the right hand is doing and the war effort is suffering as a result.

(g) We strongly urge the establishment of a single national government production authority in which labor and the employers will have equal status with full responsibilities for planning and policy on these production questions and the authority needed to carry the plans and policy into action;

(h) We recommend the establishment of a sound, total economic program so that problems arising out of wages, taxes, prices, profits and rationing issues may no longer interfere with maximum war production.

The trade union movement has said much about the need for greater labor participation in the councils of government. One year after Pearl Harbor it is now recognized, for example, that the maritime industry is a frontline adjunct of our armed forces. Unless we kept a constant bridge of ships across the ocean carrying supplies and foodstuffs to our fighting men and the fighting men of our Allies, it is recognized that we cannot win this war. This bridge of ships has been maintained, but it was not erected by accident. A day after Pearl Harbor the NMU in a telegram to the United States Maritime Commission asked for a conference of the maritime unions and the shipowners and Government to work out an effective program of stabilization of the industry covering the movements of vessels, servicing, training, and general conditions.

To this conference the NMU presented a constructive war program calling for the arming of all merchant vessels, increased crews in the interest of safety, proper inspection and servicing of lifeboats and more efficient training program in Maritime Commission schools, training of seamen in gunnery and first aid, maintenance of collective bargaining contracts, adequate check-up of personnel and proper handling of foreign seamen.

As a result of this meeting President Roosevelt established the Maritime War Emergency Board, and this was followed by the creation of the War Shipping Administration to coordinate the twelve agencies which at that time were handling maritime problems.

To further increase our efficiency and to prevent unnecessary loss of lives or cargoes, the Union presented a safety-at-sea program which has been largely adopted, and has resulted in the preservation of valuable manpower and supplies.

Commending the Union on the good work it had done, Vice Admiral Russell R. Waesche, commandant of the U. S. Coast Guard, in a wire to the Union said:

"Analysis of casualties recently completed shows decreasing loss of life as a direct result of improved equipment and drills."

We recognized from the very beginning that the Union's responsibility in this war was a great one, that any lives, or any cargoes lost unnecessarily, were sabotage of our war effort. We opened in our union hall a safety-at-sea exhibit which contained the latest safety apparatus. We invited to it young men who are now in the Maritime Commission training schools, men who have recently entered the merchant marine and seamen of long standing who may not have been familiar with the use of the latest equipment. That exhibit was so successful that we are now transferring it to Philadelphia. Some time this week we expectt it to open at the Franklin Institute, and I hope that all of you and your friends will find the time to visit the display and see for yourselves what the Union, the Government and the industry have worked out tfor the safety of the men who sail the seas.

President Roosevelt recently paid recognition to the splendid services which the merchant marine is playing in this war when he singled out one of our members, Edwin F. Cheney, and presented to him the first Distinguished Maritime Service medal in this war for heroic duty. Our men wear no uniforms and they seek no glory.

When swivel chair admirals like Admiral Land shoots his mouth off about shooting organizers at sunrise, we do not take time out to injure the war effort by fighting him. Instead we merely pointed out that hundreds of union organizers had already been shot at sunrise in the service of their country, and we pointed out, too, that when Admiral Land said we cannot defeat the submarine menace, he was in effect saying what Hitler was trying to make the American people believe for many months. The fact is that the U. S. Navy and the U. S. Coast Guard and the NMU members have done a good job in defeating the submarine menace. The ships lost today are much less than they ever have been in the past, and all of the attempts of Admiral Land and his friends to disrupt our national unity and to inject into our public life Hitler's propaganda will not meet with any success.

There are just a few other points for progressives that I would like to touch upon. One is the need for international labor cooperation. The post-war world which we envision is a world dominated not by America and Great Britain, but a world in which all nations, large and small, live together in harmony and in peace, and will have as the backbone of its structure the free labor movement of the United Nations. The bulk of its strength will have to come from the labor movement in this country, the Soviet Union, Great Britain, and all of us, I believe should work for the effective united action of the Anglo-American-Soviet trade union movement.

There's one other thing we can do. The fallacy of appeasing governments should be well known to all of us. Chamberlain tried it at Munich. We tried it with Japan. We tried it with Vichy. It never worked. We are still playing with Finland and with Spain. I think it is well known now that Finland is an Axis partner for kee and that France, while she may blow with the wind, is still one of Hitler's allies.

There can be no compromise is something else we recognize. We are taking steps.—concrete, constructive steps to remedy that.

This war will produce a measuring stick which labor will use judiciously,—but firmly. Each will be measured according to his participation in this war. Those with selfish interests will be taken care of by the brother of the common man whose life blood ran out fighting for a free world.

We can do things with this world. We can start with a program that:

Calls for the crushing of Fascism by the extension of our North African fighting front to the continent of Western Europe.

We must in no uncertain terms, give freedom, not promises, to those countries which so gallantly support us and have borne the brunt of oppression.—paternalistic or otherwise.—for so many years.

We must insist that the organized workers of the world.—who want no compromise with Fascism.—no negotiated peace.—be given the share of responsibility to which they are justly entitled in building this new world.

The people who, for their own pecuniary reasons, lied and misled the world about its most valuable friend,—the Soviet Union,—must be brought to justice.

The Clivedeners, the appeasers, the money-changers and imperialists must never again bring chaos, death and destruction to the world. The common man must win the peace. We can then make this the last world war.

The Four Freedoms can become a reality.

There can be a brotherhood of man.

WELCOME GUEST

After 25 years, Madame Chiang Kai-Shek is paying a visit to America. Although one purpose of her visit is to receive medical treatment, her illness will not prevent her from holding official conferences, nor from being a guest at the White House during her stay. Madame Chiang, as Mei-Ling Soong, graduated from Wellesley College in 1917 with high honors and the great respect of her class mates. Back in China, Madame Chiang belied all the rules for Chinese wives. Far from tiptoeing along behind her illustrious husband, the Generalissimo, she accompanied him on all military campaigns. It is even said that he makes no major decisions without first consulting her. She is the third leader of United Nations to visit the White House within the year—Prime Minister Winston Churchill and Soviet Commissar V. M. Molotov preceded her. Her American education, together with her native intellect, fit her to confer understandingly with American officials on matters of moment to both countries. Hers is a warm welcome.

ON TUNING IN

Igor Sikorsky, famous airplane designer, believes in intuition! Women have always valued their "hunches," but men have been somewhat inclined to suppose them sub-masculine! Mr. Sikorsky, engineering manager of the Vought-Sikorsky Aircraft Corp.; defines intuition as an ability to tune in, like a radio, on facts or laws not yet known. There was Galileo, for instance, who discovered the principles of dynamics from watching the arc of a swinging lamp. And there was Newton's falling apple, Ben Franklin's kite, and Fulton's steamboat. Mr. Sikorsky confesses he does not understand the exact basis of this kind of inventive genius, but feels it may become a new faculty of mankind which proper training could develop. Anyway, Mr. Sikorsky's version of it gives woman's intuition a new status the fair sex will enjoy!

NEW EL DORADO

Brighter sunshine? Higher mountains? Bigger flowers? More beautiful women? California has all these, but in the eleven months of war something new has been added. The Golden State is telescoping a possible decade of expansion and self-knowledge into two or three years, for with only 10% of the population of the country, we are producing 20% of the goods of war. Look around you! In the Bay Area, steel mills smoke busily, while blast furnaces redden the night sky in southern California. The state is top miner of tungsten, important in the production of magnesium, aluminum, plywood. These are only a few of the newly developing industries which prophesy us "economically self-sufficient after the war." The phenomenon of California's $2 billion branch banking system—the only one of its kind in the nation outside New York City—symbolizes the wealth of development our state has had. Such an institution means that in more than 300 communities, unlimited services are available for present and future experiment and expansion in industry. We're beginning to understand more fully our intrinsic worth, to appreciate California's unparalleled financial resources. After the war, this region's wealth in new mechanical energies, widely developed farms, increased home markets, must make it a focal point of the Pacific World. And in the meantime, its skies will grow no less blue, its women no less beautiful!

IN REVERSE

A sign seen in a grocery store in Dorchester, Mass. requests—"Please be kind to our employees. They are harder to get than customers." These days, the customer isn't always right!

GREMLINGS AGAIN?

You've heard about the Gremling? He's the wicked sprite who pesters British and American flyers, the brownie who sits on the controls when you make a bellyflop, or gets in your hair and keeps you from making a smooth landing. No sooner had the Gremling been adopted by the airmen, than they made up a "slanguage" to simplify the business of telling each other what's going on. The RAF joyously adopted "bellyflop" for a crash landing when the Americans took it to England—the word, not the landing! The American flyers took up "got a rocket" for a scolding, and "going around in a frost" for worrying. Your knife, fork and spoon are your "irons," and the "umbrella man" means a parachutist. "Brown job" means an army task while "blue job" signifies the navy. "Jimmy the one," that's a lieutenant! It's fun once you know what it means and puts a laugh in a day's work.

★ SPREADING JOY

with Fascism is a truth we long ago recognized. That labor has not received its full share of authority in its fight for freedom

By JOHN FOWLER

As the Yuletide Season Approaches I am thinking of the yesteryears and the neighborliness of the first comers of the long winter nights of the cheery fireside and the happy people who gathered there.

I am thinking of the Joe Green's comfortable front room. Mrs. Green's smiling face and motherly hospitality, and of the boys I first met there, of John Banks, Louis Young and Watson Burns and Little Morris. It was at the Greens I first met Bob Owens, then the popular play boy.

And the many Sunday afternoons and evenings we spent at the Talbots House on San Pedro street. Some of the boys and girls one was sure to meet there any Sunday afternoon were the following Laura Lucas, Ida Wilson, Blanche Geary, Minnie Prime, Nettie Ramsey, Florence Wieman, Mauriel Hoard, Charley Prince, Hans Turner, Will Gray, Jason Wilson, Grant Jackson, Edwin Johnson, Jordon Wessome, Helen Warner, Maurice Logan and many others.

Another mecca for the elite was the Reynolds home on Albany street, here most of the important parties were held; the one I seem to remember was the one that featured the then popular Cake Walk.

Some of those present were the Skauko's, the Owens, the Gilbert Lewis, the Charlie Lewis, the Garrotts, the Speigners, the Scott Jones, the Walkers, Laura and Bennie Talbot, Florence Alexander, Bertha Scott, Rose Spiers, Molsey Woods, Nannia Scott, Laura Lucas, Nettie Ramsey, May Ramsey, Pearl Cooper, Berdie Cooper, Florence Weiman, Nannie Hood and Ella Thornton.

Some of the boys were Dugene-Walker, J. L. Holt, Thilo Taylor, Laura Shores, Jim Alexander, Fred Roberts, Will Ricks, Charley Prince, Hans Turner, Garner Grayson, the writer and others.

So a fine salute to the Happy Coopers who have been married around forty years the mythical old sweethearts parade will take magic carpet trip over the state and pick up many of the old sweethearts we wish to honor.

Over the Ridge Route we fly to the first stop where we pick up Mr. and Mrs. Henry Houston and the Russells, thence to Fresno where the parade is joined by the William Bigleys our next stop is Stockton where the William Boyddins, join us thence to Sacramento, we pick up two popular old sweethearts, Harry and Mildred Johnson known and loved by every one in California from Sacramento the caravan moves to Oakland to be joined by many old sweethearts that you and I know they are the John Rivers, two old dears I love to know Mr. and Mrs. Luther Hudson, Mr. and Mrs. Lee Willis and Mr. and Mrs. James F. Jackson, sr., Mr. and Mrs. S. J. Duncan and Mr. and Mrs. George McCard.

Thence across the Bay to San Francisco where the old sweethearts parade is joined by Mr. and Mrs. Wiley M. Fowler, Mr. and Mrs. George Fisher, the parents of the Walter Gordons of Oakland.

To others not mentioned here I extend my heartiest good wishes.

If you remember anything that happened here in Los Angeles, Xmas fifty years ago come out to the meeting of the pioneers next Tuesday night, we are meeting with Mrs. Morgan at 1543 E. 48th street.

All Pioneers are welcome and expected.

HANFORD: I read in the paper that Mr. Herb Jeffries the movie actor would help an amateur song writer in getting their work over if there were possibilities. Would like very much to get in contact with him. Would you please give me his address.

Thank you.

Fortitude I take to be the quiet possession of a man's self, and an undisturbed doing his duty whatever evils beset, or dangers lie in the way.—John Locke.

Address, "INDIA AND THE WAR," delivered at the Pacific Town Club, Los Angeles, Nov. 19, by R. Lal Singh, editor, India News and member, Indian National Congress.

There still remains a great deal of confusion in the minds of many people regarding the Indo-British deadlock. The American press from the Atlantic seaboard to the Pacific coast, with some honored exceptions — notably the Negro press and leading labor and peoples' papers—has spread a volume of reasons that purport to prove India incapable of assuming the role of a full, free, and equal partner in the ranks of the United Nations.

In the attempt to prove this argument to the American people, the press spoke of India not as a nation, but presented India in many instances as a land of racial cleavages, of religious fanaticism, of separate nations, of various tribes.—each of these groups assertedly following its own customs untouched by the cataclysmic events of just a that were occurring beyond India's borders. Over all, however, there was pictured a benevolent paramountcy in the shape of the Government of India, providing a system of law and order for all, which, if withdrawn—especially now when India faces a crisis—would result in chaos becoming rampant throughout the land. It was said that the Moslems would avenge themselves by cutting the throat of every Hindu, and every Hindu would seek to do likewise to every Moslem. The result, India would become easy prey for the Nazi-Japanese imperialists.

It was to be noted that none of the newspapers which pictured these horrors ever suggested ways and means through which to inspire India's four hundred million people to a full support of the United Nations war effort in the Asiatic theatre of conflict.

By their editorial silence such papers have condoned the machine-gunning from the air of the Indian people. They have, by their refusal to point the true facts about India, given the Colonial Tories and appeasers who have still managed to hang on in the British Cabinet the moral right to carry on in India the rule of the lathi. Thus they have contributed to the creation of a lack of mutual understanding between Americans and Indians even to the extent of fostering a bitterness and resentment which cannot be regarded as conducive to a win-the-war spirit.

Let us look at a few facts about India.

India is a nation. India is a signatory to the United Nations Pact. India is a member of the United Nations. And yet India today provides the United Nations with a most grave and serious problem. It is clear that few things could be more dangerous to Allied success than failure to understand the nature of the Indian crisis. Obviously, the first requisite to understanding the Indian problem is to sweep away the volumes of trash fed us by the Colonel Blimps abroad and at home. We must come to grips at once with the basic fundamentals of the issue existing between the Indian people and the Colonial Tories. The problem no longer can be claimed to concern India and Britain alone. It has become our problem. It has become a prime United Nations concern.

By virtue of India's own national struggle for liberation over the past twenty-five years from British imperialism, India is clearly on the side of freedom. India is beyond any question anti-fascist. For more than a decade, the masses of India have proved this by their sympathy for India's heroic neighbor, China, when the latter was first withstanding Japanese aggression. Again: India protested the rape of Ethiopia when Mussolini barbarously ordered the seizure of that country and its people. Furthermore, in Spain, when the democratic government was being assailed by the fascists, India felt keenly that democracy had already come to a life-and-death struggle for survival with the ugly monster, Fascism. India sounded an unheeded warning to the West, which was still following Chamdian leaders took up the battle of the Loyalists by campaigning in every village throughout India until food, clothing and ambulances staffed by Indian doctors reached the shores of Spain. All this time, China was kept supplied with the only help the masses of India could give—doctors, ambulances, supplies. If India had possessed a people's army and navy or air force, these would long ago have been fighting in the world front against fascism.

India knows full well how vital it is that the United Nations achieve a full and complete victory over the Axis. India knows that a United Nations victory would be India's victory. India recognizes the basic aim of the present war, liberation for all oppressed peoples. Of these matters, India is truly deeply aware, believing and knowing that it is to the interest of every man, woman and child in India, Africa and in fact in every part of the globe, to mobilize every ounce of strength and energy in support of the United Nations' war effort. For every man faces the same threat, the threat of merciless slavery.

It was because of its full realization of the nature of this threat that the Indian National Congress demanded the right to a full participation of the Indian people in the defense of India, a full participation as freemen along with the other United Nations. The Congress wanted to raise an army, a civilian army, of one hundred million, every man, woman and child to be doing something to build the defenses of India, to quicken the war effort, to speed victory. The Indian Congress wanted to establish in India the same spirit of NO SURRENDER that inspired and still inspires the dauntless peoples of Russia, China and the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics.

But the Colonel Blimps of British colonial policy stuck to their pre-war policy of ignoring the peoples' demand for a right to share in the defense of their own land. The Congress felt, and the splendid Tories of British colonial policy knew, that the only way to achieve full self-defense was to give the people freedom—freedom to fight. Thus a people long embittered could be mobilized against the Axis. Thus they could have made something more than fighting talk of which Amery and Sir[illegible] But instead of [illegible] the people for war effort, the colonial Tories who control India's resources and who enjoy the privileges of that control refused to part with power.

Instead of their strenuous efforts to by-pass the people's movement, they encouraged Gandhi on the political horizon and led the world to believe that he was the main leader of the Congress Party, he was a believer in non-violence and non-cooperation, and therefore he could not aid in the defense of India. This argument was lent a further air of reasonableness by the quite unsupported statement that the safety of India could not be entrusted to Indian hands while the United Nations faced a critical situation in Asia. Those who argued in this way conveniently overlooked the results of a similar policy followed with fatal consequences in Burma, Malaya, and elsewhere.

The action on the part of Whitehall in London of not acceding to India's demand for the right to resist the Axis by force of arms, won for Mr. Gandhi and his pacific followers a dominant role in a very powerful section of the Congress Party. Nehru, however, who has at no time been a pacifist, prevented for the long months between April and August, the corraling of the Indian national movement by Gandhi in back of the latter's civil disobedience campaign. In fact, it was Nehru's moderating influence which ultimately resulted in those changes and modifications of the final resolution which put India with crystal clarity before the whole world in its true role as profoundly anti-fascist. Nehru's long efforts to keep the door open for future negotiations with Britain were completely thwarted. The authorities in India pounced upon and carried away the archives of the Indian Congress Party, declared the Congress itself illegal, and before any attempt could be made for an appeal to continue negotiations, every Congress leader had been thrust in jail. This action of course gave the followers of Gandhi, already embittered, an excuse to sabotage the war effort in India on a wholesale scale.

It is interesting to note that Indian industrialists aided strikes and strikers in order to contribute by that much toward a disruption of the unity of the people.

But Gandhism is not supported by all Congress followers in India. Nehru himself as well as many other top-ranking Congress leaders have always been at odds with Gandhi's policy of pacifism through "non-violence." And these leaders who do not accept the policy of non-resistance are, and have always been, the leaders of the militant masses of India. It was Nehru's outspoken conviction of the futility of non-violence for the defense of India that was largely responsible for his disappearance from the foreign press headlines, although not from the hearts of the Indian masses.

The truth is that it is around Nehru's policies of full resistance to the Axis that the leaders of the Indian Student Federation, the Indian Trade Union Congress and the Peasants' Union have been rallying. The numerically small force of the Communist Party of India has also consistently followed such a policy. All of these organizations are hard at work welding unity among the various politberiain-Blum appeasement Incal groups of India. And despite the imprisonment of the Congress leaders, the morale of the Indian masses is still intact.

The disturbing question now is: How long will the bullheadedness of the Colonial Tories continue? And how long will the progressives within India in view of the military crisis at India's borders, be able to hold India's unity and morale intact? Further, how long will the Allied high command allow Japan the advantage of the initiative in Southern Asia? Why has not the needed offensive against Japan in Burma been opened up?

Japanese forces are now camped on the northeast border of India, ready to strike toward Calcutta on command. To meet them, there are many divisions of United Nations forces on Indian soil. But do we want simply to defend India on Indian soil? Is it militarily wise to allow the Calcutta area, greatest steel-producing, munitions-manufacturing center of Southern Asia to become the battleground in Japan's [illegible] effort? Would it not be wise to force the issue now, to engage the enemy in Burma, and thus safeguard the most vital war materials in India?

There is no doubt of the ability of the United Nations forces to defend India. This job would be rendered much easier, however, if India were free. A national government now could build national resistance against the Japanese aggressor as no other agency conceivably could. One cannot count on an embittered, resentful unarmed people to fight as would a free people. And if by any chance Japan strikes first, and attempts the well-known pincer form of attack, with an invasion on both the Northwest and Northeast coasts of India, then, indeed, the United Nations would have need of the utmost cooperation from the Indian people. Why not assure now that full cooperation, and a full utilization of India's resources, would ensure—by granting self-rule to India? For if the Japanese, desperate because of German reverses in North Africa and the prospect of the long-awaited second front in Europe with its inevitable smashing of the Hitler army, should launch their projected offensive against India, and if the United Nations have not solved the Indian question by that time, the gravest sort of military difficulties would follow. The United Nations would be obliged to fight the enemy on the one hand, and on the other, internal disunity. More than India would be at staka. The last southern life-line to China, domination of the Indian Ocean and with it the Persian Gulf, to say nothing of a southern front against Russia, would all be at stake. These considerations provide additional reasons for opening up the Burma front against the Japanese at the earliest moment. India is the natural strategic base from which operations against the Japanese in the South Pacific can most easily be organized. Why risk, by delay in wresting the initiative from the Japanese, making that base the major southern Asia battlefield?

The need for Indian freedom is imperative for many reasons besides those I have given. Let us not forget the immense resources of India. It was because of the possibility of trade with India that America itself was discovered. All through the centuries, the word INDIA has been synonymous with RICHES. "The riches of the Indies" is a phrase typical of the thought which led to the seizure of those riches by the East India Company and later the government of England. Like her great neighbor on the north, Russia, and like the United States, India is nearly self-sufficient. Having unmeasured metal deposits, India nevertheless is utilizing only a small fraction of these for the war effort. India has coal reserves of thirty-six billion tons. With iron ore reserves of three billion tons, the most important steel plant in Calcutta produces only a million and a half tons of steel annually.

What could give impetus to the development of these resources like freedom? Indian industry must be taken out of its straitjacket; Indian organizing talent, administrative talent, inventive talent, must be given a chance to develop one of the richest areas on the face of the globe. Only a positive colonial policy, only mutuality between the peoples of the United Nations and the people of India, can result in the releasing of India's boundless national energies. Because the problem is complex is no reason to turn away from it. Agreements can be worked out, treaties can be signed, formulas can be found which would work no hardship on either the people of England or the people of India. And the ultimate values of taking such steps are unquestioned: a free, productive India, contributing its own unique best to the world, whether in trade, in culture, in the arts and sciences, could not fail to add materially to the well-being of all peoples with whom India might deal.

We are told that shipping is of great importance in the United Nations' war against the Axis. This is undeniably true. But it is equally true that the continuance of heavy shipments of war materials to India would be necessary, BUT ON A REDUCED SCALE, if British and American shipbuilders, engineers and builders and manufacturers were sent to India in greater numbers to aid in the development of India's resources. It will be a blunder of major magnitude if India's gigantic reserves of manpower and material are not thus made full use of. If the United Nations wishes to conserve shipping in the Asiatic theatre of war, one of the first necessities is a rapid expansion of India's ability to produce materials of war.

The policy by which Indian industrial development is throttled (to say nothing of similar conditions in Africa) is criminal enough during peace times. But in time of war such strictures are a terrible boon to the best interests of the United Nations. The Colonial Tories cannot claim that their policy helps win the war. Quite the contrary. It prevents a realization of the main aim of the war, the essence of the war: national liberation. Nehru and other great leaders of the Indian people have repeatedly made clear that Indian freedom does not mean narrow, sectarian, isolationist nationalism. It would mean the fullest development of India's national powers. It would mean the beginning of what Vice President Wallace calls ETHNIC DEMOCRACY, freedom from racial arrogance and discrimination. The national liberation movement in India today finds itself deeply rooted in aims and aspirations which are the same as those of all peoples in this peoples' war against the Nazi-Japanese beasts. Colonial Tory policy cannot help in winning the war. But a positive policy, founded on the present implementation of the United Nations (formerly the Atlantic) Charter, and based upon President Roosevelt's Four Freedoms, would stir the masses of India as no other policy could. The Four Freedoms and the United Nations Charter must never remain the ideals of a handful of men. They must become the possession of the peoples of the world, the inspiration for determined struggle against the Axis, and the guarantee of world-wide post-war unity among all peoples. As a means to this great end, the releasing of the imprisoned Indian leaders, the reopening of negotiations with them, and the frank statement that freedom for India is the objective of these negotiations, would do good impossible to measure to the cause of the United Nations.

When I think of the Indian people's movement for liberation, I reflect upon the African people's struggle for democracy, and of other colonial peoples, many, in fact, most, of them disfranchised. When I think of India's coming liberation, I think of America's thirteen million Negroes, and of other minority groups. I am deeply moved by the similarity of the cause which has driven each of these peoples to struggle for freedom, for equality.

The poll tax in America, the pass laws of Africa, and the property law tax of Africa and India are not dissimilar in function. They need all to be eradicated at once. Each of these is an obstacle on the path to freedom. Like the question of Indian freedom, these are matters which must be considered and acted upon IN THE INTERESTS OF THE PEOPLE—and soon—before full, wholehearted willing support in the prosecution of the war can be expected from those most concerned. The maintenance of such laws breeds disruption, feeds the fascist elements in our population with the propaganda upon which they thrive. National unity being paramount in the United Nations war effort, the removal of such prejudicial legislation, the eradication of such intolerances and inconsistencies becomes a matter for immediate concern, a matter for solution during the course of the war. Likewise, world unity is conditional upon the removal, the end, of policies of enslavement, intolerance, of prejudice. More and more, the United Nations Charter looms as the symbol of freedom from outworn and outmoded international relationships. It stands as one of the great documents of national liberation. But it is fast becoming clear to the whole world that the freedom it promises is something which is not OF THE FUTURE—a reward, so to speak—so much as it is a PRESENT MILITARY NECESSITY: a condition of victory. The American Negro people, quite as much as the people of India and of every other country, have everything at stake in this war. Freedom for India as a military need in order to make possible the full utilization of India's resources and manpower, and to unify the war effort in the southern Asiatic field, becomes thus a matter for deepest concern of the Negro people of the United States. We are all struggling together for the freedom of all peoples from the common enemy of man, Nazi-fascism.

Labor is a mighty power. Whether it be in the Soviet Republics, in India, in China, in Great Britain or here in the United States, it stands solidly on equal ground. To labor has been given a great responsibility. The peoples of the world have extended that responsibility. And labor has responded with equal fortitude and courage and with a grim determination to see to it that men and women of every race, color or creed shall share equally in the grim task of winning the war and establishing the peace.

All of us in every part of the globe have realized the blunders of the past. We have come to understand many of the traditional policies which precipitated many of those blunders. We must criticize the ways the democracies have of changing such policies, but our criticism must be constructive and not destructive, more especially at this time when national unity is a prime essential. It is by sharing our common suffering today, that we shall together share the fruits of our sacrifices tomorrow. Freedom for India, as well as for the millions of other colonials in similar present straits, just as the eradication of the poll tax in America (which affects both the poor whites and the poor blacks of the South), must necessarily take place during the course of the war. Both are essential to the earliest possible winning of the war. Indeed, the length and intensity of the war as Nehru has pointed out, are greatly affected by what is done about India.

Freedom for India now could be one of the master-strokes for the very swiftest United Nations victory. It would also show that implementation of national liberation was possible here and now, and with it, the liberation of all peoples and the institution of the great human ideals of liberty, democracy and justice FOR ALL PEOPLE EVERYWHERE.

This, and no less, is the glorious perspective.

"NATIVE SON"

From the book by

RICHARD WRIGHT

"You needn't talk to me unless you want to, Bigger. I think I know something of what you're feeling now. I'm not dumb, Bigger; I can understand, even if I didn't seem to understand that night." Jan paused, swallowed, and lit a cigarette.

"Well, you jarred me . . . I see now. I was kind of blind. I . . . I just wanted to come here and tell you that I'm not angry . . . I'm not angry and I want you to let me help you. I don't hate you for trying to blame this thing on me . . . Maybe you had good reasons . . . I don't know. And maybe in a certain sense, I'm the one who's really guilty . . ."

Jan paused again and sucked long and hard at his cigarette, blew the smoke out slowly and nervously bit his lips.

"Bigger, I've never done anything against you and your people in my life. But I'm a white man and it would be asking too much to ask you not to hate me, when every white man you see hates you. I . . . I know my . . . my face looks like theirs to you, even though I don't feel like they do. But I didn't know we were so far apart until that night . . . I can understand now why you pulled that gun on me when I waited outside that house to talk to you. It was the only thing you could have done; but I didn't know my white face was making you feel guilty, condemning you . . ."

Jan's lips hung open, but no words came from them; his eyes searched the corners of the room.

Bigger sat silently, bewildered, feeling that he was on a vast, blind wheel, being turned by stray gusts of wind. The preacher came forward.

"Is yuh Mistah Erlone?"

"Yes," said Jan, turning.

"Tha' wuz a mighty fine thing you jus' said, suh. Ef anybody needs help, this po' boy sho does. Ah'm Revern' Hammond."

Bigger saw Jan and the preacher shake hands.

"Though this thing hurt me, I got something out of it," Jan said, sitting down and turning to Bigger.

"It made me see deeper into men. It made me see things I knew, but had forgotten. I . . . I lost something, but I got something, too . . ."

Jan tugged at his tie and the room was silent, waiting for him to speak.

"It taught me that it's your right to hate me, Bigger. I see now that you couldn't do anything else but that; it was all you had. But, Bigger, if I say you got the right to hate me, then that ought to make things a little different, oughn't it? Ever since I got out of jail I've been thinking this thing over and I felt that I'm the one who ought to be in jail for murder instead of you. But that can't be, Bigger. I can't take upon myself the blame for what one hundred million people have done."

Jan leaned forward and stared at the floor.

"I'm not trying to make up to you, Bigger. I didn't come here to feel sorry for you. I don't suppose you're so much better off than the rest of us who get tangled up in this world. I'm here because I'm trying to live up to this thing as I see it. And it isn't easy, Bigger. I . . . I loved that girl you killed. I . . . I loved . . ."

His voice broke and Bigger saw his lips tremble.

"I was a fool, grieving for Mary and then I thought of all the black men who've been killed, the black men who've grieve when their people were snatched from them in slavery and since slavery. I thought that if they could stand it, then I ought to."

Jan crushed the cigarette with his shoe.

"At first, I thought old man Dalton was trying to frame me, and I wanted to kill him. And when I heard that you'd done it, I wanted to kill you. And then I got to thinking. I saw if I killed, this thing would go on and on and never stop. I said, 'I'm going to help that guy if he lets me'."

"May Gawd in heaven bless yuh, son," the preacher said.

Jan lit another cigarette and offered one to Bigger; but Bigger refused by keeping his hands folded in front of him and staring stonily at the floor. Jan's words were strange; he had never heard such talk before. The meaning of what Jan had said was so new that he could not react to it; he simply sat, staring, wondering, afraid even to look at Jan.

"Let me be on your side, Bigger," Jan said. "I can fight this thing with you, just like you've started it. I can come from all of those white people and stand here with you. Listen, I got a friend, a lawyer. His name is Max. He understands this thing and wants to help you. Won't you talk to him?"

Bigger understood that Jan was not holding him guilty for what he had done. Was this a trap? He looked at Jan and saw a white face, but an honest face. This white man believed in him, and the moment he felt that belief he felt guilty again; but in a different sense now.

Suddenly, this white man had come up to him, flung aside the curtain and walked into the room of his life. Jan had spoken a declaration of friendship that would make other men hate him; a particle of white rock had detached itself from that looming mountain of white hate and had rolled down the slope, stopping still at his feet. The word had become flesh. For the first time in his life a white man became a human being to him; and the reality of Jan's humanity came in a stab of remorse; he had killed what this man loved and had hurt him. He saw Jan as though someone had performed an operation upon his eyes, as though someone had snatched a deforming mask from Jan's face.

Bigger started nervously; the preacher's hand came to his shoulder.

"Ah don't wanna break in 'n' meddle where Ah ain' got no bisness, suh," the preacher said in a tone that was militant, but deferring. "But there ain' no use draggin' no Communism in this thing, Mistah. Ah respecks yo' feelins powerfully, suh; but what yuhs astin' jus' stirs up mo' hate. Whut this po' boy needs is understandin'."

"But he's got to fight for it," Jan said.

"Ahm wid yuh when yuh wanna change men's hearts," the preacher said. "But Ah can't go wid yuh when yuh wanna stir up mo' hate."

★ BEHIND THE SCENES With Harry

By Harry Levette

Even if another big spurt in movie work does not come before Xmas the sepia movie colony has much to be thankful for; one being the unholy three, Hitler, Hirohito and Mussolini, didn't get to move in, since last Thanksgiving, another that in spite of the tough spot the industry passed through last October, there was plenty of funds in the pockets of the race players to buy turkey at 50c on up per pound. This was because of the unusually large demand for extras and bit players all fall, due to the number of features filmed with special Negro sequences. But don't think they spent it all for immediate personal comforts. I saw lines of them buying war bonds and stamps, to help supply bullets for the boys at the front, fighting so Hollywood and all other institutions of Democracy can continue on.

"Bataan Patron" Tops MGM Schedule for 1943

With Kenneth Spencer in the important role of one of our greatest war heroes and a considerable number of other players scheduled, "Bataan Patrol" will be the war picture of the year out at MGM. Robert Taylor co-stars with Charles Laughton and Brian Donlevy in Stand By For Action, and will star in what has been termed the war's most exciting drama, Bataan Patrol.

"Stumpy" Was Valued Trainer of Buck Jones' Horses

Because of his friendliness towards Negroes, many of them who knew him personally, and thousands of fans who followed his pictures joined in the sorrow felt by Hollywood, when the body of Buck Jones, who died in the Boston Cocanut Grove fire was erturned today. Following the death of Tom Mix, "Stumpy", his faithful colored horse trainer for many years, was given a job by Jones. The two became more like friends than like employer and employee.

Jones was a great lover of Negro spirituals and during the appeaance of the "Wings Over Jordan" choir at Hollywood Bowl a year ago not only took greeting space in the souvenir program.

Delaying over a week, because called upon for some retakes in the completed screen fantasy "Cabin In The Sky", Eddie "Rochester" Anderson left here last Sunday night for New York and several other points in the east. His trip with the full sanction of the Jack Benny radio program, and the studio, is to be pincipally on business, although affording a recess following his strenuous work in "Cabin".

Upon his return he plans to head the most important movement for Negroes in which he has ever participated, according to a statement made by him to Yours Truly.

Getting Ready for Academy Awards, 1942

Setting December 16 as the date for its first Rules Committee meeting and midnight December 31 as the end of the awards eligibility year, directors of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences announced today that the 15th Annual Awards dinner would be held in late February or early March, 1943.

For some time rumors have been current that the event, highlight of the motion picture calendar, might not be held this year due to gas rationing. Academy board members voted unanimously in favor of holding the dinner-awards as usual. The site and date for the event will be announced as soon as the committee in charge, representing all branches of the film production industry, has its first meeting, President Walter F. Wanger stated.

The 15th Annual Awards dinner will be informal as it was last year. Some outstanding national figure will be invited to address the asemblage.

THEATRE WORLD

Los Angeles, Calif., Friday, Dec. 11, 1942 Vol. 63—No. 35 Page Two-B

Count Basie, pictured during recent triumphal visit to the Hollywood film capital, began life in the town of ed Bank, New Jersey, as "William Basie," the son of Mr. and Mrs. Harvie L. Basie. He received his first music lessons from his mother, Mrs. Lilian Basie, who recalls that her son was pounding the piano very effectively at the age of five.

While still in his teens, Bill Basie ventured into the midwest to seek fame and fortune as a musician. Aftr deoing 'hack' musical stints in theatres and second-rate night clubs for some time, he landed his first real professional job as a pianist and arranger with Walter Page's Blue Devils. Then he became star with Benny Moten band in Kansas City, one of the middle west's most famous swing outfits. When Moten died in 1935, Basie went out on his own with his first band, building it around most of the ace musicians of the Moten crew.

The new Basie band played in and around Kansas City; and in 1937 came to the attention of Benny Goodman, who was amazed at the terrific brand of jazz played by this unknown combination. Beny, with swing critic John Hammond and Willard Alexander, always on the lookout for new talent, decided to do something about Basie.

Harvard University recently voted him its favorite among danceband leaders. The Count has played for the smartest college proms throughout the country, including the Uniersity of Pennsylvania, University of Virginia, Amherst, Princeton, Yale, Harvard, Michigan and many thus is absorbed directly into the blood (where it is available for energy) without going through any digestive process.

Straight cane sugar . . . or any sucrose . . . must first be hydrolyzed, that is, converted to a mono-sacharide.

Obviously, then, it must take considerably longer for an equivalent amount of straight cane or beet sugar to be effective upon the blood sugar level.

Hence this would indicate that while total energy (calorie count) would be the same either way, Pepsi-Cola is providing QUICK energy, produces also important psychological reactions of refreshment and well-being, QUICKLY.

Another important factor would seem to be that when this energy is needed, the drinker is also thirsty and gets a good drink and plenty of liquid along with the energy.

★ NATIVE SON

Bigger sat looking from one to the other, bewildered.

"How on earth are you going to change men's hearts when the newspapers are fanning hate into them every day?" Jan asked.

"Gawd kin change 'em!" the preacher said fervently.

Jan turned to Bigger.

"Won't you let my friend help you, Bigger?"

Bigger's eyes looked round the room, as if seeking a means of escape. What could he say? He was guilty.

"Forget me," he mumbled.

"I can't." Jan said.

"It's over for me," Bigger said.

"Don't you believe in yourself?"

"Naw," Bigger whispered tensely.

"You believed enough to kill. You thought you were settling something, or you wouldn't've killed," Jan said.

Bigger stared and did not answer. Did this man believe in him that much?

"I want you to talk to Max." Jan said.

Jan went to the door. A policeman opened it from the outside. Bigger sat, open-mouthed, trying to feel where all this was bearing him. He saw a man's head come into the door, a head strange and white, with silver hair and a lean white face that he had never seen before.

"Come on in," Jan said.

"Thanks."

The voice was quiet, firm, but kind; there was about the man's thin lips a faint smile that seemed to have always been there. The man stepped inside; he was tall.

"How are you, Bigger?"

Bigger did not answer. He was doubtful again. Was this a trap of some kind?

"This is Reverend Hammond, Max," Jan said.

Max shook hands with the preacher, then turned to Bigger.

"I want to talk with you," Max said. "I'm from the Labor Defenders. I want to help you."

"I ain't got no money," Bigger said.

"I know that. Listen, Bigger, don't be afraid of me. And don't be afraid of Jan. We're not angry with you. I want to represent you in court. Have you spoken to any other lawyer?"

Bigger looked at Jan and Max again. They seemed all right. But how on earth could they help him? He wanted help, but dared not think that anybody would want to do anything for him now.

"Nawsuh," he whispered

"How have they treated you? Did they beat you?"

"I been sick." Bigger said, knowing that he had to explain why he had not spoken or eaten in three days. "I been sick and I don't know."

"Are you willing to let us handle your case?"

"I ain't got no money."

"Forget about that. Listen, they're taking you back to the inquest this afternoon. But you don't have to answer any questions, see? Just sit and say nothing. I'll be there and you won't have to be scared. After the inquest they'll take you to the Cook County Jail and I'll be over to talk with you."

"Yessuh."

"Here; take these cigarettes."

"Thank you, suh."

The door swung in and a tall, big-faced man with grey eyes came forward hurriedly. Max and Jan and the preacher stood to one side. Bigger stared at the man's face; it teased him. Then he remembered; it was Buckley, the man whose face he had seen the workmen pasting upon a billboard a few mornings ago. Bigger listened to the men talk, feeling in the tones of their voices a deep hostility toward one another.

"So, you're horning in again, huh, Max?"

"This boy's my client and he's signing no confessions." Max said.

"What the hell do I want with his confession?" Buckley asked. "We've got enough evidence on him to put him in a dozen electric chairs."

"I'll see that his rights are protected." Max said.

"Hell, man! You can't do him any good."

Max turned to Bigger.

"Don't let these people scare you, Bigger."

Bigger heard, but did not answer.

"What in hell you Reds can get out of bothering with a black thing like that, God only knows," Buckley said, rubbing his hands across his eyes

"You're afraid that you won't be able to kill this boy before the April elections, if we handle his case, aren't you, Buckley?" Jan asked.

Buckley whirled.

"Why in God's name can't you pick out somebody decent to defend sometimes? Somebody who'll appreciate it. Why do you Reds take up with scum like this . . .?"

HEDY LAMARR IN 'WHITE CARGO' AT U.A.

Steaming African rubber plantations, primitive souls amid a torrid wilderness, from the background for stark drama, and present Hedy Lamarr as the sultry Tondelayo, in the famous play, "White Cargo," the screen version of which is now playing at the United Artist theatre, 933 So. Boadway, downtown Los Angeles.

Hedy Lamarr, as the dark-skinned heroine, is a creature of almost sinister allure, and Pidgeon plays the two fisted trail-blazer of the jungles with dramatic forcefulness. Frank Morgan plays the bibulous but kindly camp doctor and Henry O'Neill a clergyman working as missionary in the rubber jungles. Reginald Owen has a comedy role as the captain of a river steamer and Bromwell Fletcher plays an overseer who has been beaten down by the jungles and is forced to return to civilization.

On the same program MGM presents "Eyes In The Night" with Edward Arnold and Ann Harding. Arnold makes a grand job of his assignment as a blind captain of detectives, whose seeing eye dog, played by an amazingly intelligent police dog called Friday, proves a valuable aid in the undoing of the work of Nazi agents.

Pepsi-Cola Gives Quick Energy

In March, 1942, Dr. Richard J. Block, who is an important scientist in the field of bio-chemistry and who is attached to the New York Medical Center (Columbia University), made a series of studies on the rapid rise in blood sugar levels after drinking Pepsi-Cola.

He showed an average rise of 50 per cent in blood sugar readings WITHIN FIVE MINUTES after drinking Pepsi-Cola.

It is well-known, of course, that mono-sacharides are the only sugars that can be absorbed into the blood stream. Sugar in Pepsi-Cola, being largely invert,

★DOWN IN FRONT

With J. CULLEN FENTRESS

UCLA on Top This Time

Back in 1939, a great UCLA ball club, led by the famed Kenny (The General) Washington, and a great University of Southern California eleven battled to a 0-0 tie before a capacity crowd of 103,300 in Los Angeles Memorial Coliseum for the privilege of representing the West in the Rose Bowl. In the closing moments of that historic struggle, the Uclans got as close as USC's two-yard line to victory, and the Rose Bowl. A fourth down pass fizzled. Many thought Washington (including this column) could have lugged it across.

And now, three years later, UCLA and SC again meet to decide the coast conference championship and the Rose Bowl bid. Gone are Kenny Washington, and Woodrow Strode, the two colored Uclans. Gone are the other standouts of both clubs.

Instead, UCLA will field a team boasting a fine forward wall, a brilliant quarterback, passer and punter in Bob Waterfield, and an unerring placekicker in Ken Snelling.

Representing Troy is a squad, under a new coach, Jeff Cravath, which has improved considerably since the start of the season. A brilliant array of backs overshadows a fair-to-middling forward wall. Standouts are Bob Musick, Mickey McCardle, Mel Bleeker (blocking quarterback), end Ralph Heywood, and Norm Verry.

UCLA has yet to trounce a USC club on the football field. That in itself may have something to do with the outcome of Saturday's classic. If Waterfield keeps his health throughout the game, this column looks for the first UCLA victory over her bitter cross-town rival. USC has nothing to match him. Troy has shown she is weak on pass defense. And that's where Bob excels. If the game develops into a punting duel between Waterfield and Heywood, the UCLA ace will walk off with the honors.

So, that's the way it looks to the column. With Waterfield, the Uclans can win. Without him—well, why bring that up!

(P. S.—The Washington Huskies found how important Waterfield is to the UCLA offense!

Seen and Heard:

Julius Franks, University of Michigan, and Ohio State's Willis appear to have been the only colored gridders to snare any all-star honors for 1942 . . . Boxing fans at Hollywood Legion stadium tomorrow night will get their first look-see at Charley Burley, the high-ranking middleweight star out of Minneapolis. Burley fights Lloyd Marshall instead of Jack Chase, the latter having claimed an injured maulie . . . 'Tis said that Lew Jenkins will be John Thomas' next opponent . . .

How the coast conference fathers can STILL allow Idaho and Montana to represent the PCC on the gridiron is beyond this column. Both clubs were soundly drubbed here Saturday by UCLA and USC. A round-robin with the remaining conference schools and dates with such independents as Loyola, Santa Clara, St. Mary's and the University of San Francisco would probably have more appeal for the cash customers . . .

Burley boasts a great record, a record which includes a long list of victims, from welters to heavyweights. One of them was Fritzie Zivic.

Tigers Bag 31st Battalion Grid Crown at Fort Sill

Battery A, of the Thirty-first Battalion, Sixth Field Artillery Training Regiment, Field Artillery Repuacement Training Center, at Fort Sill, Okla. won the six man football championship of the Thirty-first Battalion.

The Tigers won the championship in full stride by crushing Batteries C and D in the championship drive. Thanksgiving the Tigers struck down the mighty C Battery by a score of 24 to 0. Sgt. Archie 'Flash' Lewis scored three of the Tiger touchdowns. The other was scored by a pass from Monroe 'Wizard' Cummings to Walter 'Big' Triplett who streaked across the goal line for the fourth and final touchdown.

Sunday, November 29, 1942, the Tigers repeated the act by striking down Battery D, the League leaders by a score of 13 to 0. Robert 'Snake Hips' Banks ran 45 yards for the first Tiger touchdown with aid of Lewis and Cummings. Charles Payne made the extra point. Cpl. Lee Thomas received a sport pass from Lewis and with the superb blocking of Sgt. Ernest 'Terror' Dennard, dashed 35 yards for the Tigers' second and final touchdown.

Other members who aided in the championship drive were: Hugh 'Pay-off' Cash, Leon 'Bullet' Compton, Samuel 'Sampson' Foreman, Cpl. Jonathan Carter, Cpl. Terrence DeBeal and Baker Richardson.

The Tigers' cheering section lead by 1st Sgt. James R. Sutton, jr., Cpl. Damon Hatton, Privates First Class James Hines, Henry Mines and Cpl. George Harpole and other members of the Battery aided greatly in demoralizing the opposing teams as well as cheering the Tigers on to victory.

During the football season, the Tigers won four games, lost one and was tied twice.

Armstrong KOs Jenkins in 8

PORTLAND, Ore., Dec. 11.—With a battle with Ray (Sugar) Robinson in New York Jan. 29 for the "duration" welterweight crown as his goal, Henry Armstrong, former triple crown boxing champion, took another big step in his comeback campaign last Friday night here when he knocked out Lew Jenkins, former lightweight ruler.

It was Jenkins' 26th birthday and 5000 spectators sat in Civic auditorium and howled themselves hoarse as Armstrong put Lew on the floor 8 times before putting him down for keeps.

Jenkins was cut badly, but Armstrong, whose battered eyes nearly forced him into permanent retirement, was unmarked.

Hutchins to Headline at Olympic

Hard-socking Max Hutchins headlines the boxing card at the Olympic auditorium next Tuesday night when he meets Mexican newcomer, Amado Rodriguez.

Matchmaker Babe McCoy has lined up a stellar supporting card.

Last Tuesday night, four of the five bouts of the all-action card ended by knockouts.

Genaro Rojo, 142, knocked out sub Kid Lester, 145½, in the fourth stanza of a scheduled six-rounder; Matt Oglesby, 139, was nodded by Gene Valenzuela, 140, in a fast six (Matt deserved at least a draw); Watson Jones, 167, knocked out Jimmy Wilson, 169, in three; and Vincent Villavicencio, 149, kayoed Al Hernandez, 153, a sub.

Hardy Williams, 200, stopped Buddy Holzhauer, 185, white, in 45 seconds of the first round of the curtain raiser.

SAN DIEGO, Dec. 11.—In one of the biggest mismatches of the year, Juan Zurita, 137, of Mexico City, scored an easy three-round technical knockout over Chuck Railey, 141, of Riverside, here Friday night.

Railey was down for 9 in the second, and twice in the third.

Te brief article which appeared in the November ASPO News Letter concerning city design courses in the Milwaukee Public Schools serves to remind us that most students seem to prefer the scale model type of exhibit when they visit planning or other municipal demonstrations. The civic center model in the Los Angeles Planning Commission's office continues to draw interest over charts or pictures.

★ "I WILL FIGHT AGAIN"

By Rev. Geo. W. Dewey Danley

I am moved again to write you people a burning message and I do hope you will take heed to it immediately, because it's something very very important to consider. The Spirit has begun to move like it did Samson against the Philistines therefore I can forsee clearly that the mighty wars are to be settled (ended). Only Jesus and I involved. Therefore I will fight again in the near future. I am warning you again to cooperate with me and the Lord in every respect by opening your heart and hand to me without failure you should be willing to do anything for a man of God that is able with the power and help of God to bring your son, daughfter, father, relatives or friend from over seas in peace. Well I am able because I am a born ruler and leader of the world. You people should be well acquainted with me and my works by now. Friends your sons, daughters, fathers, husbands, friends etc. are worth more than the tainted dollar--remember you can't eat money or carry it out of the world so remember me I have fought and I will fight again for you. I have no worry about victory, yet it costs a lots and is a very very aluable thing so get with me and the Lord and President Rooseelt or well at once to end the war soon. This is a very very important matter of business so don't ignore it because I will fight again with faith and power of God against any enemy.

Ist Samuel 17:25-26 and it shall be that the man who killeth him, they will enrich him with great richness and give his daughter and make his father's house free in Isreal. "What shall be done to the man that killeth this Philistine and taketh away the reptoach from Israel?"

I fought and won over the great Lindbergh case with power and faith in God, May 12, 1932 but what has been done for me?

I prophesied, fought and won over the world's economical depression January 1, 1934 with the aid of Christ in God but what have you good people done for me? Do something and be blessed of God.

John Dillinger and his gang did not fall (die) until I prophesied, prayed and fought against them with faith and power of God but what did the law and people do for me? Friends this is unfair yet I will fight again. I will fight again against the enemy of war between now and some time next year.

The newspaper stated a long while ago that Ruby Baxter of the Scottsboro case was dying from major operation, so I gripped her case with faith in God and with tears in my eyes, I lifted my voice to Christ Jesus the Son of God and she yet lives. I will fight again and also I fought somewhat hard July, 1937 for the Scottsboro boys and they were saved fom the burning electric chair as three Hebrew Children were saved in and from the burning fiery furnace. I notified the world a short while before the Scottsboro case reopened the last time in 1937 that I would fight it my first time in its history that the people would se what the Lord Jesus and the Holy Ghost would do for the boys through me and others therefore they saw but what have they done for me? It is a great shame for America to ignore a man of God like me. I will fight again.

I was somewhat angry with Japan for attacking China in the years of 1931-32-33 and I looked across the Pacific Ocean with anger and a frown on my face by faith God therefore an awful typhoon hit Tokio in Japan killing many Japanese. I will fight again.

Rev. G. Washington Dewey Danley, Prophet, 199 Auburn Ave., N. E. Atlanta, Ga.

Landon Church Services Told

LANDON—The Community Baptist Church had a great service last Sunday. The pastor brought a soul stirring message from the second chapter of Timothy, subject: 'Grace and Mercy From God'.

Holy Communion was observed in the morning service. Our Sunday School is progressing nicely it was well attended. We were happy to have Mrs. Smalley to worship with us in the morning service. A love offering was taken for the boys in this community who have left for the armed services, we are sending each of them a gift for Christmas.

Estella Powell is the reporter.

Santa Clara County's 1942 annual report deals with an interesting phase of roadside development —"Is is particularly desirable to protect the margins of the streams along highways leading to the recreation areas in the mountainous sections of the country. Where large areas are involved, it may be possible to acquire scenic easements over such lands. Scenic easements are the acquisition, for a nominal sum, of the right to control the use of land in such areas while leaving the actual land ownership in private hands."

Revival at Soul Winning Mission

The Soul Winning Mission, 2011 Hooper avenue, launches into another week of Revival meetings. Elder M. C. Jenkins of the church of God in Christ, begins his Gospel messages Monday night, Dec. 14. Come early. Our hearts have rejoiced this week under the powerful preaching of Rev. W. G. McRoy who remarkably fed us from "Green Pastures." Rev. M. L. Johnson of New Jerusalem Baptist church and his followers are temporarily worshipping at the Soul Winning Mission.

Truly we are not suffering a artion in Ministers, obviously the Lord is sending forth more each week. Each minister has a message all his own. Come praying, come believing that some one will be saved.

"He that winneth Souls is wise."

Hattie M. Crooms, minister.

A powerful novel, of Virginia Crawford, a Southern aristocrat with a backgound of rigid values and prejudices, who is married to a swaggering husband, and Milt Gardner, an aggressive Northern business man, owner of the local timber mill, father of an acknowledged but illegitimate son.

One Red Rose Forever—Jordan

The story is based on the tempestuous life of a young German, named Stiegel, who came to America in 1750. Stiegel was a man of passions, loving fine glass, great music, and beautiful women.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE CHURCHES

The Golden Text in the Sunday Lesson-Sermon on "God the Preserver of Man" is this verse from a Psalm of David: "In God is my salvation and my glory: the rock of my strength, and my refuge, is in God."

It is related in a Lesson-Sermon passage from The Acts that Paul and Silas healed a "damsel possessed with a spirit of divination . . . which brought her masters much gain by soothsaying." "And when her masters saw that the hope of their gains was gone," the account continues, they "brought them to the magistrates, . . . And when they had laid many stripes upon them, they cast them into prison, charging the jailor to keep them safely: Who, . . . thrust them into the inner prison, and made their feet fast in the stocks. And at midnight Paul and Silas prayed, and sang praises unto God: and the prisoners heard them. And suddenly there was a great earthquake, so that the foundations of the prison were shaken: and immediately all the doors were opened, and every one's bands were loosed."

The Lesson-Sermon includes these passages from "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy: "At all times and under all circumstances, overcome evil with good. Know thyself, and God will supply the wisdom and the occasion for a victory over evil. Clad in the panoply of Love, human hatred cannot reach you. The cement of a higher humanity will unite all interests in the one divinity."

'Don't Drift' to Be Theme of A. M. Service at Second AME

Speaking to a capacity audience on Sunday last, the pastor, Rev. Jno. B. Isaacs, seemed to be never better as he described "The Feast" to his listeners. The music rendered by th Cathedral Choir under the direction of Ella Mae Crosland stirred the hearts of the crowd and moved many to tears. The anthem "God Is Our Refuge" was well done with the tenor solo taken by Reginald Green. There were six accessions, two conversions and two baptised. The Holy Communion was administered to a large number of communicants.

Listen to the AME Inspirational Hour on Wednesday evening at 10 o'clock over Radio Station KPAS when Rev. Isaacs will deliver the address on the subject "The Upward Look". Music will be rendered by the Junior Choir. This is a weekly feature at the same hour.

The three choirs of Second AM E church are busy preparing special music for the Christmas season which the pastor states will be better and more impressive than any ever presented. Mrs. Esther B. Isaacs will sponsor and feature a special worship service at 4 o'clock on Sunday, December 20th.

The captains continue to report satisfactorily in the financial drive which is now in progress. The members are rallying very nicely to this effort.

The funeral services of Sister Mary Bell, one of the Stewardess of the church will be held on Thursday afternoon at 2 o'clock with the pastor officiating.

"Don't Drift" will be the theme of the minister's discourse on Sunday next at 11 o'clock and "Not A Chance" at the 7 o'clock meditation.

You will certainly want to worship at Second Church and enjoy the benefit of the services.

Ministers Will Meet Monday

The Alliance will meet in its first December meeting, Monday, December 14th at 11 a. m. at the YMCA, 28th and Paloma Sts. At this meeting not only will there be the regular program, but the new persident of the Alliance, Rev. E. W. Rakestraw will appoint the committees for the year. The public is cordially invited to attend.

Now is the time for the motorist to practice the Open Door Policy. Let's all ride to Victory together!

We just used to call the speeder a fool--now we call him a traitor!

You are invited to attend.

The minister says:
"We are building every day
In a good or evil way
And the structure as it grows
Will our inmost soul disclose."

St. Paul Baptist Marches On Under the Banner of the Holy Ghost

The worship in St. Paul last Sunday was very inspiring thru out the day. Holy Ghost preaching by E. A. Anderson at the 11 a. m. service and B. Clarence Cook at night, there was a noticeable down pouring of the Holy Spirit in all periods of service.

There was a beautiful service in the BTU at 5:45 p. m., in which a dedication of 50 Bibles and 100 song books were observed. Pastor Williams in his dedicatory remaks emphasized the necessity of Bible study, and urged the youth to devote more time to the study of God's word.

Speaking of Pastor Williams' emphasis it may interest you to learn that his exegeses on the "three things the church and the world need most in these perilous times" is being felt throughout the city, evidence of it was clearly brought to light this week, when the Baptist ministers, at his suggestion organized what will be known hereafter, as the "Evangelistic Bureau of the L. A. District Association". The objectives of the Bureau, are to carry out the three point method of Evangelism as authorized, and preached by Pastor Williams.

This action to my mind, is a prediction fulfilled, for he said on more than one occasion that he "would not be satisfied until the whole city was awakened to the necessity of Holy Ghost Preaching".

Our Sunday services closed with 10 accessions. $555.00.

Race Track GOSSIP

By Jay Gould

That certain landlady on third and Townsend streets who raised her rent fifty cents and a dollar, should be told that she may get into serious trouble if some one reports her to the office of Price Administration.

That party and banquet given by Sweetwines' (The Bartender) girl friend and her five or six sisters was just much too much.

Ivy Osborne, beauty operator, will be on the loose when she returns from Reno, but will soon be Mrs. Oh What's-His-Name.

Clarence Estell and Julius Delightful now operating the new cocktail bar corner of Post and Fillmore Street. Drop in to see them. You can't lose anything as they have a surprise for you.

Hats off to James Jeffries and his wife Lena for the most popular barbecue stand in 'Frisco at 1810 Post Street, with the best of food at popular prices.

Mr. and Mrs. John Public: When in 'Frisco drop in on Mr. Sylvester and Mrs. Marguerite Cunningham, Geary Hotel, Fillmore and Geary streets. Swell accomodations.

Mr. Hollywood, man about town, who bets the wrong way on fights, football games, and the races. Hollywood has not cashed a bet all summer. Old boob; don't see how he can keep any money as he even plays the cuties the wrong way.

Pat Brooks, Joe Louis' brother, and Hawkins, owner of the Cherryland, along with Percy Williams, playboy, were refused in the army. I wonder who is happy.

Cal Williams, bartender at the Town Club: Where do you pick up on so many chicks, pretties, and cuties. The number you had last Sunday night was peaches.

Steve Broady, the Los Angeles bookmaker, streamlined his way to Bay Meadows t'other day.

Bob Hereford, Sonny Howard, Jimmy Pitts, A. Love, and a Mr. Oscar, (tall brownskin man) are all betting to the sky at the track daily.

Eleanor Calhoun: I am warning you that George Dean, your new money and grocery man is on your trail so keep your eyes open.

If you missed Irene Walton, Edna Mae Goins, and Millard Maxwell, they are in 'Frisco looking like Fifth Avenue in N. Y.

Bay Meadows will be on the take for two additional weeks leaving you wise guys until December 19 to send your message to Santa Claus.

Glamour lane rumors are that Frank (Candy) and Helen Young will burst the bubble as quickly as the decision can be made, each have their new choice, she rumored to be on the ofay side and he measured for a brownskin model.

A certain lassie disappeared recently. Is it because she became interested in the 'Frisco chap while en route from L. A. to 'Frisco aboard that super-deluxe 'Lark'?

A local Pullman porter went all the way to L. A. to plank down three C's for a cutie's trinket and on the way back to town let another cutie spy it and talk him out of it.

The local smarties got hooked in the Rangel-Zivic bout, losing double what they won on the Armstrong fiasco. Are they scratchin'?

Ruth Washington and Inez Dawson playing the early hours at the hot spots and flashing tailor-made twenty dollar bills.

"Mustard" Arnold was spotted doing the late spots with Kay Cunard, the hip-hurler from San Diego, L. A., Seattle and the Coast.

Wonder does Fay, (Candy), jr. miss Lovey Lane or might he have aPt Patterson on his mind?

Don Jones, national and international bartender, can be seen playing the top spots in 'Frisco with his wife, Myrtle. Don has been married ten years and positively is on the level.

Albert B. Gibson, just returned from the South Sea Islands, with his pockets running over with money, paying all checks and tipping the waitresses.

Lucille Love, the cutie from New York, enjoying a pleasant evening at Jack's and sending well-wishes to Earl J. Morris.

Albert Carter, waiter on the Lark, from L. A., seems to hold his own at Bay Meadows.

Quinten "Skeeter" Sanders, Kansas City playboy deluxe, three rounds and then grabbing sporting the local boys two or all the checks.

J. D. Bantam can be sen switching from one night club to another knocking himself out on soft drinks.

"Muss" Harris around as usual sightseeing and looking over and picking up on the pretties.

Jimmy Morrell, the congenial manager at Jack's Tavern in 'Frisco is tops with all the customers and leads the way when it comes to friendliness shown from person to person. He knows all the people and all the people know him.

Jerome "Biscuit" Young shovin' the stuff at Jack's.

Henry Kline's wife was up celebrating her marriage. She also came up and enticed Teddy Brown's missus off. $50 reward for anyone who can locate her. Tell Mr. Kline to stop calling up all hours of the night and day. She'll be home later, maybe.

George W. Bell, San Francisco playboy, finally goes to the Army.

Frances Jones, waitress of Grand Cafe, 'Frisco, is a cutie deluxe and in the know with all the boys.

Ollie Organ, bartender at Jack's Tavern, making a quick trip back to Portland. Wonder why? Did those long distance phone calls and telegrams have anything to do with the trip.

Thanks for the letter, W. E. Horton, Los Angeles, but your new game of chance is probably chance for new game. Get me.

To the playboys on the stem in L. A. Keep tab on the two sisters, Margo and Rosita, who are playing very hard and what is it to Mr. Percy, the congenial and affable bartender in the Dunbar Cocktail Lounge? Overheard Rosita say to Percy, "Mr. P. you forget your baby."

All the way from Trenton, N. J., came Thanksgiving greetings from Charles Mullens, who says he is keeping up with the column and everybody enjoys it greatly.

Leonard and Tom Pratt send news that "Beer Barrel" has arrived in New Orleans for the Fairground season. The Pratts say New Orleans is seein' the money again with plenty horses stabled at the track and things lookin' rosy.

Mr. and Mrs. Erwin Strain leaving San Francisco going on a trip to Portland, Oregon and Seattle for one month.

Edward Brooks is visiting his brother, Bill Brooks, and having a swell time knocking himself out.

Herman White, one of the Texas boys, leaving for the Army and partying with Mr. Walter Williams and brother and other friends.

Old Skeetes, from Kansas City, playing around 'Frisco with Cleo Brown o fthe Post Hotel and having a ball with new and oldtime friends. Says he surely wishes old Piney Brown was here.

Mrs. Andrew Jackson, Beaumont, Texas, hep-catting around the Town club and wishes friends to know that she is making her home in Berkeley, Calif.

Ben Amy, Julia Mae Thomas, and Matilda Thomas, all Berkeleyites, getting on the beam with the late heat-wave spots and sporting all the dough in town.

Ruby Barker and Lillian Wilkerson can be seen at the night clubs, dances, and downtown shows having a fine time. Indeed a charming pair of girls.

George Smalley is now in the Army.

Miss Hidye Brown of the Hidye's Fashion Studio, dining out with a new fellow just from the East, Mr. Alex Robinson. Also in the party was Mrs. Queen Fraction, hat designer.

J. Bodie leaves last minute notice that he is on his way to fight the Japs.

Mrs. Helen Thompson seen about town.

Maurice McGavock, Los Angeles, a visitor to the Bay area, spotted in 'Frisco being shown the white lights.

Rosa Foster, a local cutie, doing the late spots up in the right way at the right times.

"Dicky Boy" Louis is playing awfully hard with 10 G's. Also Vernon Lowe.

Robert Watson can be seen in and out of the best places in San Francisco.

Mrs. E. A. Woods will plane her way to Los Angeles to see Mrs. Betty Clark, her sister.

Edna Weeds and husband seen enjoying the late doings.

Mrs. Joe E. Cross and Mrs. Roosevelt Turner, two popular Mesdames of 'Frisco.

★ FIRST AID DON'TS

(Second in series of 10)

(This is the second of a series on "What Not to Do Until the Doctor Comes." Approved by the American Red Cross, we are printing them in the belief that untrained aid can be terribly dangerous. For standard courses in first aid apply to your Red Cross chapter.)

Don't wait for the doctor to come if a man is bleeding to death. This, like stopped breathing, is another condition in which delay can be fatal.

Don't wait to determine whether the blood is dark or light, flowing or spurting. IF IT'S COMING OUT, STOP IT.

There are five things you can do: (1) Elevate the bleeding part; (2) firmly press a sterile compress over the wound; (3) if that doesn't work, squeeze between the wound and the heart to stop blood flow; (4) if that doesn't work, apply a tourniquet beween wound and heart—but only on an arm or leg; (5) if nothing else works, get into the wound with fingers or anything else.

If you can't get sterile material quickly, don't worry about it. An infection in a live person can usually be cured. A dead patient can't. Don't fail to find ALL the wounds.

You may find out where first aid classes are being conducted in your neighborhood by contacting Stephen O'Donnell, American Red Cross, 1200 S. Vermont avenue, FI-5261.

If no class is now in session, an adquate supply of instructors is available to teach new classes.

Aaron Brown: What's your excuse for getting high while out with Lillian, your wife, and spoiling all of her pleasure by acting bad.

Miss Vera Marshall: Will give you a little hint. Watch your step or Clyde may roll in anytime.

Porters Say Pullman Co. Discriminates

CHICAGO, Dec. 11.—Pointing out the discriminatory hiring policy of the Pullman company and the existing practices of segregation by the Pullman Conductor's union, the Pullman Porters and Maids Protective association this week filed with the President's Committee on Fair Employment Practices a brief charging violation of Executive Order 8802 in the Pullman Service which they contend is now primarily a war industry.

The porters group specifically pointed out that selected Negro personnel were already trained by standrads set up by the Pullman company to do the job required by those employed as Pullman conductors. They further pointed out that clauses in the rituals of the Conductors' unions constitution and the constant, never-ending agitation of the union that their position "is a white man's job" are factors retarding the up-grading of these trained porters.

According to the officials of the Protective association the Pullman company has hundreds of porters trained and equipped, but because of the practices of discrimination in the industry these men are only classed as porters-in-charge, and are never advanced to the rating in pay or class of conductors. While the hiring of the Negro personnel is excluded to the porter class, the conductors have exerted their influence during their 20 years in seeing that advancement rights are denied the Pullman porters.

"It was at the advent of the organization that they introduced restrictive provisions in their constitution, and then immediately began a national campaign fostering racial differences in hiring and placement of workers ih Pullman service. At the very outset this organization advocated the regulation of the Negro to the porter classification only; and in more recent times this same organization has lobbyed for national and state legislation that would force the corporation to remove all porters-in-charge from their service," charges one part of the brief.

Citing case after case of discrimination practiced by the Order of Sleeping Car Conductors, the Porters' association describes various subterfuges used by the conductors to force through state legislatures statutes forbidding the operation of porter-in-charge. They named the states of Florida, South Carolina and Texas as three of the states where they have been successful in having bills put into law that have reacted against the Negro employes of the Pullman company. Then, the porters go on to recall the case of 1940 where the organization of conductors tried to steamroll through the congress, with the aid of the railway department of the American Federation of Labor, a national bill that would have eliminated all possibilities of the porter even to the ranks of in-charge employe.

The Protective association asserts that with the overlapping of manpower on the one hand and the cry of labor shortage on the other by some of the labor unions that the Pullman in-charge employees, regardless of race, color or national origin, should now be afforded the opportunity to rise in rating and pay-grade, thus stemming the tide of imaginary manpower shortage in the railroad industry.

They point out that even now the company is constantly hiring and training new men for conductor jobs, while these qualified in-charge employes are still being retained in the porters ranks. The officials of the Protective association firmly believe that this trained reservoir of manpower can aid in forestalling a labor shortage in Pullman service by an active policy of upgrading and advancement.

OUTPOST—Couched on top of a haystack, Private LeRoy Williams, of High Point, N. C., searches the terrain in front for possible enemy tank concentrations while Private DeWitt Slocumb, of Mt. Olive, N. C., stands by to flash the information back to headquarters over his walkie-talkie two-way radio. (Second Army Public Relations)

The newly released annual report of the Central Business District Association continues to emphasize the need for parkways (freeways) and an overall transportation pattern. The report also urges a more comprehensive program of planning, and endorses the development of a 15 point Master Plan.

There has been no need for a relaxation in the Los Angeles zoning laws in regard to the housing or renting of rooms to war workers. The only impact the war has made on the zoning laws, so far, is the adoption of an ordinance where-by the variance process is speeded up to care for war industry development.

AN IMPORTANT MESSAGE About the MEAT SITUATION

Recently it has become more and more difficult for all meat markets to obtain the same large variety of meats that patrons have been accustomed to choose from. Although we have spared neither time nor effort to maintain our stocks, we have not been able to provide as wide a selection as either you or this market would like.

This market still has as large a variety as any and, in fact, a larger selection than many others. We regret seeing some of our patrons disappointed and appreciate the fine spirit and loyalty that our friendly patrons have shown in realizing that the situation is a necessary war sacrifice.

We pledge ourselves to continue to provide the largest selection of meat products possibly obtainable.

★ CROWN CITY CAPERS

By PHILIPPA E. JONES

Somewhee in Dena at this very moment a head is being bumped: and speaking of bumped heads, who got bumped Suday?

Seen at various cinemas were Jackie B. and Roy (what's your story?) Stension; Gloria (ice) B. and Joe (loose ends) Collins; Lora Jacques and Paul (tall, skinny Papa) Taliaferro; P. J. King and Lucille (slow but sure) Harrison; Ralph (truck) McAfee and Julia Jones; Johnny Burton and Delores (Old Faithful) Carroll —Oh! and by the way, Rufus (hot head) Blake and Jessie (Hollywood) Arnold in a family group.

One can see from the preceding paragraph that quite a few of the socialites came up short—To those who did, remember, 'The early bird catches the worm."

On again, off again, going on again is Marv Bland—this time it's to "personality" Hutcherson. This is really it!

Why are all the Czars stalking Johnny B. with adhesive tape? You say he tlaks too much?

If we were permitted to 'play them' hard we would ask the following questions:

1—Now that Jackie B. is working, why doesn't she go out alone? She'd probably have more fun.

2—Why doesn't each Fine get her own lunch and not meddle with her sister club member's?

3—What did Capt. Morgan have to say to three tripple C's City betterment)

4—Is Ernest Griffin the only member of the tripple Czars?

5—Why doesn't gas rationing seem to worry the Czars?

6—Why did Thelma J. play 'Big Fat Mama' the other evening? Wasshe playing 'em?

7—Why did the Czars freeze up on the Fines (all but one) Friday night? Turn about is fair play!

8—Is Lora J. beginning to tire of solitude? Heh Mama done told her!

P. J. King says 'true love never runs smooth' neither does it ever die."

Ralph M. says 'I would trade my car in but SHE can't get any colder.' Does Ralph know SHE can ride in a Buick with a C-card.

It is intimated from unimpeachable sources that Ellie H. is due for a fall!! His only answer is 'My address is easy to find and I'm usually home.'

Carolyn C. is singing, 'I've got it bad and that ain't good.' No news there. She's never had anything good.

Johnny Burton says, 'Gold is where you find it and I'm looking hard as money will permit."

HINTS TO THE WISE

Letters to our readers:

Dear Paul Devine.

Let's you and Mama tak the whole thing over—show her your good side. The one L. J. knows.

Dear David Scott.

Hurry home, Elbie, the kid is sweating heavy between the fites.

Dear Hattie W.

What have you to freeze upon? Dear Johnetta S.,

Please don't try to outdo this column.

Uncle Sam will be happy to note the birthday of Ralph McAfee. He received many birthday salutations as ice-berg after iceberg melted.

We all join to wish Fred Valentine, past treasurer of the Eminent Czars, God-speed, as he enters the fight for his country. On the lighteh side—eW hear he took a reluctant and fond farewell from the head Fine; and, in passing, we ask Criptle, why didn't YOU stay home?

In reference to Lora J.'s black dress. Why don't you wear it more often!

Miss Doris Downs is the latest addition to the younge set, and we might add a pleasant one. Someone had better get a rope on Sullivan and Armstrong and put a bib on them both.

And now, last but not least.

Here is an open letter that will come in handy:

Dear Santa Claus Please Bring . . . . Rufus Blake, sympathy; Johnny Burton, lock-jaw; Clyde Bowens, a GOOD gas; Ralph McAfee, an opportunity; Paul Devine, understanding; Ernest Griffin, friendship; J. T. Morgan, stability and freedom from 'owns'; Paul Talifierro, onions to wo with his liver (lip); Philip King, a girl friend; A. C. Duncan some shoes, and Ray Stension, a clownish nature.

As for the girls dear Santa, bring:

Philippa Jones, a pair of crutches; Lucille Harrison, some speed; Lora Jacques, affairs of her own; The Bunch sisters, a fireless coker or portable stove; Betty Benson, a man; Thelma Jackson, a hair fluffer; Carolyn Callier, a convoy; Jessie Arnold, a new opem and watch; and for Olly G. and Hattie W. a bid to the F. M.'s.

That's all Santa.

The Czars.

Say by the way--what will Jayne Harrison do? Bump C. leaves the 12th of this month. David left three weeks ago and Elbie registers the 11th of this month That leaves the field clear for M. L. Jackson or does it?

Congiatulations due to little Eddie Johnson and Bernice Cunningham on their recent engagement.

We hear Thelma J. found a new skating rink Friday. There is also good skiing and sliding.

Did you enjoy the convention Mary F. Smith and Grace Gilchrist? We hear you did.

We end hoping and praying for the speedy recovery of "Moochie" Sheppard.

The Eminent Czars

Thanks a lot boys. Now let's "Praise the Lord and Pass the First Aid". P.E.J.

U. S. MERCHANT MARINE

Sometime in November
Some where in Panama

Deary Marv,

Hi Jackson. What's the beef—chief? How are you stickin' chicken?

How are you 'uns getting along? Fine I hope.

I am one hundred per cent as usual and in a severe state of optimism.

Man o man this sea life is the cat's paw. It's all that the books said of it and more. Because this is in technicolor with sound effects, sensations and conjectures free of charge.

Panama is very colorful and picturesque, very unique.

Censorship rules do not allow any one here to talk of this place but I suppose the above is okay.

I have made enough now to buy one of those high pressure uniforms. A white one that looks the world like I am an admiral, you know black epulets brass buttons and all that. Also a whaki one that's is just as high pressure.

Man o man when I get back to L. A., I will have to hire a man with a club to go around with me and beat the "chicks" off.

Everybody down here speaks Spanish--that's preety bad--Ah tink. But Senor Don Beel—he buy one beeg Spanish boeck he learn how you speak thees musical words—he flirt weeth leetle Carmen, no. Thees ver gooed I tink, for thees leetle Senorita, she weesh Senor Don Beel that he take thees—how you say—take thees senorita to have and to hold . . . till death do you part. But Senor Don Beel he verr smart feller I tink he no weesh to be sailor weeth ties that bind--so he stay on board and sing . . . Aw la la la la la . . Senor Don Beel thees verr beautiful music, I tink.

Say man--none of those chicks have written to me yet and I sent all those wenches air mail letters to cheer them up Can you imagine that--I am chagrined, no end.

Did Jimmy Liddell join the State Guard yet—when I left he was on his way to join down at the recruiting office across the street from your place. He could have sailed with me, for they hired half of the crew after I had advised him to get his papers . . no he sees a little kitten of a girl —thats the end of his sailor aspirations. And he don't get to first base with this wren.

Well good people the time has come--at last it is time to say goodbye--goodbye to all those little cuties wherever they may be, au revoir, bon ton, cheerio and a bit of a tweet-tweet, hasta la vista, adio, bon soir, buenos noches. Oh yes this letter is to you all--no use mailing four letters to same household at 15c per letter.

Goodbye for now.

★ FAR WESTERN SOCIETY

By LAWRENCE F. LaMAR

The war has definitely put an end to the frills on all social activities here in the far west. A note of seriousness dominates most social gatherings. It is not considered fashionable to try and out splendor, or outspend one another in reckless competition for social honors when entertaining friends. Simplicity in keeping with the war effort to conserve spending and consumption of necessities is the prevailing note. Yet, folk are able to get along nicely under the necessary frugal circumstances. By Christmas we might expect the return of the tallyhoe or some other community ride of cheer.

At last it has come to light. Those "mysterious nights when Clifton Bennett has been dining alone." Many scribes have been on the verge of sounding out the absence of his beautiful wife, Hope Bennett, from his company dining out, or from the household at 3657 So. Grammercy Place. Well, Cliff told this reporter all about how sad those lonely evenings were without Hope. The admission almost brought tears into these eyes. Hope, has been visiting with her parents down at Vicksburg, Arizona all of these six weeks. No, there is no inkling of a divorce. Just a mere vacation from each other, in order to better cherish their love. Hope Bennett, is president of the fashionable Orchid Girls Club, while husband, Clifton, is president of the Army Air Corps Wheeler's Club, and member of the swank Van Courtland social club.

Mrs. Irene Fairs, charming nurse at the Los Angeles General hospital was a most delightful recipient of a cabaret party given her in honor of the occasion of her birthday last week. Her Lola Griffin, engineered the sparkling affair at the Club Alabam. At the table were Mr. and Mrs. Tommy Norris, Dr. Herbert Fairs, and the honoror Lola Griffin.

The get together party given by gracious Bea De Vaughn, Monday night in honor of the hurried departure of Lionell and Gladyce Hampton, with the orchestra for Chicago, proved one of the cleverest in the year book. Hastily summoned 14 guests arrived to make the leave taking of the noted band leader and his charming wife a happy sendoff and one to linger long in their memory. Seldom these hasty affairs turn out well. But, this one was an exception. And, what an exception. Among some of the guest present were Att'y and Mrs. Walter L. Gordon, jr., Mrs. Della McDonald, Tillie Llorenze, Patricia Reed, Estelle Sherwood, Dolly Banks, Willis Dudley, Walter Lawson, the writer and others. Lionel Hampton, opens at a Chicago night spot.

The Angel City last week won over to its environs one of Brooklyne, Illinois' most charming and gracious matrons. Mrs. Mattie Turner, of that Illinois city is visiting a trio of her sisters here, and has suddenly became enamoured with the hospitality of the Far West and its scenic beauty as to become decisive of makfriend, Lola Griffin, engineered Mrs. Turner is house guest of first one, then the other of her sisters. Mrs. Frank Harvey of 2310 9th Avenue, Mrs. Ivan Jones and Mrs. Hugh Lowery of Pasadena, pending the selection of a site for her own home.

The coming social event of the Christmas season is the presentation of Eugene Henry Huffman's play "Lost Chord" at a special showing Thursday nite, Dec. 17 at the Embassy theatre. The show will be given as an aid to a popular Christmas benefit. Socially prominent names grace the list of sponsors.

The Yuletide Tea being sponsored by the ladies of the President's Council of the State Association of Colored Women next Sunday afternoon, Dec. 13th bids fair to shine brilliantly in a series of lustrous social affairs being planned during the Christmas holidays. It will mark the first annual event of that nature by this group. The tea and program will be observed in beautiful Casa Rapheal at 453 East Adams boulevard, from 3 to 6 p. m. Mrs. Ida Mae Robertson is president of the group.

From Crockett, Texas last week came Mrs. Berdien Washington, for a visit with her brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Herman Holly of 900 East 24th street. Mrs. Washington is widely known throughout the State of Texas. Her brother with whom she is visiting is one of the city's most popular bartenders, being employed at the Harlem cafe on Central Avenue.

First case inolving the Federal Rent Control law in the Los Angeles-Orange Counties Defense-Rental Area resulted in a Los Angeles tenant's being awarded $50 in a suit against the landlord, it was disclosed today by Stanley Howell, rent attorney for the two counties.

Judge Orfa Jean Shontz rendered the verdict yesterday in favor of the tenant, Mrs. Martin Marcus, who was renting a furnished apartment at 3422 W. 9th St. The defendant "landlord" was William Walters, doing business as the Walters Co. of 3923 W. 6th

★ WOMEN IN DEFENSE

By PATRICIA CORLEY

The enemy is not only bombing us on our distant battlefields, they are bombing us here at home, too. They are bombing the butter and meat from our plates, the coffee from our cups, the gasoline and tires from our cars.

Swinging the most powerful arm of civilian defense in counter-acting these economic attacks is the block organization, says the State Council of Defense.

The block plan, through its block leaders, teaches into every home, gives direct personal contact with each family, enlists the help of each household in the community war effort.

As implied by the name, block organizations are set upon a geographic basis. In some cities in California, the actual city block is used as a unit, while in others, the neighborhood is used as an organizational nucleus.

Concerned with the war services, rather than the protective phase of civilian defense, the block organization handles everything fom salvage, transportation, war savings, services for service men, recreation, consumer interests, nutrition, health and medical care, welfare and child care, to housing, education, agriculture, labor supply and training.

Because the succesful prosecution of the war depends upon the participation of the members of eery nouseheld in the state, and with the block plan recognized as the best means of securing this cooperation, the State Council of Defense is continuing an intensive drive for a block organization in every community in California.

That progress is being made in the campaign is illustrated in results of a recent survey from 41 county and city defense councils, reporting that organizational activities have resluted in the selection of 18,103 block leaders.

Honey Pound Cake

Velvety, fine-grained

● Calling all lovers of old-fashioned pound cake! Here's Honey Pound Cake—marvelously tender and mellow-flavored—so velvety-textured you serve it in thin slices to "show it off"—yet made with only 3 eggs! Sugar saving, too. No need to ice Honey Pound Cake, and the use of part honey also adds "keep-fresh" quality.

Remember Grandmother bragged how long she creamed her ingredients for pound cake? Well, you'll brag how quickly you whisked sugar and Spry into a perfect blend. For this creamy, fine shortening blends with ingredients before you can say "Jack Robinson!"

Pack Honey Pound Cake into your war worker's lunchbox for a real treat. And be sure to serve Honey Pound Cake with lots of fresh or canned fruits, for desserts that give your family vitamins and natural fruit sugars—for vim and vigor.

Better clip the recipe, so you'll have it for your own.

Honey Pound Cake

½ cup Spry
¾ cup butter
¾ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon mace
½ teaspoon grated lemon rind
¾ cup sugar
½ cup honey
3 eggs, unbeaten
2¾ cups sifted flour
2 teaspoons baking powder
½ cup milk

Blend Spry, butter, salt, mace and lemon rind. Add sugar gradually and cream well. Add honey and beat. Add eggs, singly, beating well after each addition.

Sift flour with baking powder 3 times. Add to creamed mixture, alternately with milk, mixing after each addition until smooth. Bake in 9 x 5 x 3-inch paper-lined loaf pan in very slow oven (275°F.) 1 hour, then increase heat slightly (300°F.) and bake 1 hour longer.

For Nut Pound Cake, add 1 cup finely chopped nuts to creamed Spry, sugar and honey mixture.

'Frisco Jury Frees Father Riker

SAN FRANCISCO—Father Wiliam E. Riker, tinhorn native fascist of Northern California, was acquitted of charges of seditition by a jury of six women and six men here last Saturday.

agitator in the columns of the Riker, early exposed as a Nazi California EAGLE, had been accused of sedition by the United States government. He was charged with atempting to influence Amercian soldiers to fight a war 'only against yellow Japan,' holding that Hitler is a friend of the U. S.

Te government's case was supported with vast reams of evidence, all undenied by Riker and most of it expanded and emphasized during the trial.

It is Riker's theory that Negroes are born slaves. He maintains that inter-marriage is the greatest crime inhte world and has

MASS MEET HITS LARY, SLUM HOUSING

While a mass meeting of 1,500 Negro and white citizens roar its approval of plan to march on the Los Angeles Railway headquarters if the firm does not change its anti-Negro employment policy, 30 thousand war workers in the city were denied transportation on 300 railway vehicles which are out of service because of a so-called "man-power shortage."

The mass meeting was held Sunday evening at First AME church, Eighth and Towne avenue under sponsorship of the Negro Victory Committee, National Association for the Advancement of Colored People and the National Negro Congress.

The meet also blasted slum housing for Negro war workers which is enforced by the ridiculous quota system of Federal Housing projects in Los Angeles and the property restrictions against Negroes which bar 95 percent of the city to colored workers.

The meeting heard Troy Black, AFL figure and militant L. A. Ry. employee, chart efforts of Negro workers in the firm to secure upgrading over the past several years. He pointed out that company officials had used every pretext to deny Negro workers advancement, even charging their employment as motormen and conductors would cause "race riots."

Black struck hard at groups of divisionist Negroes, indicating that previous efforts to secure advancement had been stymied by "disunity among our own people."

Sunday's meeting, however, found 1,500 fellow citizens rallied around the L. A. Railway workers and three ministers representing Los Angeles' largest congregations wholeheartedly participating in the fight. They were Rev. Clayton D. Russell, chairman of the Negro Victory Committee and of Sunday's meeting; Rev. J. Raymond Henderson, militant pastor of Second Baptist church; and Rev. Frederick D. Jordan, who was host to the history making meet.

APPOINT COMMITTEE

A committee to present demands to the Railway firm was selected, including Troy Black, chairman; Mary Lou Rosser, head of the Victory Committee Ladies' Auxiliary; Att'y Marshall Denton, who extended his services as legal advisor from the floor; Dr. M. Cooley, prominent physician; Claude McKinney, of the NAACP; Mrs. Naomi Tucker, a housewife; and Rev. Frederick Jordan.

EDITOR SPEAKS

Eagle Editor Charlotta A. Bass proposed a mass march on Negroes and whites upon L. A. Railway if a change in policy isn't forthcoming. The proposal met a roar of approval, and Rev. Russell pointed to such a march as the next step in the effort to secure enforcement of President Roosevelt's executive order 8802 from the L. A. Ry.

That the firm's policy strikes a deadly blow at all Los Angeles

CRIME:

HOLD-UP SUSPECT ON TRIAL TODAY

Accused of a hold-up attack, Tommy Wynn, 17, of 553 East Avenue 28, former student of Lincoln High school and the son of Mrs. Elzora Wynn, popular socialite, will go on trial in department 46 of the superior court before Judge A. A. Scott today at 9 a. m.

Tommy, who has lived in this North Broadway settlement since his birth, is charged by Frances Monroe, white, of 210 East Avenue 28, of striking her on the head with an iron window sash on June 15 during an attempt to snatch her purse.

The boy, who has never been in trouble before, will strenuously deny charges and, according to Att'y W. L. Gordon, will produce witnesses to show that he was at home on the night in question.

He has a good reputation in the neighborhood and was a favorite of school teachers.

SUSPECTED KILLER OF BOXER TELLS PLEA

Simon Hollie, 22, will plead not guilty to the charge of murderindg Matthew Nathaniel Barrow, popularly known as Johnny Jones, well known pugilist who fought Henry Armstrong during his career, it was revealed today.

Hollie killed the boxer Nov. 11th at 1428 East 18th street during an altercation over the former's wife. Hollie will plead self-defense.

Judge Edward R. Brand set his trial down for Feb. 4, 1943, at 9 a. m. in department 44 of the superior court before Judge Arthur Crum.

Hollie is a native of Dallas, Texas.

CLEARS RAILROAD VET OF MORALS CHARGES

Veteran railroad employee Edward Smith, 45, of 4462 San Pedro street, was vindicated of charges which held he had committed an immoral act on the person of a juvenile girl yesterday in department 42 of the superior court.

Case against Edwards was dismissed on a motion by district attorney Russell, who told the court that "the evidence is entirely insufficient as shown by the preliminary transcript."

The accused, a prominent Legionaire, is well known in union circles. He was represented by Att'y Walter L. Gordon, jr.

On the Sidewalk

BY C. A. B.

There are many ways of looking at the refusal of the Los Angeles Railway Company to employ and upgrade Negro workers so that they may work as motormen and conductors on the city's bus and car lines.

It is undemocratic, a tangible and hurting negation of the principles for which our sons, brothers and husbands gladly die on foreign fields. Imagine the thoughts of a Negro war worker who must daily encounter the L. A. Railway's plaintive street car advertisement for needed employees and yet be aware that the 'Men Wanted' do not include Negroes, no matter how skilled, no matter how heroic in defense of our nation.

It is stupid. At a time when 300 pieces of equipment, capable of transporting upwards of 30,000 Los Angeles war workers, are lying idle because of a shortage of operators, the preservation of archaic racial prejudices is as crazy as the institution at Patton, California.

It is illegal. It violates the executive order of the commander-in-chief of the United States.

BUT THE MAIN OBJECTION, the one which ties up this fight with every citizen of this city and of this nation, is the fact that the failure to abide by the President's executive order will seriously injure the war production of this city, and this city ranks at the top among America's battle stations of production.

That the present miser-

WASHINGTON — Napoleon Edward Taylor, 31 year old Negro private of Baltimore, Md., who was the first member of the American expeditionary force to land in Africa, failed to even mention that distinction in his first letter from there to his familearned Friday.

"Enjoying the best of health and these beautiful hot days in Africa. Surprised", wa t snlyoehh Africa. Surprised", was the only reference he made to the landing.

"We were worried," Mrs. Mamie Johnson and Mrs. Fanny Underwood, his aunt and grandmother who received the letter, said today, "because it was the first mail we have had from Napoleon since early August. ACTORS ASK OWI TO SCRAP MGM'S 'TENNESSEE JOHNSON'

ACTORS CUES announced today that Ben Hecht, Zero Mostel, Hazel Scott, Joseph Schildkraut, Harold Clurman, Lee Strasberg, Luther Adler, Canada Lee, Vincent Price, Stella Adler, Patricia Peardon, Herman Shumlin, Earl Robinson, Dorothy Gish, Louis Calhern, Shepard Traube, Vyvyan Donner and many other Broadway actors, writers, directors and musicians have signed a petition to Elmer Davis of the Office of War Information, protesting Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's forthcoming motion picture "Tennessee Johnson", because it glorifies "a man who hated Negroes" and will "harm race relations and the national war effort."

The signers agree with Lowell Mellett of the Bureau of Films, OWI that "if this film accentuated the race issue in this country, it would be very unfortunate". They urge the OWI to "do everything in its power to have it scraped".

The petition in full reads:

"We, the undersigned feel that Merto-Goldwyn-Mayer is not serving the best interests of the war by issuing 'Tennessee Johnson" at this time. We agree with Lowell Mellett of the Bureau of Films, OWI that "if this film accentuated the race issue in this country, it would be very unfortunate". We are convinced beyond a shadow of doubt that it will harm race relations and the national war effort because "Tennessee Johnson" glorifies a man who hated Negroes.

Johnson once worte: "The Negroes have shown less capacity for government than any other race of people. No independent government of any form has been successful in their hands. On the contrary, wherever they have been left to their own devices they have shown a constant tendency to relapse into barbarism". We are not going to stop Hitler with films like this to help him.

"Tennessee Johnson" serves the poll-taxers and the theory of "white supremacy". It is the successor to "Birth of a Nation" which was responsible for many lynchings in the South during the last war. It must not be shown.

"We protest the release of 'Tennessee Johnson' and urge your office to do everything in its power to have it scrapped."

The complete list of signers appears below:

Leo Shull, Zero Mostel, Ben Hecht, Hazel Scott, Joseph Schildkraut, Harold Clurman, Lee Strasberg, Luther Adler, Canada Lee, Vincent Price, Stella Adler, Patricia Peardon, Sylvia Regan, Tiny Pearson, Martin Gabel, Herman Shumlin, Earl Robinson, Ivan Black, Dorothy Gish, Louis Calhern, Barney Josephson, Teddy Wilson, Emil K. Ellis, Fred Keating, John Cecil Holme, Vyvyan Donner, Jay Adler, Alexander King, Shepard Traube, Margot Stevenson, Tennessee Williams and Dean Dixon.

50,000 SENEGALESE COME TO AID OF UNITED NATIONS' AFRICAN ARMIES

From the land of Battling Siki--French West Africa--may come to reinforce the United Nations Armies some 50,000 of the most feared and effective soldiers of France, the dreaded Senegalese.

These black troops are particularly formidable in desert fighting at close quarters, with the bayonet, rifle and machine gun. Already, under Fighting French command in the Chad region, Negro troops have confirmed the almost legendary reputation they earned on the battlefields of France in the last War.

If supplied by the United States and Britain with new equipment, the Senegalese along with other veteran French Colonial troops, it is believed, can constitute a formidable addition to the armies now at the disposal of General Eisenhower in the African war.

Fighting French sources in Washington estimate that there are around 25,000 Senegfialese at Dakar and an additional 25,000 scattered throughout French territory.

It was French Colonial troops including Senegalese, who in the Chad province struck one of the first blows for French liberation by preventing a junction between the Italian Libyan Army under Marshal Grazians and the Fascist Ethiopian force under the Duke of Aosta in the early days of the French armistice.

This stroke was engineered by Felix Eboue, South American-born Negro governor of the Chad province. A native of French Guiana on the South American coast, and a brilliant graduate of French schools, Eboue was the first of the colonial administrators to defy the new Vichy Government and announce the determination of Africa to fight for a Fighting France. His declaration played a part in the subsequent actions of other administrators in

There are no short cuts to perfection and complete satisfaction. The main reason for so many broken hearts and homes in the world today is due to individuals trying to find an easier or shorter route to their goal for success and happiness.

Of course processes have been revised so that men may work faster, and get more done over a certain period of time. This is due mainly to efficient methods now being used along with precision machinery. But to attain a certain level in our daily struggle for existence we must be accurate and very careful; we must not take too many short-cuts in order to turn out a truly finished job, of life itself.

Cutting corners may gain temporary acclaim and the going may seem easier, but they only disorganize the true path to permanence and stable success.

E. R.—Dear Professor: I know you know how much I appreciate benefits received through you. Your work and the use of your products have brought me many hours of happiness. I am a little late sending for the double strength Hindu Charm Bag, but hope you will forgive me. Thanks again for all you have done.

C. B.—What do you advise me to do?

Ans.—Probing into your question I find that you should take this matter to a lawyer. A court procedings maybe avoided if you do this now.

B. M. J.—Will I be successful in making the trip I have in mind?

Ans.—A careful analysis of your question indicates the fact that you will be successful in making this trip. You will also meet some very interesting people there.

A. E. T.—I am in love with a soldier, does he care enough for me to marry me? Will he be true to me? Will it be wise for me to marry him, if he should ask me?

Ans.—Only one question is answered in the column. I suggest that you write in for a private reply.

E. A.—Will I be able to go to college after I finish school?

Ans.—There are various opportunities being offered young women now, in every field. If you make investigations I am sure you will find it will be possible for you to attend a college as soon as you finish High School.

C. J.—I ave been reading your column for sometime and I would like an answer to a question. Will I get a boy friend soon?

Ans.—Your lucky stars and Guiding Planet indicate your finding someone you will love very dearly in the near future. You are very young and should not get impatient as you have lots of time to concentrate upon boy friends.

A. A.—How can I find my shoes?

Ans.—Probing into the matter I find that a friend of yours took the shoes to the repair shop, and forgot to tell you about it. If you inquire there at home, information will be given you concerning them.

M. H.—At this time I am unable to answer your question, concerning your daughter. If you write in for a private reply, shall be more than glad to help you.

J. E. H.—If the request isn't too great, I feel that you should comply with her wish. You will both be much happier if you make this decision.

R. D.—Will I be successful in changing towns?

Ans.—It appears to me that you would be more successful if you went elsewhere for employment. A larger place will offer more advantages.

Rags Feature New Salvage Campaign

"Salvage can win or lose this war!"

With Donald M. Nelson, war production chief, thus appraising the importance of nation-wide scrap metal drives, local salvage collection activities yesterday took on a new and vital significance.

Efforts of the Newspapers' United Scrap Metal Drive which have already resulted in the delivery of thousands of tons of valuable salvage to local mill supply yards are being given added impetus.

The growing need for rags by war production plants has resulted in the launching of a new phase of the salvage program. In neighborhood stores, sponsored by district newspapers, special campaigns are being carried on to collect all sorts of cloth material.

PLAN GYM CLASS FOR HOUSEWIVES

The Compton playground is offering a free daily gym class for housewives to start Jan. 2, 1943. The classes will be conducted by a professional teacher, Sarah L. Hunter. There will also be talks on the care of the body. Everybody is welcome, and there is no charge.

Diphtheria Warning Issued Here

Parents are warned to have children immunized against diphtheria and individuals of all ages are urged to seek medical care promptly for any severe sore throat by Dr. Bertram P. Brown, Director, State Department of Public Health.

He reports an upsurge in diphtheria throughout the state. During November 114 cases were reported with 108 cases in October. This is the first time the monthly number of reported cases has exceeded 100 since January, 1940. During 1940 and 1941, an average of 69 cases of diphtheria were reported each month.

"Every one of the 768 cases which have ben reported to the Department this year was preventable," Dr. Brown declared. "There is no reason why anyone should risk severe illness and possible death because of diphtheria. It is a completely preventable disease.

"Babie should be immunized against diphtheria and smallpox during their first year. If immunization is not done in infancy, it can be done later. Parents should take children to their family physicians or to health department clinics.

DORIE MILLER CLUB CELEBRATES HEROISM OF HERO

The regular meeting was called to order by our president, Mrs. E. Goings on Sunday, Dec. 6, at which time we celebrated the feariessness of our hero, Dorie Miller, at Pearl Harbor.

There was a large number of friends and members present. The welcome address was delivered by Mrs. Rosa Dupree, secretary-treasurer. The well-planned program portrayed the many outstanding events in the life of Dorie Miller. A letter was read coming from his mother, which was graciously received by the club. Many interesting discussions were held proving very inspirational to all.

A delightful repast culminated this gala affair.

Mrs Ophelia Speaker was supervisor; Mrs. Johnson, chairman of program; Mrs. Viola C. Miller, mistress of ceremonies, and Mrs. Jean A. Smith, reporter.

Farmers Set to Wallop Axis in '43

WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 18. —Negro farmers and farm workers in Texas are getting set now to give the Axis a real wallop next year with record crop production. Scores are attending demonstrations and training meetings to learn the latest methods of doing various farm jobs from sharpening tools, and meat-cutting to caring for poultry, raising garden vegetables and controlling insects. Negro Extension workers are meeting, discussing ways and means that they can assist colored farmers in carrying out their wartime responsibilities.

Negro 4-H clubbers are in the fight, too. Fifty youngsters have received 4,250 chicks of approved laying varieties from foundation sponsored by a national commercial concern. They are going to raise these chicks and add them to their laying flock to help reach next year's goal of 4,780,000,000 dozen eggs.

Negro county agricultural Victory councils in 51 Texas counties, served by 82 colored Extension workers, are using community and neighborhood leaders to carry vital wartime agricultural information to rural families.

But the neighborhood leaders are not stopping there. Already they have supervised the collection of 223,595 pounds of scrap metal, or enough to meet the requirements for making 23 three-inch anti-aircraft guns; and the collection of 19,613 pounds of scrap rubber, 747 pounds of rags, and 2,000 pounds of tin cans, and these leaders have also helped sponsor 23 war bond and stamp rallies.

★ POST OFFICE FACTS & FIGURES

By PAUL L. HACKETT SR.

UFW of A, Local No. 191

Folks Christmas is just around the corner. Every where you go you see a bee hive of activity. The human mind seems to have but a single thought at this time and that is to get some of that dough that seems to be floating around so freely. There have been many things that we wanted to do but have not been able to do so here is our chance to work a few hours extra and gratify those wishes. For those who have failed to get work at the post office there are still jobs open at the Union Station for mail and baggage handlers. The rate of pay is 71 cents per hour and time and a half for the seventh day and all holidays. Anyone who is really interested in working see Mr. Livingston on lower floor of the baggage section of the Union Station.

The Terminal Annex is really a busy place these days, infact this is the greatest volume of business that the Post Office Department of Los Angeles has ever enjoyed. We may say that the Annex is truly cosmopolitan and that every one seems to be working in perfect harmony. It is funny sometimes that it takes necessity to prove that few things are impossible. Colored waitresses are now serving food over the counter. Business goes on as usual no one seems to have stopped eating there. There seems to be nothing unusual about the situation and everything is taken for grant.

On our trip we covered some six thousand miles. We are sorry to say that the trend of thought seemed to be all over the country how much could one earn before this war ended. Now that Christmas is approaching we should forget for a moment the almighty dollar and think of our fellowman. Christ died that we might have everlasting life. Our fellow man is overthere some where dying to perpetuate democracy. These men are not worrying about how much they are going to make before the war ends, they know that war is hell and hope it will end as soon as democracy is assured for all.

In years to come it will not be a pleasant reminder to come in contact with the maimed and disabled as a result of this war. Who knows it may be someone near and dear to you. If we are to win this war soon we must be inoculated with the spirit of self sacrifice. If we lose, your dollar wont do you one iota of good. There is a certain amount of self satisfaction that one gets out of giving unselfishly, try it out just to see how it feels. There are many indications of greater sacrifices to come which we will talk about in the near future.

Next week will tell you something about our interview with Congressmen while in the Capitol. While typing this column we received a special from our national capitol, enclosing a copy of text of President's message to Congress in support of wage increases for Federal Employees. He asks that either. Congress act to alleviate the existing situation or give him power to do so. All P.O. employees should write, or telegraph the President expressing their appreciation.

'Frisco Jury Sets Father Riker Free

spewed forth an unending stream of anti-Negro propaganda thru the California mails for years.

Riker even went so far as to accuse Father Divine, Negro cult leader, of bringing his arrest and the government's case of sedition against him.

The case was not lost on its merits. The skillful attorney for Riker painted him as an irrepressible screwball but 'certainly no enemy of the nation.' Riker's statements on the witness stand repeatedly sent the courtroom into paroxysms of laughter. Even the man's lawyer grinned widely during his cross-examination.

But there's nothing funny about Father Riker. He is the founder of a city in California which enforces the rankest discrimination, refusing to permit a Negro 'to light.' This city represents a substantial real estate investment. There's is nothing funny about the booklets of race hate which Riker freely distributes thru the state. There's nothing funny about his correspondence with Hitler and Mussolini.

able condition of transportation in Los Angeles, robbing our country of thousands of man-hours and inflicting totally unnecessary strain upon every war worker forced into the over-crowded transport lines of the L. A. Railway, could be swiftly corrected with the upgrading of Negroes now employed by the firm and the utilization of the still commanding labor pool of Negro women workers, is a fact—and a disgrace.

A group of citizens led by Rev. Clayton D. Russell and Assemblyman Augustus Hawkins visited the Housing Authority this week in what promises to be the opening gun in the campaign to wipe 'Negro quotas' from Los Angeles housing. They received real support from Negro member, Jessie Terry.

Had the opportunity to sit in the courtroom of young Judge Edwin Jefferson. He is making a record which is a credit to the bench, to the Negro race and to American democracy.

From "somewhere in Australia," Sgt. Amos Black, former local political and club figure, in a letter to the EAGLE this week, said "tell the gang I still smoke five-cent cigars."

Sgt. Black, who has been receiving the EAGLE for the past two years he has been away, sent his best regards to the staff, and sent his best wishes to Editor Charlotta A. FEPC Tells D. C. Transit Co. to Act Now on Race Bias

Motor Coach Employees of America, AF of L, which represents the Transit workers, including Negro employees.

The Company was told that "there is no indication that your request is intended to accomplish the effectuation of the provisions of Executive Order 8802." On the contrary, the Committee believes "That this request is intended to postpone the date when the employment practices of the Capital Transit Comany will be modified to conform with its obligation to employ persons solely on the basis of their qualifications and without regard to race, creed, color, or national origin."

On November 28, the Committee on Fair Employment Practice, after a number of conferences with officers of the Company and of Division 689, AASERM CEA, directed the Company to take seven steps, not later than December 5, which would bring its employment practices into line with national policy as expressed in Executive Order 8802.

On December 5, E. D. Merrill, President of the Company, asked postponement of the effective date, at the same time stating that the company is "extremely apprehensive of the effect which the carrying out of your order might have on the service rendered." The company also expressed fear that its "present employees may resign their jobs."

The Committee especially called attention to the fact that J. G. Bigelow, president of the Union, and Attorney Sefton Darr, Counsel for the Union, had joined with the Company urging that the present policy of refusing to employ Negroes be continued as conductors and motormen. It was also revealed that the Union officials stated that they appeared not as representatives of the Union but as "Citizens of the United States and residents of Washington, D. C."

The Committee yesterday asked that it be promptly advised of the Transit Company's compliance, and continued—

"As stated in its letter of November 28, it is the Committee's view that the apprehensions which you express with respect to the loss of many of your present employees should the committee's order go into effect can be removed if the officers of Division 689, Amalgamated Association of Street, Electric Railway and Motor Coach Employees of America were to assume their full responsibility in this matter.

"The committee has called attention to the fact that Mr. Bigelow, president of Division 689, and Mr. Darr, Counsel for the Association, when they appeared before it and joined with you in urging a continuance of your company's policy to refuse to employ Negroes as bus and street car operators solely because of their race and without regard to their qualifications, stated that they appeared not as officers of the Union but as "Citizens of the United States and residents of Washington, D. C.

"The committee is aware of the fact that the Amalgamated Association of Street, Electric Railway and Motor Coach Employees of America prohibits discrimination against persons because of their race or color. It understands that the 560 Negroes now employed by the Capital Transit Company are members of this Union and through their payment of dues contribute to the salary and compensation of Union officials. It believes that the Messrs. Bigelow and Darr, in their appearance before the committee, divested themselves of their official status with the Union because of their recognition of their responsibility to the Union and to all of its members.

"The Committee firmly believes that these officers and other officers of the Union will assume their full responsibility to the International Union Organization, to all of the members of Division 689, as well as for their specific obligation under Executive Order 8802, to prevent an interruption of the Transit Company's operations when the company takes the steps outlined in the Committee's directions of November 28.

"In keeping with your action in giving out to the newspapers the information contained in your letter of December 5, the Committee is giving out for publication the substance of this letter."

Mass Meeting Hits LARY, Slum Housing, Too

war industry was indicated by the fact that 300 pieces of railway equipment with a maximum carrying power of 30,000 persons, are lying idle because of the company's manufactured manpower shortage. Eight U-cars have been removed from the Central avenue line.

Full documentation of the situation has been forwarded to the Fair Employment Practice Committee in Washington, which recently commanded employment of Negroes on the Central Transit line in Washington, D. C.

HOUSING STRUCK

Housing for Negro workers was struck by the meeting. It was shown the Negro defense industry workers must travel several miles daily because real estate interests confine them to a racial ghetto, five per cent of the city in the center of worst slum conditions. Needed transportation facilities are thus jammed to capacity, while available housing near defense plants is unoccupied. Quota systems in housing projects have the same effect. Negro war workers are forced to live in sub-normal, frequently CONDEMNED property while there are vacancies in Federal Housing units—vacancies which Negroes may not occupy because their "black quota" has already been filled. Illimitable damage to the health of war workers involved in this hateful system was emphasized Sunday.

The meeting voted unanimously for demands upon the City Council, Board of Supervisors, City and Federal Housing Authorities and the County Grand Jury, to halt property restrictions and Housing Authority quotas as a measure vital to victory.

Assemblyman Augustus Hawkins charted proposed legislation he will present to the next session of the legislature. He will submit laws to:

1—Outlaw defense industry discrimination in California.

2—Outlaw property restrictions in California.

3—Outlaw discrimination by public utilities in California.

4—Outlaw discrimination by government agencies in California.

Roaring approval was expressed for the hard-hitting Assemblyman's program, called by Eagle editor Bass "a battle plan for our nation's victory."

Hawkins was appointed head of the Victory Committee Housing committee. Others volunteering for service were Mrs. Noreen Forney, John E. Hargrove, of the AFL, Mrs. Anna B. Johns, 157 W. 48th street; Mrs. Hallie M. Randall, 1555 East 51st street; Mrs. Venora Mayo, 100½ East 55th street; and Miss Annie Mae Porter.

An attempt to smear Negro Housing Authority member, Mrs. Jessie Terry, was scotched by Victory Committee spokesmen. It was pointed out that Mrs. Terry had been active in lifting quota restrictions in the Housing project in individual cases and that public pressure would only "strengthen her capable hands to knock out the quota system entirely."

The public was urged to rush telegrams to the Fair Employment Practice Committee in Wasington, D. C., to protest "sabotage of victory" in the L. A. Railway policy which denies Negro workers upgrading while 300 public vehicles lie idle and thousands are crammed into behind-schedule busses and street cars all over the city.

Equatorial Africa has since become an important reservoir for military manpower for the Allies. A Fighting French Army has been built up in these regions under the direction of General Leclercq, one of de Gaulle's ablest officers. These troops have already proved their excellent fighting spirit in daring attacks on Italian outposts in Libya and Eritrea and thousands were rushed to the Western Desert when General Rommel's forces threatened the conquest of Egypt.

DENIES HE ROBBED DEPARTMENT STORE

Charged with a wild pilfering spree in the Broadway-Hollywood department store, Justin A. Middleton, 28, of 972 East 36th street, was arraigned in dept. 44 of the superior court Monday and accused of petty theft. He has been convicted previously on a similar charge.

According to Margaret Shaffner, 532 South Coronado street, saleslady in the fashionable store, Middleton came into the establishment a little before 8 p. m. on Nov. 20 on the lower street floor. After looking at some bags in the men's clothing department, he started up the stairway, she said, reached over and grabbed a bag and started out of the store with it. When he reached the street and was accosted by store detectives, it is said he attempted to throw the bag back into the store.

He denies all charges.

Private Taylor's wife, the former Ethel Oliver, of Georgia is living in New York. He has three sisters, Mrs. Genevieve Jordan, teacher at the Montgomery State Teachers College in Montgomery, Ala., Mrs. Willie B. Strong and Miss Mattie Sue Taylor, both of Georgia. His parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Taylor, died several years ago.

Prior to his enlistment in the army, Taylor was employed by a Baltimore meat packing firm and attended Douglas Evening High School.

Private Taylor won his distinction in Africa because he was the first man in line aboard the first series of canvas-topped Oigters which carried several detachments of Negro troops across the most treacherous sandbar on the West African Coast and landed them on the Liberian Shore, acording to reports.

Major C. S. Ward, for whom Private Taylor is orderly, urged him to memorize a one sentence greeting to Liberians as he landed. As soon as he landed, Taylor did exactly that. He proclaimed—"Liberians, we are here to join hands and fight together until this world is free of tyrannical dictatorships."

Allegria Girls

The Allegria Girls club, under the auspices of the AWVS, presented a Christmas tree, Sunday, Dec. 13 to the boys of the 775th Chemical Division. The occasion was the dedication of their new recreation hall. The music was furnished by the Rhythm Rascals, and the Covan Kiddies furnished the show.

The affair was highly successful. The boys seemed delighted with the show which was highlighted by Miss Ella Thomas, comedian.

Mrs. Helen Blaine, president of the Allegria Girls Club was very happy over the success of the affair, and was grateful to the many hostesses who joined the club girls as partners for the boys. Mrs. Eddie (Rochester) Anderson preesnted the Xmas tree, Marcus Slater presided as master of ceremonies. Miss Jacqueline Woods was introduced by Miss Laura Slayton, chairman of the AWVS and each made an interesting speech to the boys.

Much of the success of the affair was due to the untiring efforts of Miss Woods.

Willie Covan topped off the program with one of his rhythmic dances. Also appearing were Phyllis Grace-Love, Jean Weber, La Verne Weaver, Claudine Stasher, Patricia Washington, and Elzie Emmanuel.

The officers of the club who also worked untiringly were: Mildred Bolden, Melvina Ewing and Florence Covan.

Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Davis Celebrate 25th Wedding Anniversary

One of the most outstanding events of the season was the formal reception given by Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Davis in their palatial home on East 48th Street. The home was artistically decorated with huge white chrysanthemums, silver candlabra held tall white candles that reflected a radiant glow and added to the beauty of the occasion.

In the receiving line with the Davises were Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Henderson. Mrs. Davis was attired in a beautiful bridal gown of white silk crepe and cut velvet, and held a white Bible and corsages of white orchids. Mrs. Henderson wore a beautiful gown of baby blue chiffon and held a bouquet of white gladiolas.

A very impresive and unique ceremony was conducted by the Rev. M. Anfrance Reed. Host and hostesses were the Narcissus Art and Literary Club, Mesdames Margret Carroll, Mamie Lowe, Corre Lee Smock, Mr. and Mrs. John Brackin.

The prominence of Mr. and Mrs. Dais was evidenced by the many beautiful gifts received from the two hundred fashionable guests that attended the reception. Many congratulatory messages are still being received.

TOWN AND GOWN CLUB HOLDS INSTALLATION PARTY

Peace on Earth, Goodwill toward all men--with this sentiment in mind. The Town and Gown Club open the Yuletide season with their 2nd Installation Party, given at the Rumpus Room on Sunday evening, December 6, 1942.

Their guests represented the "Whos Who" of social clubdom in Los Angeles. Wesley Bly was their most able master of ceremonies, and installed the new officers amid gaiety and the spirit of Christmas.

It is the wish of the Town and Gown that they may always be privileged to give their service without stint to their community, with the continued cooperation and goodwill of their members many friends and associates.

A very Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year to you all.

VELMA CARRIE MARSH WEDS ROSCOE HAROLD BECKS HERE

Wedding bells chimed serenely for Miss Velma Carrie Marsh and Mr. Roscoe Harold Becks as they were united in holy matrimony by Rev. Baxter Carroll Duke at 2:45 p. m., Sunday, Dec. 6, at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. Frances Marsh, 133 W. 57th street.

The couple stood on a grass mat between two huge baskets of white flowers. In front of them was a bridal altar draped with white satin, gladiolas and chrysanthemums against a lattice and smilax.

The bride wore a trailing white satin princess fitted gown with leg of mutton sleeves. It was trimmed with tiny pleated satin edgings around the hem lin, sleeves, and its semi-V neckline. Clasped around her neck was a tiny gold chain to which was attached a small gold heart. She wore a fingertip white veil. Her bouquet was of bargardians and gardenias with a white orchid in the center; the bouquet had suspending bagardians linked to it by satin ribbons.

I blessed the day the Gods, thoroughly annoyed,
Mercifully took you out've my life, made you into an angry wave
To beat against the Pacific shores . . .
Of late, somehow, I've grown wistful about you!
How I've longed for relentless spray again in my face!
In thundering place of this placid ankle-deep pool
Now in my life—now gurgling gently at my feet . . .

Upon listening to the brilliant piano work, twin-style, of Margaret Bond and Calvin Jackson, Sunday, at 8th & Towne: Here, now, is something refreshing and continental in the way of delightful entertainment for we villagers who have become yawning at the usual run o' the mill music makers! How we'd love to finger a glass of vermouth an' listen an' watch this duo at their keyboards (at ebony grand pianos, would you say?) in the wee sma' hours . . . playing Faure's Ballade, a dash of Gershwin, "April in Paris," then into Peter Ilyitch's B it Concerto . . . ahhh! . . . I wonder, too, if anyone else has given but vague thought to a pair of our own artists doing the concert stage? when the time comes, we'll be among the rapt listeners to Bond and Jackson . . . and til then, we'll be content to reflect in our beer at the Hollywood club they're now working—so enchantingly well.

Notebook havings: John Simmons goes into the army as a lab technician within the next 3 wks or so . . . Likeable Martin Hewlett got a chance to hold his son and accept more congrats on parenthood before he left for Ft. McArthur yestdy morn (Thurs.). We hated to see Bubber (Alvin) Payne leave . . . Birthdays on the 29th: Daisy Hudson . . . Lloyd Courtney is on the high seas as a member of the Merchant Marine, destination unknown.

The State Guard's "young eligibles" have at last come into their own! Seems as if the girls have but recently discovered the 7th Reg. has a mob of young men, and now can't seem to get in on enough gatherings. That's good news, for just why the town's most RARING things thought the State Guard was made up of grandfathers I've never known! Those lads deserve equal social consideration, to say nothing of the fact they VOLUNTEERED. All of 'em are doing a grand job throughout this vital state of ours. Many are in spots devoid of any form of social hooray . . . if any of our village maidens are bidden to cheer 'em up, they really should pitch in . . . for the 7th Reg. IS a good investment, gels!

Reggie Beane will return from NY with his mother and sister and settle in these parts . . . WAAC enlistee Myrtle Anderson won't leave for Des Moines til later in the month . . . Twas twins (boy and girl) for the Rex Stewarts . . . Hearty agreement: The neighborhood theaters campaign against rowdies and thugs has our full, lusty support for wholesale extermination of that species! . . . Recommended: "No Day of Triumph," by J. Nostalgia the other midnite reminiscing with Harvey Brooks over that unbelievable organ in Wanamaker's store in Philly and the incomparable cinnamon buns to be found only in that town . . . ahhh!

Sunday Parade . . . Gladsome reunion with Della McDonald, so terribly smart in burgundy and black and carrying furs, and giving us a smile to match; gladsome hullo, too, with talented Thelma Taylor; long gab with schoolmarm Bernice Eblon, trim in her AWVS outfit, and happier than we've ever seen her; we're introduced to capable Verna Deckard, buried in a handsome fur coat; we dine with the Rev. Bryants in the Blue Room, gab at length with well-tailored Jimmy Robinson and Nancy Harris, whom we've always thought one of the more attractive debs about the village (she's a schoolmarm, now); later, we watch Laura Slayton go about her AWVS duties and mentally marvel at her superhuman stamina; later yet, crossing the avenoo, somebody yels from a passing car, but we know not who twas, so continue on our way to our almost-gasless car; earlier, noting Paul Williams and his two daughters at 8th & Towne and remarking to a nearby crony how lovely they're sure to be as young women. They both have interesting faces; a hug from Mrs. Mozelle Moore, who we love dearly, and, later, munching a cookie before her crackling hearthside and hearing her trying to decide on a lengthy Seattle trip . . . .

Over the weekend, suddenly coming face to face with Rose Bairpaugh, and we're rooted to the spot. Rose, let me chronicle, has done a cocoon act and certainly has emerged into a chic, expensively dressed and eye-filling young woman! We couldn't believe our eyes. She's taken on a becoming sophistication, too, and our last view of her she was dashing—but dashing—into a waiting car, which held two males, attentive solely to Rose . . . well, all right, now! . . .

Mutter: How nice twould be if folk, about to present a musical program publicly, would see to it that a first-class piano is used, not one of these godawful things . . . Celestus King jr. made 95 in his exam for the air corps, was the only race lad to pass, and was among the few (outve a large number) selected for training . . . Noting Fay Jackson at the Garner testimonial, she enjoys choral work immensely . . . Nice, running into glittering Lydia Burwell Johnson, in town from Frisco, by plane . . . Lydia was tightly fitted in a yellow sweater when we met and so impressively weighed down I did fear she'd topple over, but forward . . . Nice, too, running into Eddie Beale, who is in town again. A bid from him to c'mon out to the Hollywood spot where his trio plays. Herb Jeffries is there, a vastly improved Jeffries so we're forewarned.

Here's a lil something we meant to insert during our recent cross country safari . . . In St. Louis there is a magnificent 38-foot mural in the (pale-face) Masonic Temple, created by Jessie Housley, who is one of our own. She won the commission through competition, and her race wasn't known 'til she appeared for the award. But she came thru with flying colors just the same. The mural was unveiled in Sept. of '41 . . .

But come now, let's join the gang and frolic with the Alphas Satd. nite . . . . Lawdy, I didnt think there were enough men left in town to have a dance!

Unlike 1917, U.S. Able to Fight in '42

At the end of the first year of American participation in this war one fact emerges clearly — the United States was better prepared to fight the enemy this time than it was in the last war, the Office of War Information said today.

Instead of waiting for direct provocation, the United States, recognizing the defenders of its own interests in advance, helped arm its friends and then proceeded to enlarge and train its own army, turn out munitions and start warships down the ways against the day when the Axis would make war on America.

As a result of the American preparedness program which got under way about the time France was toppling, the United States had spent more money for war purposes three months after its entry into the war than it did during its entire 20 months' participation in the last war. Specifically, by February, 1942, $20,000,000,000 had been spent in the current war compared with the $18,966,000,000 figure covering the period starting April 6, 1917, when America entered the war, down to Armistice Day in November, 1918.

Organize for War Jobs, Training

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Dec. 18—Leading spokesmen of the Negro citizens of this important Southern center of war industries have joined hands in a determined drive to equalize defense training and job opportunities for Negro men and women.

At a meeting last Friday, held in the office of a local attorney, a Citizens Committee on Jobs and Training was formed and a program launched to break through the barriers of discrimination in the training, employment and upgrading of Negroes for skilled jobs in the war industries. The group elected W. H. Hollins, local Real Estate and Insurance Broker as Chairman, J. E. Kelly, Grand Secretary of the IBPOE of W Elks) Vice Chairman, and Dr. J. E. Jackson, jr. of the Southern Negro Youth Congress as Secretary-Treasurer. The Committee is composed of labor, church, educational, and business leaders of the community.

The Committee addressed a resolution to War Manpower Commission Chief, Paul V. McNutt and Dr. Malcolm McLean of the President's Committee on Fair Employment Practice urging prompt action to 1—enlarge the opportunities of Negroes to share in the government financed program of Vocational Training for Defense Workers, 2—to take steps to see that the local USES place trained Negro workers in skilled jobs, and 3—to enforce the President's Executive Order No. 8802 against those local companies which still refuse to upgrade and train Negro workers and who continue to bar Negro skilled workers from employment.

"Great importance is attached to the formation of this Committee on Jobs and Training in light of the fact that the Bechtel-McCone-Parsons Corporation will soon have in operation a huge Airplane Modification Plant employing some 17,000 workers, 60 per cent of whom will be women. Negroes in Birmingham are united in their determination to obtain an equal share of skilled jobs in this essential war production factory", declared W. H. Hollins, Chairman of the Citizens Committee.

The Committee is collecting thousands of applications from Negroes who want to take Defense Training courses to qualify for skilled jobs in the new Airplane Plant and the other vital industries of the area.

Among the members of the Committee on Jobs and Training are: Dr. E. W. Taggart, National Board Member, NAACP; Mr. Ebb Cox, Field Representative, CIO; L. H. Britt, Organizer, AF of L; Oscar W. Adams, Supreme Chancellor of the Knights of Pythians; C. V. Hendley, Grand Master, Alabama Masons; Reverends D. F. Thompson, G. Howard Levant, and J. W. Goodgame, pastors of large Baptist churches; Father J. C. Perry of the Episcopal Church; Att'y A. D. Shores; Molton H. Gray, head of Alabama Chapter of American Legion; President W. A. Bell of Miles Memorial College; S. J. Bennett, Manager, North Carolina Life Insurance Co.; H. D. Coke, Radio Commentator; W. S. Randall, Secretary, Acipco, YMCA; Robert E. Durr, Editor, Weekly Review and Emory O. Jackson, Editor, Birmingham World.

AGE PENSION LIBERALIZED BY STATE DEPARTMENT

By VERNON KILPATRICK
Assemblyman, 55th District

Most people are aware that some change for the benefit of our senior citizens has taken place but are at a loss to know how or where to learn of these benefits. It is my hope to here reveal some of the client's rights under the law and new State Social Welfare Board rulings.

VERNON KILPATRICK

With the assistance of your own assemblyman, Augustus F. Hawkins, and others, many improvements were written into the state law two years ago, and it is my hope to write many more into it in the forthcoming session early next year.

As every one should know, the word pension as applied here is a misnomer. Neither the state law nor the Federal Social Security act make any reference to pensions, but rather Old Age Assistance. However, by the constant reference to "pension," the thought is ever present in the public mind, and as a consequence, the state law does actually take on a pension slant or complex.

It should be known that the actual operation of Old Age Assistance locally is in the hands of Los Angeles County and the Social Welfare Board has the final word in any dispute.

Should a recipient feel aggrieved, he would do well to lose no time in filing an appeal before the State Board, which has offices in the Washington building, Third and Spring streets, Los Angeles. This is the client's means of redress when county visitors seem not to comply with the board ruling on the state law.

In matters of appeal, the county is quite often overruled; example, last June, the State Social Welfare Board decided against the county in 53 out of 56 cases, the county being supported in only three.

However, it should be plain at the outset that any recipient of aged aid, only those who have no outside income or are able to earn or live in their own homes or who have friends likely to bestow gifts upon them could benefit from the changes recently made by State Board rulings.

Any recipient who receives less than $40.00 in warrants or who has an opportunity to earn or otherwise acquire outside income should investigate his possibilities under the "budget" system. It should be remembered, however, that in no case can the payments from state or federal funds exceed $40.00 without further action by the legislature.

We here copy exact wording from the State Board Bulletin of Sept. 26, 1942, No. 143 Revised B:

"It is important that each recipient be informed of the new policy and that an explanation be given of the possible advantages accruing to him should he elect to have his total income applied to his total needs as determined by a budget guide. Therefore a statement should be mailed to each recipient of aid not later than November 1, 1942.

The object is to secure grants of aged aid in an amount which, when added to their income, will meet the entire need of the recipient of aged aid as determined.

The range of items in the guide shall be adjusted to the quantity and quality required by each individual recipient in determining his continuing need. Consideration of income and resources will be made in the light of the total need so established.

"The guide will, of course, be indicative only and will be modified as the operating experience of the agency dictates such modification.

BUDGET SCHEDULE

"The following schedule has been set up as a guide for measuring the requirements of an individual living alone: Food—$15.85 or $22.49, if all meals are purchased in restaurants; Housing—as paid, for example, $20.00; Utilities—as paid, with the following minima, Electricity, $1.72; Gas, $2.10; Water, $1.50; Heat, $2.00; Household Operations, $3.31; Personal Needs, $10.00; Clothing, $4.57; Transportation, $3.00. Total, $64.05.

If special needs be established, then those special needs may be added to the above total of $64.05. Doctor bills, medicine, nurses, dental, optical, or other such services or merchandise are special items of need. In such cases a statement from the doctor or other practitioner, setting forth the total bill, when possible, and the weekly or monthly payments will suffice as proof of need.

When a recipient owns his own unincumbered home, taxes and street assessments and up-keep and the rental value may be calculated to his need budget. If one has his own home on which he must make payments, the amount of the payments will be used instead of rent, along with any other expense items.

If one lives in a rest home where the charge is $40.00, the allotment of $4.57 for clothing and $10.00 for incidentals would establish his need of $54.57. In this case, as in all others, any income would be deducted from the total need of $54.57; thus he might have a $20.00 income and still draw $34.57. Since, however, the state department considers any part of a dollar as a whole dollar, he could draw even $35.00 from the state.

Also it should be known that when it has been proven that the county has been in error over a period of months, but now rectifies its mistakes, all increases are payable for each month such improper payments were made. Example: One client received 12 retroactive aid checks amounting to about $480.00.

Thus it is plain that there have been many improvements in the California pension for our senior citizens with many more for the coming session, I hope.

Next week I shall compare our California Pension with the Washington State act and the advantages of each and new legislation which I shall introduce early next month for our senior citizens and for those persons who are ever so much worse off, County Relief Clients, whose budget is now about $25.00

The calendar for the coming year was planned by the girls, and many activities are in store. First the organization of a bowling team to be followed by a Cristhmas party for our men in the armed forces.

The next meeting will be held Sunday, December 20, at the home of Miss Ruth Cage.

Will Speak Here Sunday Afternoon

John Russell Butler, above, president of the Southern Tenant Farmers Union, will be presented in a public mass meeting Sunday, December 20, at 2 p. m. at the People's Independent Church of Christ, 18th and Paloma streets.

In addition to the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, the arrangements for the meeting are being made by Workers Defense League, Los Angeles Urban League, Dining Car Employees and other organizations.

The meeting romises to be of community interest in that Mr. Butler spear-heads in the fight to secure passage of the Anti-Poll Tax Bill and for many years championed the right of all workers, both Negro and white. He has first hand information on the evils of the Poll Tax system. You should not miss it.

Special music has been arranged for the occasion.

The public is cordially invited to attend.

Theatre Usher Held on Girl's Charges

Willie Sparks, 20 year old youth of 1565 E. 21st street and employed as an usher at a local theatre, has been arrested by Newton Street Juvenile Officers and charged with statutory rape on complaint of Dorothy Ruth Williams, young high school girl. The young woman claims that Sparks took her to a rooming house on Central Avenue on the night of December 8th and there attacked her. Young Sparks however, denies the charges and states that the girl aproached him for aid and stated that she had been put out of her home and was afraid to return. He has retained Attorney Curtis C. Taylor to represent him.

This year the holiday season finds millions of our fellow-citizens in the armed forces, millions more in the factories and shipyards who serve those gallant men at the front.

There is no finer Christmas gift that can be sent to our fighting forces than the greatest output possible of planes, ships, and supplies, bringing Victory closer.

The Long Distance lines of the Nation are serving this gigantic program by handling a tremendous number of calls, the greatest in telephone history.

Big as it is, the network of Long Distance lines has no margins this year for purely personal calls; nor can more lines be constructed. The copper and other materials that would require are needed still more by our fighting men.

In recent months, your co-operation in keeping Long Distance calls to the essential has helped to keep these lines clear for war calls. We ask now that you continue this assistance, over the holidays especially. To war-busy centers, please make only calls that are necessary.

We appreciate your friendly help and understanding.

★ FIRST AID DON'TS

(This is the third in a series on "What Not to Do Until the Doctor Comes." Approved by the American Red Cross, we are printing them in the belief that untrained aid can be terribly dangerous. For standard courses in first aid, apply to your Red Cross chapter.—Ed.)

If the patient is NOT BREATHING (and not merely unconscious) don't waste another second. This is one thing that can't wait for the doctor. Start artificial respiration at once.

Don't roll the victim over a barrel, don't worry if his mouth is clamped or not, don't bother if his clothes are wet or dry, tight or loose. Don't give him smelling salts!

Put him flat on his stomach, his face turned to one side, straddle his calves, put your hands on the small of the back, your little finger in line with his lowest rib and the tips of your fingers out of sight. Then swing forward, with your elbows straight, until your arms are straight up and down. Let go. Repeat this slowly and regularly 12 times per minute—for FOUR hours if necessary. And when he starts to breathe, don't let him sit up. He may die of heart failure. Remember, you can also "drown" if your chest is depressed by bomb debris!

You may find out where First Aid classes are being conducted in your neighborhood by contacting Stephen O'Donnel, American Red Cross, 1200 S. Vermont avenue, FI-5261.

If no class is in session, an adequate supply of instructors is available to teach new classes.

Things to Come: 1943

As the demands of offensive warfare all over the globe require increasing centralization of American war economy so that every worker will be bound to some task directly contributing toward victory, the year 1943 poses an historic challenge to the Negro community of Los Angeles.

Economic changes, profound and unprecedented, are occuring in this community before our very eyes. An inability to utilize the opportunities and responsibilities of these radical changes must not impair the nation's victory or,--and it is to say the same thing,--the realization of freedom for our people.

Greatest of the changes taking place in Los Angeles is the stupendous shift in the position of Negro women. Those who were thrice persecuted: they were poor; they were women; and they were black--are now catapulted into a position of strategic leadership for the whole city's Negro population.

As Negro women become industrial workers in plants creating essential war materials, they are leaving behind them forever the shackles of degrading domestic employment.

The shift in economic and political position is vast. Previously the bulk of Negro women worked for individual families performing the least important but most back-breaking work in our society. They were helpless under the dictation of thousands of employers. The conditions of their labor precluded effective labor organization. Because of this weakness, this lack of practical organization, every benefit of progressive labor legilation specifically excepted "domestic employment."

This was the position of rank-and-file Negro women: politically impotent, bound for subsistence to an occupation which daily flayed their self-respect, which offered no hope of advancement or upgrading.

Today, behold the change!

Thousands of Negro women are employed in THE MOST ESSENTIAL WAR PRODUCTION INDUSTRIES. They are receiving a high wage. They are learning the dignity of skilled, important labor. They are learning that self-respect which flows naturally from the performance of work which is vital to the survival of our whole society, our whole nation . . .

But of greatest significance is the fact that they are now in a position to be drawn into the full stream of the progressive labor movement whose heroic efforts in behalf of Negro liberation are the hope of our people.

The responsibility for the correct direction of Negro women in labor bodies, especially those which have demonstrated an aggressive apporach to Negro problems, is one which settles upon the whole community. That Labor is the only effective mass organization which, by common interest, can be drafted into the defense of our rights is clear.

This clarity, however, does not extend to workers new to industry and totally unacquainted with Labor. Here is the job of ministers, newspapers, clubs, civic organizations. 1943 must be the ORGANIZATION year. Every Negro worker in industry must find his way into the ranks of organized Labor within the next twelve months. This goal must become a project for us all, everyone.

Responsibility rests also upon Labor. The approach to Negro workers cannot be couched in labor-as-usual terms. Most Negro workers are receiving wages higher than they have ever known. This, then, is not the key. What is imperative, however, is that Labor recognize its SPECIAL duties to Negro workers, The simple statement that Labor believes in "equality" isn't worth a tinker's dam. Negroes are a submerged group in the body politic. Before there can be any talk of equality, a militant campaign to hoist colored workers up to the levels of equal treatment before the law must be made.

Labor cannot afford to take the position of a friendly endorser of the fight for Negro rights. Labor must become the forefront of that struggle. It must rally ALL its membership to oppose property restrictions. It must rally ALL its membership to oppose the kind of discrimination typified by the Los Angeles Railway Company.

The benefits of alliance between the Negro and Labor are huge. That there has ever been division between labor in a black skin and labor in a white skin has been a prime stumbling block in the way of all American porgress. It is only through such unity that victory may be won, in the first place, and a durable peace DEMANDED at the war's end.

Conspiracy in the Capital

As dangerous a conspiracy as has ever threatened the United States is today hatching at the nation's capital.

Grown bold by the November 3 election, which they falsely interpret as a go-signal for reaction, reactionaries, defeatists and conservatives have set about the organization of a bloc in Congress strong enough to stall the entire war effort. Cornerstone of the capital conspiracy is the bold alliance of Southern poll-taxers with Northern reactionaries of both the Democratic and Republican parties. This bloc, threatening to control both houses, is joined in opposition to the win-the-war policies of the Roosevelt Administration and is largely controlled by U. S. Big Money (Fascists) who oppose the war secretly and dream of doing business with Hitler.

That the liberation of Negro people and winning of the war are inseparable is nowhere better demonstrated than in the fact that the anti-war, anti-Roosevelt gang forming at the capital centers its attack upon the Negro people.

George Rothwell Brown, Hearst Washington correspondent, jubilantly pointed to the Dixie Democrat-Northern reactionary coalition this week. Hearst papers are the rankest enemies of Negroes and the war effort. Daily Hearst papers print open sedition and Federal investigation of the Hearst press has been demanded by scores of win-the-war groups.

Significantly for our group, it is notorious Gene Cox, of Georgia, who is the prime House spokesman of the new coalition.

Another sign of the times was the New York speech of Alabama's Gov. Dixon stating that the Roosevelt Administration was "blasting the very foundations of Southern society." What he meant, of course, was the efforts by Roosevelt Labor and win-the-war forces to extend job opportunities to Negro workers in the South.

The new, treacherous allignments in Washington are a direct result of the failure of the Pepper-Geyer anti-poll tax bill to pass in the U. S. Senate.

They also represent the last all-out efforts of the American section of international Fascism to block a full, offensive warfare against Hitler. It is defeatist to its core. It is designed to foster either the military defeat of the United States or such a fundamental deterioration of our military position that a cry for "negotiated peace" might successfully be raised. Such a negotiated peace with Hitler would solidify the system of world imperialism and its lusty god-child, Fascism.

History has played a tremendous prank upon American Fascists. Many of them, lords of great industrial firms, find themselves in the ludicrous position of producing arms designed to destroy the very world which is their own cherished ideal.

Furthermore, the Fascist section of American Big Money is outweighed by decisive sections of U. S. capital, the Morgans and Rockefellers, for instance, who understand that Hitler Fascism threatens equally ALL classes of Americans.

But the native Fascists, by careful manipulation of the red-scare, the Labor-scare, and the Negro-scare are building up a balance of power in the Congress of the United States which has tremendous weight and is a personal danger to every woman and child in the nation.

To the Negro people and win-the-war forces, the challenge is clear. The very destiny of our country, its survival, is based upon an immediate home-front offensive against Fascist America. The people are for winning the war, for the complete annihilation of Hitlerism. Against this strength, organized and conscious, no capital conspiracy may prevail.

man, woman and child in the nation.

What is needed is a direct, common-sense appeal to the patriotic millions of our country.

Had the President carried our fight against the poll tax to the people as he did the Farm-Labor fight, his greatest Congressional enemies might be facing extinction today rather than the holiday of obstruction which they now contemplate.

For Negro America, the issue is clear. A new anti-poll tax bill must be crammed through the next Congress. The people can dot it. For victory, they MUST do it!

CHRISTMAS DAY: '43—
And Christ, Our Lord,
Who led a revolution
Against Fascist hordes of Rome
Is not ashamed
That free blood flows for liberty
Or abashed
That tyrants, murderers, authors of CRUCIFIXION for a billion men
Will be buried
In their own gore.

Dark Laughter . . . . . BY OL HARRINGTON

"Now look here Bootsie. You ain't gonna quit me this year just 'fore Xmas, like you did last year."

YOUTH LEADER JAILED, BEATEN BY ALA. COPS AS JIM CROW SIGN MOVED

FAIRFIELD, Ala., Dec. 18—For the "crime" of refusing to tell an irate bus driver which one of the Negro passengers had removed the "Colored-White" board-standard of jim-crow in Southern transportation 27 year old Mildred McAdory was arrested, brutally beaten and held in jail over night incommunicado.

Miss McAdory, a native of Birmingham, is Director of the Fairfield Youth Center and staff member of the Southern Negro Youth Congress. She had spent the day in Fairfield making preparations for a "Tin-can collection", a project undertaken by the Fairfield Negro youth as a part of the Victory Scrap Drive.

Recounting her experience, a story of brutality and violence against Negroes on the part of bus operators and police, Miss McAdory said:

. . . "Across the top of this bus there was a black line indicating 'white' in front, 'colored' behind. However, the driver had placed another jim-crow board behind this seat in the colored section. Originally there was no screen on these busses. I sat behind the Board. A Negro couple sat in front of the board. The driver turned around and said to them, 'You'll have to get behind that board'." (There were several empty seats in the white section and no seats in the colored section). The couple asked for their fare back, 'I can't give you your fare back', the driven answered. They got off the bus.

"Some person moved the board and placed it on the seat, and two men sat in the seat on the board. Later one of the men put the board on the floor. The driver came back to the man and said, 'You'll have to get behind that board.' One man answered, 'There's the line up there'. The driver then got off the bus called the police who arrived in a few minutes. The policeman came back to the colored section and asked what was wrong. The driver said some one had moved the board. 'The company told me to keep 'em behind it, them's my orders, keep 'em behind it.'

"The policeman shouted at the two men 'Get up from there'. The men moved. 'Who moved the board?' he asked the driver. The driver said, 'It's between these four', pointing to the two men who sat in the seat, the man seated beside me and me. We two were behind the board.

"The policeman said, 'Get out there and get in that car.' We all started. I asked, 'What am I charged with?' He asked, 'Don't you know anything about it?' I answered, 'No'. 'Well come back here and sit down before I slap you down', he said. I replied, 'You have no reason to do that." He answered, 'I'll knock hell out of you with the board'. I sat down. He got another man who was standing and they went on to the police car. A Negro man said, 'Let's get off'. I answered, 'I'm going to report you to the company for being rude to passengers, calling the police on innocent people and having them threatened.' 'Call 'em', he said, 'that won't do you no good.' When I got off the bus, he was standing outside the bus called to the policeman, 'Hey take her on too.' The policeman said, 'Come on girl. Get in that car.' When I stepped on the running board, he kicked me. I sat down without a word.

"When we got to the jail, he said, 'Get outta that car, you 'boys' take off your hats. Inside the men were questioned. The men said they did not know who moved the board. One of the men said he took it out of the seat and put it on the floor. Then the policeman an Officer Dean, asked me, 'What do you know about it girl'. I answered, 'I don't know anything about it.' 'She's a G-- liar, put her d— a— in jail. Get on over there.' The desk seargent took my bag and packages. When I turned my back, the policeman named Dean kicked me, when I turned he slapped my face and struck me on the shoulder with his fist. He then reached for his gun, for an instant semed to come out of his madness, then pulled his blackjack and struck me on my hip with it. I shouted, 'what is wrong with you?' Only then did he come to himself and asked in a dazed weak voice, 'What's wrong with you?' Get on up them stairs'.

--"I was locked in a cell with five other girls. In my purse they found my name on some cards and papers. The man came upstairs and called, 'Mildred, how old are you?' 'Twenty-seven', I answered 'Will you call a number for me.' I asked. 'Not now,' he said, 'I will when I finish." He never came back. I was later told my bond would be aranged for and that I'd be out in a short while. No one came near the cell after that.

"Then I turned my attention to the cell. The floor was crawling with roaches, literally thousands of them. One mattress was as hard and dirty as the floor. I read Sunday's funnies and everything in the magazine section about three times. At nine o'clock, the lights were turned out, I climbed upon one of the bunks in hopes that the roaches would not come up there and sat with my back to the wall.

"At 8:30 a. m., the warden came for those who had not had a trial. We all went down. Some one had called Attorney Shores for me.

"On the witness stand the policeman and bus driver gave a made up testimony. I was charged with interfering with an officer. One of the other men was charged with moving the board. The bus driver testified under oath that I said, 'Where I came from they didn't treat Negroes this way, and that I was tired of it.' How he lied! I was born and reared in Birmingham, Ala. and have only been out of Birmingham on short vacations. I was fined ten dollars.

"This thing that happened to me is a symbol of what can happen to any Negro; to you, your wife, sister, mother or daughter. The busses over a period of time have been a sore spot to all Negro citizens. With transportation getting worse, these things will happen more often unless we stop them now. I am carrying the case of the brutal treatment by the arresting officer to the civil service board.

"If the people will use this incident to correct the situation, the hardship and misery I suffered will be avenged. Let us unite now in a mass effort to end the intolerable treatment we have been the victims of on street cars and busses and at the hands of the police."

The Negro In Books

ALL-AMERICAN by John Tunis, Harcourt Brace and Co., New York, $2.00. Reviewed by Augusta Braxston Baker.

This book is one of the best sports stories of the year, and the boys will claim it as such. However, to those of us interested in Negro themes for children the book is much more important. The underlying story of the book is one in which the problems of living in an American small town make youth decide whether our American democracy is worth fighting for.

Ronald Perry, (All-American, by John Tunis, Harcourt Brace and Co., New York, N. Y., 12.00) is on the football squad of his local high school. The star member of the team is Ned Leroy, a Negro boy, who is both liked and respected by his fellow school mates.

The climax of the book is the situation which arises when the high school team is scheduled to play a southern team for sectional honors. The southern team refuses to play with Ned on the team, and so the local high school body, as well as the townspeople have a real decision to make.

Naturally there are two factions. Ronald leads the group which feels that the team should not play without Ned. There are others, backed by the local chamber of commerce, who think that Ned is not important enough to sacrifice a vast amount of money invested in the trip.

The high school children solved what turns out to be a tense and vital question. In the face of all kinds of pressure the football team votes on the question and the decision is not to play the game without Ned.

As boys and girls and grown-ups read the book they will find themselves forced to think seriously about the problems of a true democracy. Every boy and girl should read ALL-AMERICAN.

A recent survey of 10 Rochester, N. Y. war plants revealed that nine have kept their promise to integrate Negroes into production jobs.

★W. J. WHEATON

We have, and we are sure that you have, noticed the lack of interest manifested by our race youth in the problems which they must face and the responsibilities that they must assume in the adjustment of those problems.

Those who have been reared in a vicinity where racial inhibitions are not so glaring are almost callous in their attitude. They do not grasp the greiousness of the obstacles in their paths or the numerous barriers raised because of race or color. In fact they, to use the jargon of the street, "let George do it."

The youths who have not had but the scantiest of opportunities and whose environs have been such as to curb any aspiration or ambition for racial betterment, seem to think that there is nothing more to be desired and that these new surroundings are all that is to be desired.

When they are awakened to the reality that racial proscriptions are also prevalent and nigh as glaring as in their former abode, they become so embittered and resentful that their attitude is a menace and a drawback to a better racial understanding.

Now we do not mean to convey the impression that this applies to all of our youths, but those who take a decided interest are in the minority, greatly outnumbered. As usual, those most interested and plan for racial betterment are the young girls. Their clubs and forums are the nucleus about which we look to the women of the race to build the planning structure. They must be imbued with the spirit of self-sacrifice and the will to strive for a full American citizenship, that citizenship which is guaranteed by the Bill of Rights. They, by both precept and example, must be taught and shown that the true democracy is not a mere phrase to be "trippingly off the tongue," but a living idealism, the aspiration of every free man, the inalienable right of every American.

The women of our racial group have in the younger women a reservoir of potential strength from which to draw. Gather them in; fill your ranks, and together you will form a phalanx of unbeatable strength. You will be the leaders planning the strategy. The enthusiasm of youth will lighten your burden.

Time shortens and before one can realize it, the conferences for world adjustments will be in full swing. Let's not be caught napping. Let it not be said of us, "You have missed the bus." Women of California. Women of the world! Gird for the fray!! It is to you that the people, the underprivileged people of the world, look to champion their cause. They have faith in you, in your sincerity, your ability to achieve and your belief in the righteousness of the cause for which you battle. Your intuition and astuteness, couped with the diplomacy for which you are noted, will accomplish much. What is your motto? "Deeds, not words"?

★WORLD THIS WEEK

By ROBERT PATTERSON

APPLES FOR ADOLF

The actual time for building, launching, and completely loading the Liberty Ship, Robert Peary, was 14 days, one hour and nine minutes. Rumors immediately sunk the Peary in San Francisco Bay some half a dozen times, first in a mild storm, next when her seams spread and rivets fell out from too quick building. Next her engines were no good and she would need months of rebuilding, and she couldn't be loaded because her decks were all awry! But the Navy revealed last week that she had been completely loaded in three days and 23 hours from the minute the stevedores came on board until the final deck load was lashed! Vice Admiral John W. Greenslade, commandant of the 12th Naval District, spoke of it as an outstanding triumph in the loading of Navy cargo. Officials declare that Richmond broke the one ship per-month-per-ways goal, by delivering eight vessels from seven ways during November. This was a national record, making 53 ships delivered from a single yard. The Robert Peary is already "somewhere at sea"! These are our apples for Adolf in exchange for his rumors!

CHURCH IN THE ARMY

The War Department announces that church attendance in the Army during one month totaled 3,638,960, with 66 reports from outlying garrisons not received. The Army boys like to go to church. More than 62,911 services were held in this same month, many of them out of doors. Many times, soldiers of units which man gun positions in outlying places can't come to the regular service. When that happens, chaplains take the church service to the soldiers. On military reservations, more than 3 million men consulted with Army chaplains. Sky piloting is side by side with the ammunition passing. The boys seem to like it.

I REVENTIVE MEDICINE?

The farmers last week placed three demands in the lap of Senator Downey. With the attention of the nation centering on food, the Senator promised an early presentation of their demands to Washington officials. The scions of the field demanded adequate labor, sufficient machinery—including trucks and tires—to move crops, and less interference from overlapping Washington bureaus. The importation of more Mexican labor and recent Selective Service revisions may alleviate the manpower crisis on the land to some extent. As to machinery, thousands of the million and a half operators and owners of motor trucks, used for transporting farm products, have joined the U. S. Truck Conservation Corps and signed the pledge to practice preventive maintenance for farm trucks as outlined by the ODT. Truck owners realize the prime importance to everyone of the orderly and continuous movement of crops. Through preventive maintenance they mean to increase the availability of farm trucks so essential in the farm program. It's to be hoped Washington will act quickly on all the demands of the farmers to prevent the threatened loss of crops that would result from labor or equipment shortages. We need food, lots of it, now!

HOME FRONT CHANGES

No outdoor lighting of Christmas trees this year—and indoor lights must be hidden from the streets. Without lights, the outdoor Christmas tree won't be so much fun, and a prominent California Flower Growers' Association reports that most of its membership will not sell trees this year—that wreaths will be scrace. That song, "When The Lights Go On Again" will have real meaning come Christmas Eve, when we walk through dark streets. In lighter vein is the change gas rationing is making at the altar. Reno competition will be out of the running in marriage licenses in the future. Licenses issued at home are making new records.

PACIFIC UNITY

Colonel Leonard H. Rodieck, just returned from the Solomons, described the manner in which Admiral William F. Halsey jr., U. S. Commander in the South Pacific, has replied to clamor for a "unified" command. Calling together his Army, Navy, and Marine Corps aides somewhere in the Pacific, he said, "Gentlemen, we are the South Pacific fighting force. I don't want anybody to be even thinking in terms of Army, Navy and Marines . . . and every blankety-blank so and so will understand it if I have to . . . issue coveralls and imprint the insignia 'South Pacific Fighting Force' on the seat of the pants." Why not "American Fighting Force," and eliminate choice in uniforms all around? It would save dyes and material.

★LIBRARY NOTES

There is a Hapy Land—Besserides

A warm, sunny novel of a California farming valley, written by an electrical engineer. The book is about ordinary people who never heard of the class struggle or saw a hundred dollar bill, and about how people react to each other.

Five Women in Three Novels—Cuthrell

In one book the author has covered the period of peace, of approach of war, and to the threshold of war itself in Star on Her Shoulder; Detour; and Let's Do the Town. It is a heart-warming story of the loves of every day people.

Foward the Nation—Peattie

The actual three years experiences of the Lewis and Clark expedition led by the Indian girl, Sacajawea. Hairbreadth escapes along route up the Missouri, over the Continental Divide, through to the Pacific and back were experienced by members of the party, thirty-one men, one woman and a baby.

Between the Acts—Woolf

In a smal English village, the local pageant is presented at Pointz Hall, the home of the Olivers. Throughout this single day, the acts and thoughts of the Oliver family have the pageant for their background.

The Edge of Darkness—Woods

In the remote hamlet of Hollness, a handful of fisher-folk, with the aid of the British who supply them with arms, plot revolt against their Nazi conquerors. Against this heroic theme runs the counterpoint of human passions and loyalties.

House for the Sparrow—Yenni

A delightful story of a Louisiana small town family of seven, the parents, four children, and Miss Letty, the maternal grandmother.

We take this method of thanking the many friends and neighbors who were so loyal to us during the brief illness and death of our beloved father and husband, the late E. E. Watkins of Hoffman, Okla.

Especially do we thank those who sent cards of condolences, flowers, telegrams and gave us many kind and sympathetic words of cheer that hleped us to bear up in this our hour of sorrow.

Signed:
Mrs. Porter M. Mann and family.

When three men in Passaic, N. J., living within a radius of three blocks of each other, pooled their cars on a 36-mile daily round trip to work, each man began to save 8,200 miles of driving a year.

AN EXCLUSIVE CALIFORNIA EAGLE SERIAL

"NATIVE SON" ★

From the book by

"You and your tactics have forced us to defend this boy", Max said.

"What do you mean", Buckley asked.

"If you had not dragged the name of the Communist Party into this murder, I'd not be here", Max said.

"Hell, this boy signed the name of the Communist Party to the kidnap note . . . "

"I realize that", Max said. "The boy got the idea from the newspapers. I'm defending this boy because I'm convinced that men like you made him what he is. His trying to blame the Communists for his crime was a natural reaction for him. He had heard men like you lie about the Communists so much that he believed them. If you can make the people of this country understand why this boy acted like he did, I'll be doing more than defending him."

Buckley laughed, bit off the tip of a fresh cigar, lit it and stood puffing. He advanced to the center of the room, cocked his head to one side, took the cigar out of his mouth and squinted at Bigger.

"Boy, did you ever think you'd be as important a man as you are right now?"

Bigger had been on the verge of accepting the friendship of Jan and Max, and now this man stood before him.

"I'm the State's Attorney," Buckley said, walking from one end of the room to the other. His hat was on the back of his head. A white silk handkerchief peeped from the yeast pocket of his black coat. He paused by the cot, towering over Bigger. How soon were they going to kill him. Bigger wondered. The breath of warm hope which Jan and Max had blown so softly upon him turned to frost under Buckley's cold gaze.

"Boy, I'd like to give you a piece of good advice. I'm going to be honest with you and tell you that you don't have to talk to me unless you want to, and I'll tell you that whatever you say to me might be used against you in courts, see? But, boy, you're caught! That's the first thing you want to understand. We know what you've done. We got the evidence. So you might as well talk."

"He'll decide that with me," Max said.

Buckley and Max faced each other.

"Listen, Max. You're wasting your time. You'll never get this boy off in a million years. Nobody can commit a crime against a family like the Daltons and sneak out of it. Those poor old parents are going to be in that courtroom to see that this boy burns! This boy killed the only thing they had. If you want to save your face, you and your buddy can leave now and the papers won't know you were in here . . . "

"I reserve the right to determine whether I should defend him or not", Max said.

"Listen, Max. You think I'm trying to hoodwink you, don't you?" Buckley asked, turning and going to the door. "Let me show you something."

and Buckley said, "tell 'em to

A policeman opened the door come in." "O. K."

The room was silent. Bigger sat on the cot, looking at the floor. He hated this; if anything could be done in his behalf, he himself wanted to do it; not others. The more he saw others exerting themselves, the emptier he felt. He saw the policeman fling the door wide open. Mr. and Mrs. Dalton walked in slowing and stood; Mr. Dalton was looking at him, his face white. Bigger half-rose in dred, then sat again, his eyes lifted, but un-seeing. He sank back to the cot.

Swiftly, Buckley crossed the room and shook hands with Mr. Dalton, and, turning to Mrs. Dalton, said:

"I'm dreadfully sorry, madam."

Bigger saw Mr. Dalton look at him ,then at Buckley.

"Did he say who was in this thing with him?" Mr. Dalton asked.

"He's just come out of it," Buckley said. "And he's got a lawyer now".

"I have charge of his defense", Max said.

Bigger saw Mr. Dalton look briefly at Jan.

"Bigger, you're a foolish boy if you don't tell who was in this thing with you," Mr. Dalton said.

Bigger tightened and did not answer. Max walked over to Bigger and placed a hand on his shoulder.

"I will talk to him, Mr. Dalton," Max said.

"I'm not her to bully this boy", Mr. Dalton said. "But it'll go easier with him if he tells all he knows."

Tere was silence. The preacher came forward slowly, hat in hand, and stood in front of Mr. Dalton.

"Ah'm a preacher of the gospel, suh," he said. "'N' ah'm mighty sorry erbouts whut's done happened t' yo' daughter. Ah knows of yo' good work, suh. 'N' the likes of thes should'na come t' yuh."

Mr. Dalton sighed and said wearily:

"Thank you."

"The best thing you can do is help us," Buckley said, turning to Max. "A grave wrong has been don't to two people who've helped Negroes more than anybody I know."

"I sympathize with you, Mr. Dalton," Max said. "But killing this boy isn't going to help you or any of us."

"I tried to help him," Mr. Dalton said.

"We wanted to send him to school," said Mrs. Dalton faintly.

"I know," Max said. "But those things don't touch the fundamental problem involved here. this boy comes from an oppressed people. Even if he's done wrong, we must take that into consideration."

"I want you to know that my heart is not bitter," Mr. Dalton said.

"What this boy has done will not influence my relations with the Negro people. Why, only today I sent a dozen ping pong tables to the South Side Boy's Club . . . "

"Mr Dalton!" Max exclaimed, coming forward suddenly.

"My God, man! Will ping-pong keep men from murdering? Can't you see? Even after losing your daughter, you're going to keep going in the same direction? Don't you grant as much life-feeling to other men as you have? Could ping-pong have kept you from making your millions? This boy and milions like him want a meaningful life, not ping-pong."

"What do you want me to do?" Mr. Dalton asked coldly. "Do you want me to die and atone for a suffering I never caused? I'm not responsible for the state of this world. I'm doing all one man can. I suppose you want me to take my money and fling it out to the millions who have nothing?"

"No, no, no . . . Not that," Max said. "If you felt that millions of others experienced life as deeply as you, but differently, you'd see that what you're doing doesn't help. Something of a more fundamental nature . . . "

"Communism", Buckley boomed, pulling down the corners of his lips. "Gentlemen, let's don't be childish !T!his boy's going on trial for his life. My job is to enforce the laws of this state . . . "

Buckley's voice stopped as the door opened and the policeman looked inside.

"What is it?" Buckley asked.

"The boy's folks are here."

Bigger cringed. Not this! Not here; not now! He did not want his mother to come in here now, with these people standing round. He looked about with a wild, pleading expression. Buckley, watched, then turned back to the policeman.

"They have a right to see 'im," Buckley said. "Let 'em come in." Though he sat, Bigger felt his legs trembling. He was so tense in body and mind that when the door swung in he bounded up and stood in the middle of the room. He saw his mother's face, he wanted to run to her and push her back through the door.. She was standing still, one hand upon the door knob; the other hand clutched a frayed pocketbook, which she dropped and ran to him, throwing her arms about him crying: "My baby." Bigger's body was stiff with dread and indecision. He felt his mother's arm tight about him and he looked over her shoulder and saw Vera and Buddy come inside and stand, looking about timidly. Beyond them he saw Gus and G. H. and Jack, their mouths open in awe and fear. Vera's lips were trembling and Buddy's hands were clenched. Bukley, the preacher, Jan, Max, Mr. and Mrs. Dalton stood along the wall, behind him, looking on silently. Bigger wanted to whirl and blot them from sight. The kind words of Jan and Max were forgotten now. He felt that all of the white people in the room were measuring every inch of his weakness. He identified himself with his family and felt their naked shame under the eyes of the white folks. While looking at his brother and sister and feeling his mother's arms about him: while knowing that Jack and G. H. and Gus were standing awkwardly in the doorway staring at him in curious disbelief--while being conscious of all this felt a wild and outlandish conviction surge him: they ought to be glad! It was a strange but strong feeling, springing from the very depths of his life. Had he not taken fully upon himself the crime of being black? Had he not done the thing which they dreded above all others? Then they ought not stand here and pity him, cry over him; but look at him and go home contented, feeling that their shame was washed away.

"Oh Bigger, son!" his mother wailed. "We been so worried . . . We ain't slept a single night! The police is there all the time . . . They stand outside our door . . . They watch and follow us everywhere! Son, son . . . " Bigger heard her sobs; but what could he do? She ought not to have come here. Buddy came over to him fumbling with his cap. "Listen, Bigger, if you didn't do it, just tell me and I'll fix 'em. I'll get a gun and kill four or five of 'em . . . " The room gasped. Bigger turned his head quickly and saw that the white faces along the wall were shocked and startled. "Don't talk that way Buddy," the mother sobbed. "You want me to die right now? I can't stand no more of this. You must not talk that way . . . We in enough trouble now . . . "Don't let 'em treat you bad Bigger." Buddy said stoutly. Bigger wanted to comfort them in the presence of the white folks, but did not know how. Desperately, he cast about for something to say. Hate and shame boiled in him against the people behind his back; he tried to think of words that would defy them, words that would let them know that he had a world and life of his own in spite of them. And at the same time he wanted those words to stop the tears of his mother and sister, to quiet and soothe the anger of hisbrother; he longed to stop those tears and that anger because he knew that they were futile, that the people who stood along the wall back of him had the destiny of him and his family in their hands.

"Aw, Ma, don't you-all worry none," he said, amazed at his own words; he was possessed by a queer, imperious nervous energy. "I'll be out to this in no time." His mother gave him an incredulous stare Bigger turned his head again and looked feverishly and defiantly at the white faces along the wall. They were staring at him in surprise. Buckley's lips were twisted in a faint smile Jan and Max looked dismayed. Mrs. Dalton, white as the wall behind her, listened openmouthed. The preacher and Mr. Dalton were shaking their heads sadly. Bigger knew that no one in the room, except Buddy, believed him. His mother turned her face away and cried. Vera knelt upon the floor and covered face with her hands. "Bigger," his mother's voice came low and quiet; she caught his face between the palms of her trembling hands. "Bigger," she said, "tell me. Is there anything, anything we can do?" He knew that his mother's question had been prompted by his telling her that he would get out of all this. He knew that they had nothing; they were so poor that they were depending upon public charity to eat. He was ashamed of what he had done; he should have been honest with them. It had been a wild and foolish impulse that had made him try to appear strong and innocent before them. Maybe they would remember him only by those foolish words after they had killed him. His mother's eyes were sad, skeptical; but kind, patient, waiting for his answer. Yes, he too wiped out that lie, not only so that they might know the truth, but to redeem himself in the eyes of those white faces behind his back along the white wall. He was lost, but he would not cringe; he would not lie, not in the presence of that white mountain looming behind him.

George J. O'Brien, above, assistant to the president and ranking Los Angeles executive of Standard Oil Company of California, was elected a director of California Bank at the December meeting of the board. At the same meeting, the directors declared the regular semi-annual dividend of 50 cents per share on the 200,000 shares of California Bank common stock outstanding.

INSURANCE BODY PLANS "FOUR FREEDOMS VICTORY BOND RALLY"

DURHAM, N. C.—Completion of plans for the "Four Freedoms Victory Bond Rally," to be conducted from December 14 to January 16 by members of the National Negro Life Insurance Association have been announced by Asa T. Spaulding, president of the organization.

The campaign is being projected in anticipation of the holiday season when thousands of thrifty citizens will transform their Christmas savings into cash and thousands of others will receive their annual bonuses from the industrial and commercial concerns by which they are employed.

"In determining to hold this five weeks campaign we were prompted by two objectives," declared president Spaulding. "We want to make America, including Negro America, War-Bond-conscious and through that War-conscious, and we want to teach our people the value of thrift. After the war the United States will need thrifty citizens in all walks of life and as there is no better method for saving than through War Bonds and Stamps the National Negro Life Insurance Association membership decided to conduct this campaign as one of its contributions to the War effort."

President Spaulding in announcing the campaign urged all employers seriously to consider giving bonuses in the form of War Savings Bonds and Stamps and asked that wherever possible holidays gifts be made in the form of bonds and stamps.

Life Insurance companies holding membership in the association operate in 28 states, including Florida, Georgia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Virginia, West Virginia, Kentucky, Tennessee, Louisiana, Mississippi, Alabama, Arkansas, Oklahoma, Missouri, Kansas, Michigan, Colorado, Nebraska, California, Illinois, Tex., Indiana, Maryland, Delaware, Pennsylvania, Ohio, New Jersey, New York and the District of Columbia.

Consulting with President Spaulding when arrangements for this life insurance War Bond campaign were discussed, were: M. S. Stewart, Memphis, Tenn., chairman of the life insurance War Bond committee; C. L. Townes, Richmond, Va., Secretary of the National Negro Life Insurance Association, Jesse O. Thomas, representing the Interracial Section of the War Savings Staff, Washington, D. C., and many state representatives.

CHRISTMAS SEAL FUND SHOWS INCREASE, NEARS $145,000 MARK

Midway through the fifth week of the Chirstmas Seal drive, reports from the Combined Christmas Seal fund reveal a decided increase over the same period of sale a year ago. The total receipts already approach the $145,000 mark.

The largest contribution to the tuberculosis work was made last Tuesday when the Lockheed-Vega Employees Buck of the Month for Victory Club presented the fund with a check to the amount of $10,000. This was not only the largest amount received during the current drive, but leaders also expressed the belief that it was the largest ever received in the history of the nation-wide appeal for funds to combat the disease tuberculosis.

Members of the Combined Christmas Seal Fund have expressed the hope that the final figure will meet the pre-campaign needs for expanding the program to meet the new demands placed on the Tuberculosis Association because of the war. "We have been particularly pleased with the enthusiastic replies from many of the contributors who have indicated appreciation for the work that the Los Angeles Tuberculosis and Health Association has carried on in the past", said Dr. Howard W. Bosworth, president of the Association. Bosworth also referred to many letters from contributors which reflected satisfactory results of the Association's health education program during past years. "Replies from many of the people who have received Christmas Seal tell us that the seal has reminded them to have themselves or some member of their family X-rayed. In a surprising number of instances the advice of the association staff has been relayed to many of the people in our community who have not yet had the opportunity to receive the information first-hand", he said.

Bosworth urged everyone who saw the Christmas Seal to remember the importance of a chest X-ray. "Tuberculosis is the kind of a disease that presents no signs or symptoms in its early stages. Not until the disease has progressed to later stages when cure is more difficult and the length of time necessary to effect a cure becomes more prolonged, do the usual signs such as the 'TB cough,' loss weight, tiredness, appear. The time to discover tuberculosis is when it starts, and only an X-ray picture of the chest can tell the story while the disease is in its early stages", he advised.

This is the 36th annual Xmas Seal drive which will be conducted through Christmas. The sale is being directed from the office of the Combined Christmas Seal Fund, 725 South Spring St. Proceeds from the sale will finance the work of the Los Angeles Tuberculosis and Health Association and the Los Angeles County Tuberculosis Association.

Visiting Nurses Association Furnishes Needed Service

In the face of a grave shortage of nurses, many of whom have been called away by war needs, the Visiting Nurse Association, little more than two years in Los Angeles, already is making a valiant attempt to give bedside nursing care to all who need it in this very large city. Similar service has been available to people in other large cities for many years.

Because each Visiting Nurse can make eight bedside visits a day, she can replace many times her number in private duty nurses. Too few people realize that she will go wherever needed, regardless of race, color, creed, or ability to pay. Services of a Visiting Nurse may be secured by simply calling DRexel 2251.

Mr. George Beavers, Jr., Vice-President of the Golden State Mutual Life Insurance Company, has been elected head of a committee to promote the VNA program in the Eastside District. Other members of the committee are Rev. F. D. Jordan, pastor of First AME Church, Mr. Otto Buss, Principal of McKinley Junior High School, Mr. Allen Spett of the TB Association, Miss Dorothy Guinn, Executive Secretary, YWCA, Miss Ivory Treadwell, Dr. E. I. Robinson, Dr. A. L. Wallace and Miss Almena Davis, newspaper publisher.

Miss Clara Cassell, well acquainted in this district, is a member of the Visiting Nurse staff and has been for some time devoting her time to calls in the area, assisted by one of the Nurses Aides assigned to Visiting Nurse work. Miss Cassell and all others of the staff are registered nurses who rigidly follow doctor's orders in care given.

Epidemics spread rapidly unless quickly curbed. The Visiting Nurse will tell the family how to isolate a case while giving care and gives full instructions on how to prevent spreading of infection.

As in all war times, more babies are being born today. And with hospitals for the most part filled ot capacity, many are being born at home while others are sent home from the hospital prematurely. Care of the mother before the arrival as well as afterward (when instruction on care of the baby is also given) comprises one of the great works of the Visiting Nurse.

A special orthopedic nurse is available when needed. The Visiting Nurse is trained to give care in other special types of disability, such as cahdiac and cancer. She assists in securing convalescent care and rehabilitation, teaches disease prevention and puts families in touch with community resources.

Ofter there is a call to care for an elderly person who is bedridden or a case of chronic illness while other members of the family need to be away from ohme working. The nurse makes regular calls, as needed,' perhaps to give a bed bath and make the patient comfortable for the day, leaving written instructions for the family on their return. But how much more often, someone must remain at home away from work to care for an invalid just because of not being acquainted with the Visiting Nurse service.

Call DRexel 2251 whenever you need their help and it will be given. Tell your friends and neighbors about this service and you will not help them but help to raise the health standards of your community. The cost of a call all depends on the financial station of the patient--nothing if he is unable to pay--10 cents, 25 cents, to a maximum of $1.50 for the first hour of service. After the first call by the nurse to patient, the patient must be under the care of a physician, clinic or hospital.

Holton Heads Civilian War Services Body

The appointment of Karl Holton as chairman of the planning committee of the Civilian War Services, for the Los Angeles County Defense Council, was announced today by Harold W. Kennedy, executive director.

Holton and his board, which is composed of the chairmen of each of the war services, will act as a policy group. The actual operation of the some 17 committees will be carried out by the Citizens Service Corps, of which Heman Stark is executive. Holton has been chairman of the Health, Welfare and Consumer Interest committee of the County Defense organization since its inception with Stark as secretary. Stark has been loaned to the defense council by the Los Angeles County Coordinating Council with which he has been associated during the past 5 years.

The Citizens Service Corps is best described in the OCD directive which says in part: "The Citizens Service Corps is an army of unpaid civilians mobilized to do the many civilian war jobs that must be done to keep the home front strong. As the Defense Corps comprises a force trained in protection against enemy attack, so the service corps is charged with the responsibility of leading the fight against inefficiency, insecurity and poor health within the community, thus increasing the total striking power of the nation."

The services outlined in the directive will be brought down to each community by the block leader organization which means the eventual enrollment of every citizen into civilian defense, and brings a new type of leader into the defense picture—the Block Leader.

Headquarters of the Citizens Service Corps will be room 1200, Law building, 139 N. Broadway.

★ BEHIND THE SCENES With Harry

By Harry Levette

Three big events of the week—Press preview of Chas. Rogers new screen feature "The Powers Girl" at Fox-Wilshire, Wednesday night; Universal's "Arabian Nights" at Filmarte yesterday afternoon, and Eugene Henry Huffman's stage play "The Lost Chord" at Embassy Auditorium last night. Too near press time now but will give a little review of it next issue.

Well I know you are expecting the inside info on what our own dark stars and sattellites would do in this, the most unusual of all Yuletides. But I know I wont have time for, since Clarence Muse first led the "Westward Ho," migration away back in 1928, the list has grown, by Harlem moving to Hollywood, until it looks like a draft board page.

Hattie McDaniel Will Treat A Lot of Kids

One thing though is certain: Most all of them will revert to the old fashioned Christmas at their own firesides, and many of them have great old-fashioned open fireplaces in their living rooms, which will hold big cheery logs crackling out a song of real comfort in the leaping flames. Hattie McDaniel will as usual let her little nephew be host to a lot of kids gathered around a present laden, beautifully lighted tree. Incidentally though because of dim-out restrictions the beautiful trees and shrubbery on her expansive lawns will not be lighted up. It has been the custom every year both among the ordinary folk and celebrities, to string vari-colored lights to trees in the yards, several weeks before the holidays, burning them nightly until after New Years.

Hattie and her hubby, the handsome Mr. Crawford, do not expect to take any long motor trips during the holidays this year, except some that may develop in her duties as chairman of the Hollywood Victory Committee, staging entertainments for the armed forces. Otherwise during the day they may drop in on her brother, Sam and his wife, stop over at the new home of her sister, Etta, and have a few friends at their own home at night. Incidentally she and her husband are greatly devoted to each other, and are as happy in that big mansion with its multiple rooms, as if they were in a little two room cottage, by a winding road, in a hidden valley.

It's all so interesting the manner in which these famous folk, (most of them like Hattie, still unspoiled), will spend Christmas, I would like to carefully describe the plans of them in detail. I'll just have to jot down a few words about some of them and will still have another issue to tell you more. Bill Robinson due back for "Thanks Pal" at Twentieth Century-Fox, will spend his first Christmas at his coast home in several years. Louise Beavers will spend hers here with friends, unless she can get to go to camp to visit her husband, Bob Clark, now in service at a back East camp. Clarence Muse will have to take at least one trip up to his fine ranch, near Lake Elsinore, gas ration or no gas ration. He raises plenty of poultry there. Lena Horne, who coincidentally has a residence on Horn street, in Beverly Hills, will not be here, so will have to remain in New York, completing her engagement at the Savoy-Plaza. Jessie Grayson will spend the day quietly with husband and children. "Rochester" with the shadow of a recent bereavement still over the family will philosophically make things pleasant for his folks, and will run up to his nearby ranch beyond Compton to see his several race horses, especially his pet, "Mustard Greens". Sam McDaniel will have dinner at home, but will have to work as usual Christmas night at a beach night club where he is a long time favorite.

Dorothy Dandridge and Harold Nicholas May Have First Married Xmas Together

Lovely Dorothy Dandridge and her bridegroom of a few months, Harold Nicholas, may or may not get to spend Christmas here with him at their cozy home. Just after finishing Republic's "Hit Parade", she was called to 'Frisco for a stage engagement, and fate alone knows where she will be then. Ben Carter will have a few friends of both races, including several famous Hollywood stars at his colonial style home, just a half block from Hattie McDaniel on Harvard street. Ernest Whitman will dine at home, then teach a few bowling lessons at night.

Ivie Anderson will have dinner at her own 'Ivie's Chicken Shack', on Vernon street. Nicodemus, will have dinner at home with his wife and new baby, of which he is so proud. Herbert Spencer will be too busy in MGM's "Bataan Patrol", to have much of a Xmas. Ethel Waters as far as could be learned will spend the holidays here instead of her old home, New York. Jesse Graves will show his sister visiting here from their home Des Moines a round of Christmas entertainment.

Mantan and Hazel Moreland Have a Deer for a Venison Feast

Mantan Moreland, famous stage and screen comedian, who will be busy in a new prison picture at Monogram, right at Christmas time will at least get one day off to spend the day with his charming, vivacious wife, Hazel, and talented daughter, Marcia. Having rented out their old home they will spend Christmas Day in their new one on Cimmaron. And guess what is on the menu! Believe it or not it's venison, for Mantan has a whole deer that has been hanging up in cold storage since October. The fine young six-point buck was killed by Jas. Davis, well-known movie stunt man, while on a hunting trip in Utah, and he presented the Morelands with one of the kill. Hazel who is an excellent cook will prepare those juicy steaks herself. (And Mantan has a ferocious appetite). Lillian Randolph will spend the day at home but may not be able to escape radio engagements at night. Katherine Dunham expects to be still filling her San Francisco engagement. Caleb Peterson, Wonderful Smith, Charley Moore, Jeni Le Gon, Theresa Harris, and many others will spend the day quietly at home, with probably a night club visit to wind up the holiday.

'THANK RUSSIA FOR PLAN TO ANNIHILATE NAZI THEORY'--DIXON

Dean Dixon, famous Negro symphonic conductor told an "Arts to Russia Week" dinner in honor of Charles Chaplin, Thursday, Dec. 3, at the Hotel Pennsylvania, in New York City, that America can thank Russia for "a plan which is annihilating the Nazis."

The dinner was sponsored by the Arts Committee for Russian War Relief and was attended by over 1000 persons prominent in the art, stage, music, dance, radio and literary worlds, gathered to honor Chaplain, who, according to the sponsoring committee, is a symbol of the artist fighting "to keep culture and arts in a world of free peoples."

Dixon, one of the leading speakers at the dinner, said:

"When we find that in some countries our artists say: 'We can't compose--we can't write—conditions are in such a flux on all sides of us'--and yet, in between duty as a fire-warden and in between bombings, Shostakovich is able to compose one of our greatest works, his Seventh Symphony, what does it mean?

"It is not an exceptional thing. The Russians are not different from us. It is something that starts way down deep; it is something you can't pin down. But when we realize that here is a country in which artists let no wars, barbarian's bombs, or destruction, interrupt their art, we find the makings of a great people.

"Here is a country that is being besieged," he continued, "a country where barbarians are trying to annihilate everything, and yet they give us great art. This is something to be very thankful for--and we musicians are indeed thankful."

Dixon told the diners that he stood before them in a two-fold capacity--that of a musician and that of a member of a minority group.

"From the standpoint of a representative of a minority group," he said, "I look to Russia as a great, a marvelous country. Why? They are showing us brotherhood, a human spirit such as we of other countries have been reaching out for in all civilization. Russia is showing us how millions of peoples of different cultures can live and prosper and create great art together. This is a plan to annihilate the Nazi philosophy which we can thank Russia for."

Dixon paid tribute to the purpose of the dinner, saying, "It is a great thing to be doing."

"The help we give to Russia will be returned to us in many forms," he said. "It will be returned to us in great art, great science, great philosophy--and certainly in freedom from Nazi barbarianism. Let us carry on this work of aid to Russia, wholeheartedly and enthusiastically."

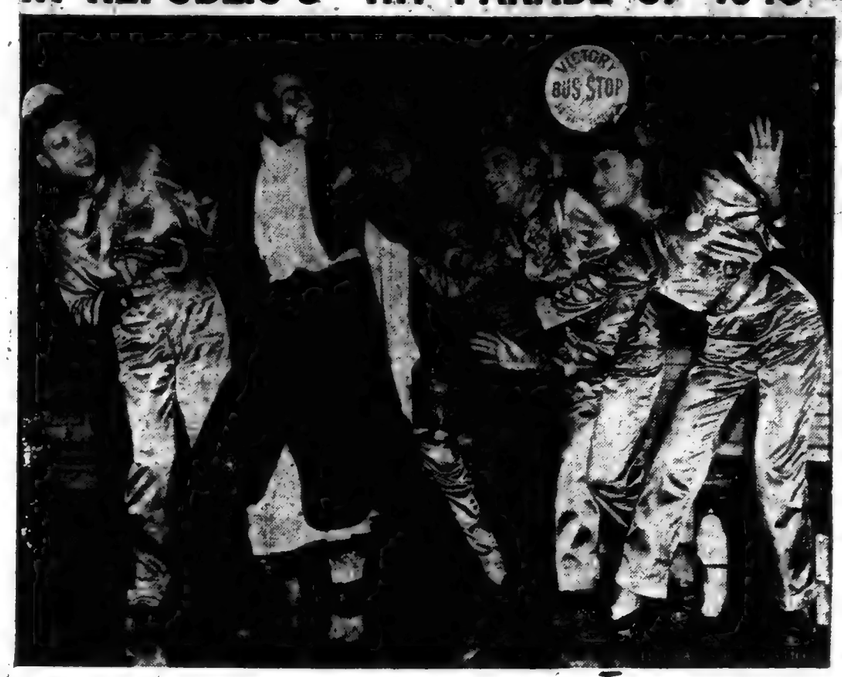
DUNHAM DANCERS COMING



The Katherine Dunham Dancers, famous for their work on both the stage and screen, will appear in person at the Orpheum Theatre for one week, starting Wednesday, December 23.

The group won new honors for their remarkable repertoire in the hit musical play, "Cabin In The Sky", which played Los Angeles late last year.

Miss Katherine Dunham is considered one of the foremost modern dancers in this country. She has earned the admiration of critics and theatre-goers for her vivid and remarkable interpretations of South and Central American dances.

Also, on the Orpheum stage will be Major Bowes eighth anniversary revue. Two features on the screen will complete the bill.

JACK WILLIAMS IS "HARLEM SANDMAN" IN REPUBLIC'S "HIT PARADE OF 1943"

The popular dancer, Jack Williams, will be seen soon in his characterization of "The Harlem Sandman" in Republic's big-budget production, "Hit Parade Of 1943." He's shown here with several lovelies from the chorus of this elaborate number, which takes him in a cloud-like airplane direct to the corner of Lenox Avenue and 135th St.!

'LIFE BEGINS AT 8:30' NOW AT UNITED ARTISTS THEATRE

There is a quality in the presentation of "Life Begins At 8:30" co-starring Monty Woolley and Ida Lupino, that lifts this entertainment far above average. Comedy and drama have been skillfully blended in this 20th Century-Fox film now playing at the United Artists theatre, 933 S. Broadway, downtown Los Angeles.

The part of Madden Thomas, a great theatrical star whose addiction to the bottle has brought about his downfall, is expertly tailored to Woolley. His bombastic utterances and studied rudeness are quite as carbolicly Falstaffian as were the prejudices he preached as "The Man Who Came To Dinner." These overtones of ruthless comedy are Woolley's dish as he brilliantly projects them.

Ida Lupino is nothing short of magnificent in the role of Kathi Thomas, crippled daughter of the acidulous actor in his cups.

What Would a Jim-Crowed Christ Do?

MY BROTHER'S KEEPER, new Sunday morning radio program which features Sylvan Pasernak, veteran radio figure, and John Kinloch, California EAGLE writer, has attracted thousands of listeners during its brief history, a check this week showed.

The program is heard every Sunday morning at 10:45—11:15 over radio station KFOX, 1300 on your dial. The show follows the popular broadcast of Rev. Clayton D. Rusel, The Visitor, from the Independent Church of Christ.

Approaching everyday problems of American democracy from a forthright and uncompromising position, the program has become a "must" of progressive listeners, while maintaining a wide audience of those who enjoy the classic Negro spirituals.

Since its birth several weeks ago, MY BROTHER'S KEEPER has taken up the problem of Negro women working in industry who need housing close to their employment and yet are denied that necessity thru race restrictions. It has presented listeners the story of patriotic Mexican-American youth, victims recently of a barrage of unfriendly criticism and of mass police arrests.

This Sunday a special program will be devoted to the story of Jesus Christ. The pointed question will be put as to what Christ would do were He confronted with the problems of modern American Jim-Crow and discrimination. That question will be answered.

AVERY 'AFTER HOURS' PARRISH IN PERSON ON LINCOLN STAGE

Avery Parrish, the piano sensation of the Erskine Hawkins band, made famous with his piano solo "After Hours" will appear in person at the Lincoln theatre for one week Saturday night. Mr. Parrish was featured with the Hawkins band for several years and made a big hit with his famous solos while playing with Erskine and the boys here in a Hollywood cafe a few weeks ago.

Avery was the same as several other eastern musicians who fell in love with the west coast. After Mr. Hawkins had filled his contracts and was all set to head for the east Avery couldn't bear to leave the land of sunshine so he decided to leave the band. Well, it's a long story, but we will cut it short by saying that it was California or Erskine Hawkins so Mr. Avery Parrish will make his first appearance on his own at the Lincoln theatre for one week only starting Saturday, Dec. 19th. Sam Franklin and his orchestra will be featured on the same program plus two first run hits on the screen. Don't miss this great show.

Coggins and Norden Mix at Legion

IN THIS CORNER — JOHN HENRY LEWIS!

Nope, the announcer won't be bellowing that introduction at Hollywood Legion stadium tonight, but in one corner will be Lewis, the former lightheavyweight ruler, who is now training Connie Norden, the white Bay Area heavy, who squares off against Sailor Jack Coggins, of San Diego, the State lightheavyweight champion.

The go is slated for 10 heats.

Coggins, who knocked out Johnny "Bandit" Romero in two rounds in San Diego last summer for the State crown, will be making his debut at the film city arena. Norden staged two thrill-packed bouts with Junior Munsell, the Oklahoma Indian, in his only appearances here.

Lloyd Marshall, 158¼, of Sacramento, upset Charley Burley, 152½, Minneapolis, to grab a split decision in last Friday night's 10-round main.

The Sacramento boxer, with a heavy duty right hand, floored Burley for a count of four in the opening canto. With the exception of the first and third rounds it appeared to this chronicler that Burley had an edge because of his aggressiveness and superior boxing ability.

In the six-round semi, George Giambastini, 218, took an easy verdict over Bob Brown. The white heavy floored Brown, 193, twice.

In the fours, Chuey Figueroa, 126½, and Manuel Villa, 136, drew; Dario Barron, 138, TKOed Chito Hernandez, 136½, in the first round; Al Calderon, 146, nodded Alonzo Williams, 150, and Benny Black, 132, decisioned Bob Allen, 131.

Hank Rings Up No. 14

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 18.—His 14th victory in 15 starts on his comeback, Henry Armstrong, former holder of three boxing titles at one and the same time, Monday night scored a technical knockout over Saverio Turiello of New York City, former European welterweight champion, in the fourth round of their scheduled 10-round bout.

Armstrong weighed 144; Turiello, 148.

Turiello was floored for a no count in the third, and when he was floored in the fourth for a count of 9, Referee Frankie Brown stepped in and stopped the bout.

'Sugar' Ray Stops Detroit Foe

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 18.—Ray (Sugar) Robinson, Harlem's undefeated welterweight, scored his 40th straight professional victory here at Convention hall Monday night when he technically knocked out Sailor Al Nettlow of Detroit.

Al Weill, Nettlow's manager, asked the referee to halt the bout after three fast rounds for fear his fighter would become seriously injured.

★DOWN IN FRONT

With J. CULLEN FENTRESS

UCLA Has Fair Intersectional Record

Now that the UCLA Bruins are coast conference champions and Rose Bowl-bound after a convincing 14-7 win over University of Southern California Saturday at the Coliseum, the column began to wonder how the Uclans have fared against intersectional opponents over the years. The Bruins face the University of Georgia Bulldogs at Pasadena Jan. 1, you know, of course.

When one takes into consideration that before this season, the Uclans had won 10, lost 10 and tied one intersectional tilt, it may throw a ray of light on how you might expect Brer Bruin to react come Jan. 1. Of course that 7-6 loss to Texas Christian in early season this year adds one more to the loss column in UCLA's fair intersectional record.

Let's look that record over: The Westwood footballers lost one and tied one with Arizona; lost one to Drake; won two, lost one to Florida; won two from Hawaii; won one from the Honolulu Town Team; won one from Iowa; lost one to Iowa State; won one from Missouri; lost one to Northwestern; lost three to Southern Methodist; lost one to Texas A&M; won one, dropped one to Texas Christian; won one from Utah; won one from the Utah State Aggies; and were beaten once by Wisconsin.

The record shows they scored a total of 310 points, while their opponents racked up 228. That's the record over the period, 1919-1942.

From perusing that record, it would seem that the Uclans have had the most trouble with southwestern elevens. Florida, a southeastern team, like Georgia, has dropped two out of three to the Westwood gridders. Be that as it may, the game New Year's figures to be a real thriller, with Bob Waterfield, of UCLA, and Frank Sinkwich, Georgia's athlete of the year, the cool-headed, dynamic and sensational sparkplugs, hooking up in what may prove to be one of the most interesting duels in Rose Bowl history.

Thomas and Coggins Favored

The column has long since passed the stage when it doubted John Thomas' ability to take care of himself in lightweight competition. Next Tuesday night at the Olympic, Long John mixes with Lew Jenkins, former ruler of the world's lightweights. Jenkins, a dangerous puncher, was recently stopped in the Northwest by Henry Armstrong. It's Jenkins first appearance here since he hit the top of the heap. It's puncher versus boxer as Thomas is one of the cleverest and fanciest boxers on the coast. In his record are convincing wins over Cleo Shans (who's raising merry ned in the East), Toby Vigil, and Petey Scalzo, one-time featherweight champion . . . UCLA-USC Notes: In our book the play of UCLA's varsity line was the highlight of the game, completely bottling up Troy's hard-running and speedy backs most of the fray. Together with Bob Waterfield, sharing honors in the Uclan backfield were Vic Smith and Al Solari. Herb Wiener played a helluva lot of end, too. If Mickey McCardle, the SC brokenfield ace, could pass he would be one of the best backs in the country. Ralph Heywood's (SC wingman) booming punts stole kicking honors for the day. How he boots 'em . . . Saw Charley Burley vs. Lloyd Marshall at H'wood Legion Friday night. Marshall got the duke but it was that close. Burley, who it was reported later, was suffering from an injured thumb, is bound to be better than his showing Friday indicated. Marshall, a terrific puncher, should be brought back here. When he decked Burley in the early rounds, and even when the fast-traveling right missed he had the crowd ohhh-ing and aah-ing all over the place . . . Saw Petty Officer Ollie Terry, USN, the golfer, at the fights. Looking fine, too . . . And how Gene Vinassa, the boxing and wrestling publicist, has reduced. They used to call him "Two-Ton." Now he could run competition with The Thin Man, by comparison . . .

The column is not shedding any tears, but it's a darn shame there are no sepia lads on the UCLA roster this year. The first time the Bruins got the bowl bid and there are no Kenny Washingtons, Woody Strodes, Jackie Robinsons, Ray Bartletts, John Wynnes, or Clarence Mackeys — these being some of the guys who put the Westwoods on the football map . . .

Sailor Jack Coggins, the State lightheavyweight kingpin who battles Connie Norden tonight at H'wood, showed considerable improvement after marine Barney Ross (heard of him?) coached him a bit down in San Diego. Ross was recently decorated for heroism in the Solomons . . .

Powerful Max Hutchins looked mighty good in that five-round kayo win over Amado Rodriguez Tuesday night at the Olympic. By the way, those cards improve week by week . . .

Puncher and Boxer Tangle at Olympic

California's outstanding lightweight, our own John Thomas of Los Angeles, tackles the hardest puncher of his career Tuesday night, Dec. 22, at the Olympic, when he meets Lew Jenkins, former world lightweight champion, over the 10-round route.

Boxing men, who call Thomas the "Sugar" Robinson of the coast, is fresh from smashing triumphs over Jimmy Doyle and Eddie Marcus at the Olympic. John previously beat Cleo Shans at the Olympic, twice knocked out Charley Miegel in San Francisco and at Ocean Park and won from Toby Vigil, Petey Scalzo and Lupe Gonzales at Hollywood stadium.

Jenkins is always a dangerous socker, and the wiry Texan is showing plenty of form in workouts at the Main street gymnasium.

Thomas is drilling at the 43rd street gymnasium. Trainer George Tolson has Bobby Yeager, Jimmy Doyle and Mike Delia boxing with Thomas.

Early odds make Thomas an 8 to 10 choice in the wagering, and there is heavy betting on the outcome of Tuesday's lightweight natural. Men who like punchers are giving Jenkins a good chance to check Thomas' winning streak.

Five hot prelims will round out the card.

Booker Holds Moore to Draw

SAN DIEGO, Dec. 18.—Eddie Booker, 160, San Francisco, held slugging Archie Moore, 158, San Diego, to a 12-round draw here Friday night in a state middleweight title bout.

Booker went down twice for no counts in the first, and once in the 7th from a right hook. Each time, however, Booker came back with a boring, infighting style that didn't allow Archie to get set.

Shans Easily Whips Callura

BOSTON, Dec. 18.—Capturing 7 of the 10 rounds for a comparatively easy victory, Cleo Shans, 129½, Los Angeles, the nation's third ranking lightweight, took Jackie Callura, 128, Providence, R. I., into camp here last Friday night before 4000 fans at Mechanics building.

A scrap collection drive in Mineral Wells, Tex., netted three million pounds in three hours.

ON THE TURF

By Geo. A. Ramsey

SAN DIEGO, Dec. 18.—Well, Whirlaway, money's greatest winner, just added another few thousand to his bankroll by winning the big feature races at New Orleans Saturday and will now be shipped to Hialeah Park in Florida for the winter racing where he will pick up some more easy money.

There's no telling just how much this great horse will win if he stays sound and trainer Ben Jones keeps running him. Carrying the big impost of 130 pounds in Saturday's race and after trailing his field until the stretch was reached where Jockey Eads gave the longtailed wonder his head and the race was over, he won by two lengths gong away. The mile and an eighth was run in 1:53 flat.

NAMES '42'S BEST

Well, folks, here are the big six for 1942: Whirlaway, Alsab, Count Fleet, Occupation, Shut Out and Riverland. And did you know that you couldn't buy the six horses for two million dollars. If you think that you can, try it.

Well, they say that the gasration made very little difference with the crowds and mutuel betting at Bay Meadows. Manager Bill Kyne was thinking about racing two days a week, but we understand that the racing commission put their thumbs down on that. What we are now wondering is what, and where will all the horsemen go after Bay Meadows closes the last part of this month. Caliente, which was the saviour of most of them, is closed now and no one knows just when it will re-open.

"ROCHESTER" A BREEDER

We understand that Eddie (Rochester) Anderson will soon go into the breeding business. Eddie has one of the finest ranches in the country. His famous horse, Burnt Cork, has been nominated for nearly all the big stakes in the East next year and if nothing goes wrong with the son of Mr. Bones we look for him to win his share of them. Anyway, we hope so and the entire coast will be pulling every time he goes to the post. Eddie has some more two-year olds that he bought at the sales when he bought Burnt Cork, and he thinks one of them is even better than the Cork.

Max Hutchins Smashes Out 5-Rd. KO Over Rodriguez

Max Hutchins, hard and fast-punching middleweight, made his debut in the 10-round main event class a successful one Tuesday night when he scored a smashing fifth round knockout over Amado Rodriguez at Olympic auditorium.

Rodriguez scaled 159½; Hutchins, 155½.

The Mexican newcomer, who forced Jack Chase to travel 10 fast rounds last month before the latter earned the decision, took the first two rounds Tuesday night, but Hutchins a terrific body puncher, began to get the range in the third. He floored Rodriguez for a 9 count in the fifth, and put him down for good a few seconds later.

Chester Ellis, 123, decisioned Ceferino Robleto, 118, in a fast six-round semi-final bout.

In the best of the four-heat prelims, Reecy Davis, 155, had a slight edge over Willie Collins, 156, but could get nothing better than a draw.

In the other fours, Bobby Fontez, 155, TKOed Eddie Reid, 148, in three; and Allen Arnett, 170, decisioned Tony Martin, 166, in the opener.

Osmond Grazette Made Corporal

HAMILTON FIELD, Dec. 18.—Osmond Grazette, 1236 E. 46th street, Los Angeles, husband of Mrs. Evelyn Flood Grazette, has been promoted to rank of corporal, it was announced recently from Hamilton Field, northern California Air base.

Grazette is a former employee of the City of Los Angeles. He worked in the Hall of Records before enlisting in the Army Oct. 4, at Hammer Field, Fresno.

Bishop Jones, 77, Feted on Birthday

By BREVEN BROWN
(Special Eagle Reporter)

BISHOP C. P. JONES

While the twinkling shadows of nightfall drifted o'er the dome of Christ Temple Church, a capacity crowd gather to pay tribute to a Prophet of Christ in these times,, Bishop Charles Price Jones.

Merrier and happier than ever before in his life, the aged Senior Bishop Charles Price Jones, LL. D., who founded the Churches of Christ in America, received a double chain of dollars from all well wishers and followers at the Temple that night. A perpetual flow of dollars, messages and gifts of every description continued to "roll in" all during the week. The Bishop received $25 from the one whom he thought was his worst enemy in the world. He also enjoys a church completely out of debt.

Blending into, and leading up to this mammoth Celebration Week's activities and the general public celebration of the 77-year old prelate, who missed being born a slave, literally by a cat's hair was a huge birthday dinner at the home of Bro. F. P. Shaw. Bro. Shaw has been the Treasurer from the birth of the 54th and Hooper Temple of Christ.

Furnishing the musical renditions at the opening session of this great affair honoring a great character were the combined choirs of Bethel Church of Christ (Holiness the "Church of the Old Time Religion" under the direction of Mesdames Amanda Woods and Annie Lois Jackson.

Speaking at this opening which also commemorated Pearl Harbor, following a programme was the Spiritual Son of the Sr. Bishop and founder who is the vice-president of the National Convention along with other duties, supervisor of the National Publishing House and Presiding Bishop of the Western Diocese of the Churches of Christ. Bishop Wm. A. Washington, able as he is especially fired from on high at this celebration where the son eulogized the father.

Mrs. Charles R. Bishop to Speak for Baha'i Faith

Under the auspices of the Baha'i Faith, Mrs. Charles Reed Bishop will speak Sunday afternoon, Dec. 20, at 3 p. m., 1709 W. 8th street, on "The Essential Co-operation."

"The teachings of the Baha'i Faith," says Mrs. Bishop, "neither tend to stifle the flame of a sane and intelligent patriotism in men's hearts, nor to abolish the system of national autonomy so essential if the evils of excessive centralization are to be avoided.

"They call for a wider loyalty, for a larger aspiration than any that has yet animated the human race; the unity of mankind must be recognized, and the oneness of religion realized. When the world has learned the full bitterness of servitude to the principles of competition and struggle dominating the past, we will see, as an expression of the law of evolution, the abandonment of all prejudices arising historically in the development of separate races, classes, nations and creeds.

"Unity will be the very condition of existence," Mrs. Bishop continued. "Following the reconstruction period we must have a human society based upon absolute justice and the recognition that cooperation between all the units which comprise it is essential."

There are no charges or collections and all are heartily welcomed. Use Sunset or Wilshire busses, H, R, S, or N cars.

Second AME Church S. S. Sets Xmas Party

Another helpful and inspiring message was received on Sunday last from the pastor as he spoke on the subject "Don't Drift". There were four accessions and two conversions. A large number of visitors were present.

The pastor is urging friends in the neighborhood to make Second Church their church home for the duration it will save, help you to conserve gas and carfare. Worship with us for the duration.

The Sunday School will hold its annual Christmas Party and Christmas Tree on Thursday evening, December 23rd at 7:30 o'clock. There will be a present for every one who attend. Candies, nuts and fruits will be given to all who are present whether or not you belong to the Sunday School. Superintendent Joseph Buckner says there will be sufficient to accomodate both old and young and you are invited to be present and share with us this Christmas treat.

Christmas Midnight Mass will be featured at midnight on Dec. 24th featuring a combined choir of 100 voices. Several leading and outstanding artists will present a dramatization of the Christmas Story. The Christmas mesage will be delivered by Rev. J. B. Isaacs. Be present. Arrangements are being made for transportation of those who cannot otherwise get there. Call ADams 1-5735.

Rev. and Mrs. Isaacs will breakfast the chorus at the close of the service.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE CHURCHES

The query "Is the Universe, Including Man, Evolved by Atomic Force?" is the subject of the Sunday Lesson-Sermon in all Churches of Christ, Scientist. The Golden Text from Acts reads: "Known unto God are all his works from the beginning of the world."

A Bible citation includes these words of the prophet, Haggai: "According to the word that I covenanted with you when ye came out of Egypt, so my spirit remaineth among you: fear ye not. For thus saith the Lord of hosts; Yet once, it is a little while, and I will shake the heavens, and the earth, and the sea, and the dry land; And I will shake all nations, . . . and I will fill this house with glory, . . . and in this place will I give peace, saith the Lord of hosts." An excerpt from the Psalms is also included: "The Lord sitteth upon the flood; yea, the Lord sitteth King for ever. The Lord will give strength unto his people; the Lord will bless his people with peace."

Mary Baker Eddy, in "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," contributes these statements: "The universe, like man, is to be interpreted by Science from its divine Principle, God, and then it can be understood; but when explained on the basis of physical sense and represented as subject to growth, maturity, and decay, the universe, like man, is, and must continue to be, an enigma." "Spirit is the life, substance, and continuity of all things."

Neighborhood Church Buys New Church Home

The Neighborhood church, now worshipping at 27th and Paloma, has recently made arrangements to purchase the beautiful church properties from the Christian Reformed church at 47th place and San Pedro. The properties consist of church building, community hall and 7-room parsonage.

The Neighborhood church plans to take over the property on Jan. 1 and will hold the first service at 11 o'clock, Jan. 3, at which time Dr. Joseph M. Evans, pastor of the Metropolitan Community church of Chicago, will deliver the opening sermon.

Neighborhood church was organized by Dr. H. Mansfield Collins two years ago at Wesley center with a few more than 200 members and has grown to a membership of over 700. They acquired two large lots recently at 49th and Avalon upon which they expected to build, but the war hindered this effort. They are still in possession of these and expect later to use them for a church home. For the past year they have been worshipping at the Azusa Pentecostal church at 27th and Paloma.

Six weeks ago a 30-day drive was started which will end in the new church home, but the first report will be made Sunday, at which time plans have been made to raise $5,000 (five thousand dollars). The church is divided into two groups, army and navy, with a number of captains on each side and the pastor and his wife leading the groups.

Dr. Collins says, "It is not a competitive drive but rather a cooperative effort, grouping the membership under competent workers that all might be reached. We have had thus far no form of entertainment, such as teas, dinners, concerts, etc., but such a hearty response has already come from our members that we definitely know that more than $5,000 will be raised by Sunday when the first report of this 90-day drive will be given, a report of less than two months.

"The members of Neighborhood represent some of the finest and most loyal I have pastored in my 30 years of ministry and I can depend upon them doing the unusual. Though they have put the drive over it has not in the least interfered with our other financial contributions and program, which is most often the case.

"The new location is one of the most fashionable residential districts of the city and practically unchurhed. Neighborhood, being non-sectarian, will be pleased to serve all regardless of denominational beliefs; her chief mission is to serve God and help her fellowman, spreading the Kingdom of God on earth. We also expect later to begin a real community program in that section where our church will be an asset to the community, with an every-day program of helpful service. Our motto is, 'The church of the people is the mother of democracy,' and our church is fast becoming one of the most democratic religious institutions of the city, where it is a genuine pleasure to serve and be served."

The public is invited to both services next Sunday at 11 and three o'clock at 27th and Paloma when the first lap of the drive ends.

Race Track GOSSIP

By Jay Gould

The three glamour girls this week are Bea (Beauty Shop) Parker, Oakland, Delores (Battle) White, Chicago, and Edna Mae Holley, shop stripper who played 'Frisco for a while and is now in Chicago.

The three best dressed women of the week are Fedora Basque, June Hunt, and Rosa Montgomery, all of 'Frisco.

Christmas will make a new record for high baskets, packages, money and presents of all kinds will be mailed to friends across and around the world.

The war brings on many changes. Number one: The most unpopular man in the country is the man who rations only four gallons of gas a week.

The only man in the world that never receives a good word from a landlady or a landlord is the man in the office of the Price Administrator who put the ceiling prices on.

Mr. and Mrs. Sport Fan: Santa Anita and Hollywood Park race tracks will be in darkness and a real blackout for the 1943 season so that is that.

The two saddest happenings of all times were the Natchez Miss disaster where scores of people lost their lives and the recent Cocoanut Grove disaster in Boston t'other day where over five hundred lost their lives.

Johnny (Double V Club) Cornish, Clarence "Memo" Moore, red head Alice Keys, all of Los Angeles, and A. Love of Jacks Tavern in 'Frisco who instead of driving in the gas station and yelling "Fill it up" are now airplaning their way through the deep blue skies.

Benny (Office) Ayers, Nicie "Manicure" Winslow and Clay, the barber, who get the wrong way ten times in a row on the ponies which goes to prove that P. T. Barnum was right again. A sucker born every minute.

Jimmie Morrell, who couldn't wait twenty-five seconds for the bulbs to change ran through the red after losing thirty at Bay Meadows. The traffic cop handed him a tag which set him back for ten more. Tee hee.

Popular names in the news from coast to coast: Stage and Screen stars and vocalists: Lena Horne, Una Mae Carlisle, Dorothy Dandridge, Ivy Anderson, Billie Holliday, Ella Fitzgerald, Maxine Sullivan, Havana Crunch, Dee Dee Hackett, Genevieve Stearns, Clara Campbell, Louise Calloway, Helen Humes, Madeline Green, Ealine Williams, Mary Lou Williams, Mary James, Rosette Williams, Edna Harris, Theresa Harris, Maudine Simmons, Lovey Lane, Marie Bryant, Katherine Dunham, Betty Treadwell, Lillian Randolph, Patsy Hunter and Dorothy Webb, play all the glittering spots.

Yours truly was at the football game between Stanford and Navy. Pre Flight Pete Box and Little Joe Walker, Stanford Wonder Every Haller were about enough to get registered sitting around the seats. Stanford kicked the bum guys.

Willmer is in the Bay area sometime to come to get the oomph in the air.

Georgia Clare, Oakland girl was seen doing the spots and turning Frisco into a mint.

Daniel Leonard Smith knocks himself out, grabs all pieces and has money, honey and more.

Myrtle Westbrook is spotted in the better places of Frisco.

Flynn Cooper is seen about town playing everything that wins and everything that is safe.

Mr. and Mrs. Thuzing Brown entertained at their home Thanksgiving Day with a turkey dinner and plenty of Cuvee champagne. Their honored guests were Mr. and Mrs. Howard Boyd, Mr. and Mrs. Donald Sapp, Dave Logan, Miss Pearl Thomas and Miss V. Walker. All enjoyed a wonderful time.

Parker C. Kenner is back from a week in Los Angeles. He said goodbye to his baby brother, Bert, who joined the armed forces. Kenner says he really had a swell time seeing all the boys and girls back home but glad to play it again with Jean Hix and other Bay area cuties.

Myrtle Delano Smith is seen in and out of the best places in the Bay area.

Mrs. Inez Coleman spent the week end in Los Angeles with Mr. Dolme and Miss Beebe Smith. Mrs. Coleman is on her way to Boston, Mass., to meet Mr. Coleman who is in the U. S. Coast Guard. She is proud of that fact, too.

See Mrs. Owen around town. Wonder what happened to Mrs. Strange? Mrs. Owen was accompanied by Mr. Maxon Barnett of Houston, Tex.

The Merchant Marine has claimed another fine young man in the person of Robert Atkinson, son of Frank "Dad" Atkinson. This makes two of "Dad's" boys in the service. I'm sure Mr. Atkinson, as well as our people, are proud of his sons.

Late Notes on Lionel Hampton's Thanksgiving Dance: Everyone tells yours truly (as if he didn't know) that the stuff was there, on the beam, in the mood, and so forth and so on. Juan Corzales, champ photographer said that Hampton is tops and his music nothing less than O. K. A number of people said they believed he is the lone bandmaster who attempts always to suit his public. Lionel just made a record sale of Flying Home and In The Bag. He only pulled $65,000 in two weeks at 'Frisco's Golden Gate and was held over by popular demand. Topping that, the vibraharp artist packed over 3500 fans for a one night dance performance. The band is fine especially with the addition of his new tenor sax, Arnett Cobb. The only thing possibly missing is a good trumpet soloist. The rhythm section stands up fine with Lionel's terrific ideas still tops. Hampton's ideas are coming faster and even more in the groove than when he was in his supposed peak with Benny Goodman.

Mrs. Juanita Gardner was present with Mrs. Willie Breedlove and Duke Robertson at the dance. Chappell, the photographer, was present and copped several shots of the band. Mr. and Mrs. Sights were at the dance knocking themselves out and everything seemed all right. Baby Zeigler was there and just playing: Mrs. Sadie Malcolm and sister, Wilma Chevalier, Ben Merritt, Amelia Brooks, Lee and Emily Green, Mrs. W. L. Smith, Mrs. Lonnie Mae Brooks and notables from both sides of the Bay were enjoying the highlights of the evening's fun.

Scotty: Take it easy.

To complete a swell night of about the town doings, drop in to Slee Shinks. He has the dinner you have been waiting for.

A hint to Ernest: These young bloods will not get you anything but make you jump from the frying pan into the fire.

[illegible] and pass the examination with $50 per month tossed in.

Wilbur Hanes ought to remember he has some responsibility in Berkeley and certain cuties are absolutely rat poison.

Top notchers that can be seen in and out of Frisco, from up the state: Roy Gardner, Palmer Pinckney, Carl Buckner, Tex Allen, Ralph Collins, Jack Londy, Earl Londy, Jap Boyd, also Minnie Lee, Sadie Robey and sister, Joan ex-Green, Lucille Finley. Toys bunch is tops and ringsides at big events. So what?

All gofers that drop in on 'Frisco gin Ellen Byrd a ring at WAlnut 2913. Judson Grant at the Rice Brook Hotel, Emery Heller at 1820 Post street, Gilbert Ayler at Jack's Tavern, and Jim Roberts at the Town Club. Also Nick Nickerson at the Shirley digs.

Folks about town from coast to coast: Ed Small, New York; Lovie Joe Rogerson, Caspar Holstein, and John Levy, all of New York.

I quote a letter from Marshall Myers of Buffalo who says he may come to Oakland in a week or two to pick up on some business.

Bobbie Bell of Frisco still clicking hard and giving away the game.

Seattle Flashes: Pop Kuk Gus Wilson, Mr. Dan Mota, Mr. 29, Herman Sexton, Otis Washington, Walter White, Song Lorry, Dick Ruffin, Joe Campbell, Joe Burns, Sherman Spates, Ted Bell, Noodles and Russell Smith, George West, J. Chavis, Walter Green, Felix Crane are going one with a bang. Word from Spokane says Walter Delaney and Augie Ball are at the big dough. Brewer Abbey was sighted in between cities of St. Paul and Minneapolis, having the time of his life.

Some new word slang: the lads have just got back from the Islands and say the fighting is thick as lops in an effort to take Pilots is chuckey. Oscar is money digger is soldier, fair cousin is tough luck, shout is to buy a drink; cobber is pal, crook on is to be mad at, dinkum oil is the truth; sheila is a girl, coot is a man; drizzlin is crying. How's that for jive.

Grace Dobbs, Ralph J. Davis, and Eugene Desvigne all enjoyed a grand time at Lionel Hampton's dance Thanksgiving eve.

Little Mamma surrounded by friends but picking out Vernon Brown, Louis Verette and the bartenders and Eva Kelly, beauty operator, also Bill Marshall who had had enough. She couldn't have been short, could she?

It pays to be short of cash some of the time. When Myrtle Bishop lost her first bet which was ten bucks and picked seven more losers proves that it is good to be short of cash some of the time.

John A. Buxton who has raked in a hundred thousand dollars for his end of booking the big name bands has something new in store for his dance fans. Watch this space for the holiday band with a big name. At the Auditorium in Oakland.

Don't be surprised and say yours truly didn't tell you but Bay Meadows may get a February meeting.

Josephine La Beau was ballyhooing and sipping mixed drinks at the different spots.

Mrs. Joyce Thompson and Olivia Ball having a good time at the Club Alabam on their return from the San Joaquin valley.

Julius Delifus and Clarence Estell new cocktail bar, Fillmore and Post streets, will be remodeled, which will set them back just 8 G's.

Saw Miss Nina Jones, charming waitress of the Overland Cafe, Oakland, enjoying herself immensely at Jack's.

Lt. Larry Moore, Alfred Smith, and Elderado Rave Mitchell all playing hard at the Town club.

Willie Cooper, well known on the coast, has taken unto himself a wife. The former beauty, Miss Ada Sims is now known among her friends as Mrs. Ada Cooper.

The Golden Gate Quartett opened at the Golden Gate theatre, 'Frisco, Wednesday. Owens, one of the quartett members was seen playing hard with his landlady, Lydia Roscoe.

Clarence Dunn spent a wonderful Thanksgiving with his friends, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Gaither in L. A.

Do something for your country says Tite Brown, he is now a sigh fitter and shooting hundred dollar bills.

Cpl. Jeffrey Lee is here on a furlough visiting friends and relatives in San Francisco from Seattle, Wash. But tonite he was wining and dining with M. Joseph, Dusty Brown and Miss Norris Johnson.

Little Red, better known as Chick, can be seen around the glittering spots.

Marjorie Lyons, Emma Wright and James Smiley in and out of the top spots in 'Frisco.

Earl Hines may be the next on the list in 'Frisco. Watch this space for the date.

Atty. Williams' Offices Robbed

Gaining entrance through an open transom, burglars entered the offices of Attorney David W. Williams, in the Blodgett building, Tuesday night and completely ransacked the rooms, leaving the office in a wrecked condition.

Missing were two Underwood typewriters, a desk clock, a desk fountain pen and an overcoat. Newton Street officers are conducting an investigation of the burglary.

In view of the present "freeze" on typewriters, Williams indicated that he would gladly buy back the machines if contacted.

Frank Horne, Federal Official, Visits L. A.

NNIA Pushes War Bonds Campaign

That life insurance companies and agents are very essential to the welfare of the nation in wartime as well as in time of peace is being demonstrated by the magnificent support they are giving to the war effort.

Purchases of government obligations comprised 58.8 per cent of all investments made by life insurance companies during the first 8 months of 1942. During the past two years, Negro life insurance companies have invested more than $5,000,000 in government obligations.

This also brings to attention the financial support of the government by Negro Americans, another forceful argument for removing barriers of race discrimination.

During the period, Dec. 18 to Jan. 16, the National Negro Insurance association is conducting a Four Freedoms Victory Bond rally, and agents of member companies are devoting one day each week for the solicitation of applications for War Bonds and Stamps instead of applications for life insurance. This is a very striking example of how the talents of insurance salesmen are valuable to the nation in time of emergency.

You can have an important part in helping to make this demonstration more impressive by purchasing War Bonds and Stamps through your Golden State Mutual Insurance agent during this campaign. You are urged to take advantage of this opportunity to invest in freedom and save for your future.

Corporal Excels as Decorator of Camp Lee Buildings

By PAUL L. HACKETT, sr.

During his 24 years Corporal James Reed has ben the founder and president of a decorating and painting company. Many of the most beautiful buildings of the 11th colored Quartermaster Training Regiment have been decorated by this New Englander.

Cpl. Reed was born in Kansas City, Mo. and moved to Hartford, Conn., with his parents at an early age. In his new home he attended High School and Federal College where he majored in Negro history and minored inpsychology.

After leaving college he commenced his career of painting and interior decorating, later organizing the Rueubens Painting and Decorating Company. His work carried him throughout Connecticut and Metropolitan, N. Y.

Last April he was inducted into the service. After receiving his training in Companies "O" of the 9th Regiment and "K" of the 11th he received his promotion to the grade of corporal.

Since being a non-commissioned officer he has decorated the mess halls of Companies K and G and the 11th Regiment's Day Room. His crowning achievement was the planning and interior decorating of the 11th Regiment's Cadre Club Building which is one of the most beautiful on the post. Many visiting the club have asked to engage him for private homes but he has always refused saying that he has a full-time contract with the United States Army.

AN IMPORTANT MESSAGE About the MEAT SITUATION

Recently it has become more and more difficult for all meat markets to obtain the same large variety of meats that patrons have been accustomed to choose from. Although we have spared neither time nor effort to maintain our stocks, we have not been able to provide as wide a selection as either you or this market would like.

This market still has as large a variety as any and, in fact, a larger selection than many others. We regret seeing some of our patrons disappointed and appreciate the fine spirit and loyalty that our friendly patrons have shown in realizing that the situation is a necessary war sacrifice.

We pledge ourselves to continue to provide the largest selection of meat products possibly obtainable.

INDIA NEWS

A Great Church Leader Writes on India in 'The Protestant'

"The quarrel between Congress and the Government is no private matter, all allied countries are concerned, for India's potential strength is immense and should be used to the full. India might struggle as China has struggled, throwing the resources of four hundred millions into the scale. To secure the wholehearted help of India is worth much sacrifice, but we shall never win it in an atmosphere of sullen resentment; amidst shootings, whippings, and imprisonment. The situation is intolerable. It must cease, fresh negotiations must start and it is our duty to call for them. We must seek afresh a road which will satisfy India and release her powers to fight. Fresh negotiations are a paramount necessity. Their stake is akin to ours. Responsible men could be found to serve in a provisional government. India's eleven province Prime Ministers, seven of them already in Congress, could form a nucleus. We have been told repeatedly that they conduct their office with distinction. Such a government with leaders like Nehru would give us a staunch anti-Fascist ally. There should be no interference with the Commander-in-Chief nor with the high strategy of war. Congress has already given assurances to this effect.

"Let us change boldly, frankly, and resolutely. The old imperialism has gone, let all thoughts of prestige go with it. All that we give up and all that we risk is a small price to pay for the harvest we shall reap in the friendliness and massive help of India and in the goodwill of all freedom loving peoples throughout the world." . . . Dr. Hewlett Johnson, Dean of Canterbury, in the journal "The Protestant," August-September, 1942.

Churchill's Statement About Congress Untrue

Mr. Winston Churchill's claim that the Congress was an unrepresentative body and that its demand for Independence was opposed by the majority of Indians has been abundantly disproved.

It was spiked by Sir Sikander Hyat Khan, powerful premier of the Punjab, when he told newspaper men that in his opinion "the vast majority of Moslems sympathize with Congrss."

Mr. Allah Baksh, the Moslem premier of Sind, went so far as to state that "the average Mohammedan outside the Moslem League sympathizes with the aims of Congress." Mr. Allah Baksh is President of the All-India Moslem Conference.

The Hindu Mahassaba, important political orthodox group in India, seeking permission from the Government of India to negotiate directly with Congress leaders now in prison with a view to achieving a basis of understanding with the Moslem League and the Congress, declared "We put the British to the test here and now and call upon them to part with power."

Sir Tej Bahadur Sapru, long respected by the British Government and a leader of the liberal party in India, challenged the Churchill statement that Congress was not supported by the Indian people: "We wonder if it is sufficiently realized that apart from the Congress, all other parties in India are now insisting that India's position as a free country should be declared during the war and that she should have a National government with liberty to organize her defense against Japan."

Other groups such as the Indian Chamber of Commerce condemn the Churchill statement as "biased, disingenuous, provocative and tending to confirm the widespread and deeprooted distrust of British promises regarding Indian freedom."

Chu Hsueh-Fan,

President of Chinese Association of Labor, Speaks out for India's Freedom:

In their struggle for freedom and independence, the Indian people are enjoying the wholehearted sympathy and support of the Chinese people. The Chinese people have lived through enough trials and tribulations of imperialistic encroachments and military aggression to appreciate the righteousness of the Indian cause.

It was Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek who took the initiative to call upon the British government to give "as speedily as possible the Indians real political power so that they may be in a position to develop fully their spiritual and material strength."

If India be given freedom to fight on the side of the United Nations, Japan cannot hope to subjugate her—just as Japan has failed to subjugate China. India has a population of 390,000,000, an army of one and one-half million, and enormous natural resources. Her industrial capacity today is even greater than that of China in 1937. If China has successfully resisted Japan for five years, India can do likewise. If India joins forces with China, we will have between us 800,000,000's of peoples—more than one-third of the human race. If Japan cannot conquer China alone, how can she hope to conquer both China and India? On the other hand, the Indians cannot be expected to wholeheartedly fight for the freedom which they themselves are denied.

There are those who would like to see the Indians give up their claims to freedom and fight for the United Nations. They are out to assign the blame on Indian leaders, but much though I would desire help from the Indians in this hour of grave peril, I cannot in fairness see the justice of expecting a slave whose hands are tied to guard his master and his friends from the hazards of slavery. Not until the slave is freed can he be expected to free others from slavery. In slavery he is powerless, but given freedom, he will not hesitate to fight for its preservation. He will then fight selflessly on the side of other free men in this spirit and for the common cause of victory for all United Nations.

Let us plead with our British ally to exercise his good sense to save India and thus save himself from enslavement by Japan. The existence not only of Britain, but of 27 other countries as well depends on the wise and farsighted decision of the British government. It will mean a contribution on the part of the British leaders to the fight for freedom, and posterity will applaud.

In India the Peasantry Is on the March

While the repression is being unleashed in all its fury in India, the condition of the people goes from bad to worse. The peasants, the workers, the Congress men and women, and the organized student bodies are awaiting their respective places not in the ranks of the fighting forces, but are languishing in jails. Mr. Amery continues to tell the world the unconvincing story of India being divided and of Britain trying to unite her. The goal of India, as all the other free nations, is assured historically. The mental aberration of such men as Mr. Amery will never retard the wheel of progress, it will not help in solving anything.

It is sad indeed that in Great Britain, as in America, the press appears to think that by suppressing and blanketing the news from India it is serving the cause of freedom and wise statesmanship. Their approach to the Indian question does not seem to represent any advance in political wisdom which one might expect in this critical juncture of the civilized world.

Public opinion, no doubt, feels more concerned and disturbed on this question than it has ever been before in our history. Young people, whether they be intellectuals or workers, have shown far greater sense of coming to grips with grim reality on the present issue than older and presumably wiser men. The United India which, under the leadership of the Congress, can rightly claim to include the workers, the peasants, the middle classes, the professional people, and the youth and students of India, is a mighty force—and it is a mighty force because it has as its allies most of the Moslem organizations, the Indian trade unions, the progressive parties, the Indian Christians, the All-India Depressed Classes, the State's People's Congress, and of the All-India Peasants organization. It has as its allies also the progressive labor movements of America, China, and of the Soviet Union, and of an increasingly large part of the labor movement of Great Britain. Any attempts to resist or to disrupt the force of this united will, must increasingly meet with active and vigorous opposition from all sides.

India thus marches on. India marches on to her own national independence and thus to play her historical role in the era of social justice for all classes of her people and the struggling masses everywhere. But thanks to the Amerys and the Linlithgows, the path to be traversed must be one of resistance to entrenched reaction. In such a situation, the decision to take the decisive step must of necessity be a most serious one. India has taken it. It can have only one end—Freedom for All Mankind, for India's freedom and a United Nations victory are the keys to that larger freedom.

Freedom Is Indivisible

"Freedom betrayed in India is betrayed everywhere. It is indivisible and it is the people's birthright, not a reward for good behaviour."

China Wants a Free India

Labor Extends Hand of Friendship to India

Local 6 of the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union of San Francisco, one of the most important CIO Unions on the Pacific Coast, at its membership meeting of August 22, 1942, passed a resolution urging the President of the United States to intercede with Great Britain for the freedom of India.

The final Whereas in the above resolution stated:

"WHEREAS: The present rule of the British Government in India is directly opposed to the Atlantic Charter and the four freedoms that the Allies are fighting for; therefore, be it resolved that we, the 15,000 members of Warehouse Union, Local 6, urge Franklin Delano Roosevelt, President of the United States, to intercede with the British Government to the end that India shall have her freedom now, and as a free people become one of our Allies in the present war against the Axis powers."

The San Francisco CIO Council on September 4, 1942, resolved "That this Council ask President Roosevelt to submit to British Prime Minister Winston Churchill a program calling for the immediate release of the Indian leaders, recognition of a provisional Indian Government, and the ceasing of repressive measures against the Indian people."

When R. Lal Singh spoke at the regular meeting of Local No. 44, the Cooks, Pastry Cooks and Assistants Union, San Francisco, September 17, 1942, that organization went on record in favor of reopening of negotiations with the Indian leaders, and requested President Roosevelt to personally intervene on behalf of the Indian people with the British War Cabinet, and it resolved to send its resolution to Roosevelt, Churchill, The British Trades Union Congress, the Viceroy of India, and the Labor and Commercial press.

Up to the 16th of September, 1942, the national conventions of the United Automobile Workers, The United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers, and the United Office and Professional Workers had passed resolutions taking a clear-cut stand for freedom for India.

One of the Whereases of the United Office and Professional Workers resolution is of especial interest. It stated that:

"Whereas, the present policy of the British government toward India is in violation of the principles set forth in the Atlantic Charter and seriously obstructs the mobilizati of the Indian people for the defense of their country and support of the United Nations . . ."

It will be noted that this formulation reflects the same need to make the Atlantic Charter apply in the Pacific that was so clearly stressed at Chungking by Wendell Willkie in his famous speech reproduced elsewhere in the current issue of India News.

India thus is united in aim in this people's war. But there is disunity between her peoples and the State. A disunity which retards her from throwing fully her mighty force into the ranks of the United Nations.

The masses of India are aware that they must play their historical role jointly with the United Nations in this era of social justice and liberation against the sweeping tide of Nazism and Fascism. But thanks to the Amerys and Linlithgows, the effort of the Indian people to throw their manpower and resources into the ranks of the United Nations' forces is thwarted by a policy which moves the Indian masses to resist the decision of Whitehall.

Alone, India is helpless to change a policy of intransigence. The people of America and Britain shoulder a great responsibility. Their task is to intervene in the present stalemate and release the unbounded power of India into the ranks of the United Nations. It can have only one end—a swift United Nations' victory and freedom for all mankind.

West and East

The present situation in India, which holds possibilities of great risk for the United Nations—China, Russia and the United States no less than Great Britain—can at least serve one useful purpose. It can help to focus our attention on the still unsolved problems, elsewhere in Asia, involved in the relations between the Western Powers and the Eastern peoples. If the difficulties in the Indian situation are not to be repeated on a wider scale later, they must be avoided now. And they can be avoided . . .

To all who know the East, it is plain that there are in the Eastern peoples reserves of distrust of the countries that now fight for democracy. The distrust can and should be undermined. The lesson of India is mordantly clear. Too late is futile and may be tragic.—From an editorial, New York Times, October 11, 1942.

AMERY SLAMS DOOR ON MEDIATION

"We are not quitting India on anyone's order." Thus did the Secretary of State for India wind up the debate on India in the House of Commons, October 8, 1942.

If the Indo-British deadlock now existing were a private affair between Amery and India, one would not be very concerned. But it happens that India is vital to the United Nations' war effort and, therefore, concerns not only Amery but every man, woman and child who is struggling throughout the world against the barbarous forces of fascism. India is vital to the United Nations' victory.

REFLECTIONS OF A TRAGIC PAST

Recent history in Hong Kong, Malaya, Burma, Singapore and Java emphatically demonstrate the impotence of the colonial policy of Great Britain. This policy, which condones public whippings, shootings, and machine-gunning of Indians from the air, creates an atmosphere of resentment and bitterness throughout India and cannot possibly aid the United Nations' war effort. It is as much a blow to China's heroic millions, to the people's army of the USSR, to the British people and American people and to the subject peoples everywhere.

THIS IS A PEOPLE'S WAR

The present war calls for unity—a united front of all peoples in a common struggle. It demands the release of all the forces of freedom. No country today can be left vulnerable to Axis designs or agents, and no people can be left enchained to be struck down because they cannot defend themselves.

This is a people's war and the failure of the Secretary of State for India to create the psychological atmosphere of resistance among the masses of India is a blow to their spirit of no surrender.

The British and American people must force a realistic approach and NOW!—upon the British government.. What we do today determines our whole future.

"The People Are on the March Toward Even Fuller Freedom' -- Wallace.

Mr. Amery, Secretary of State for India, and the party he represents seem determined to prosecute the war against the Indian people rather than the common enemy of all mankind. It seems that he has forgotten the challenging lines spoken by the Vice President of the United States when he said, "The people are on the march toward even fuller freedom than the most fortunate peoples of the earth have hitherto enjoyed. No Nazi counter-revolution will stop it. The common man will smoke the Hitler stooges out into the open in the United States, in Latin America and in India. He will destroy their influence. No Lavals, no Mussolinis will be tolerated in a Free World.

"The people in their millennial and revolutionary march toward manifesting here on earth the dignity that is in every human soul holds as its credo the Four Freedoms as enunciated by President Roosevelt in his message to Congress on January 6, 1941." (Extract from the speech by the Vice President, Mr. Wallace, speaking to members and guests of the Free World Association, May 8, 1942.)

The Four Freedoms

By President Franklin D. Roosevelt

The first is freedom of speech and expression—everywhere in the world.

The second is freedom of every person to worship God in his own way—everywhere in the world.

The third is freedom from want—which, translated into world terms, means economic understandings which will secure to every nation a healthy peacetime life for its inhabitants—everywhere in the world.

The fourth is freedom from fear—which, translated into world terms, means a worldwide reduction of armaments to such a point and in such a thorough fashion that no nation will be in a position to commit an act of physical aggression against any neighbor—anywhere in the world.—January 6, 1941.

The Press and India

Over a period of weeks, India News tried to arrange for a short meeting with Manchester Boddy of the Los Angeles Daily News. The purpose of this meeting, of course, was to make available to The News certain information about the Indian crisis.

In spite of our repeated efforts, Mr. Manchester Boddy, the editor of The News, printed in his paper on September 19th a lying editorial containing such sentences as "Two Indians out of three are Hindus. One out of Four is a Moslem. The two hate each other with an all-consuming hatred. While the Hindus greatly outnumber the Moslems, the latter are better fighters, and could prolong civil war for years."

"There is no unanimity on any single matter."

Of course, we wrote Mr. Boddy and asked permission to reply to his unfair editorial. But Mr. Boddy has not deigned to reply.

We are happy to say that there has been one exception among the daily newspapers of the Pacific Coast on this question of honesty regarding the Indian crisis. The People's World, a newspaper published in San Francisco, but which has circulation in Los Angeles and other coast cities as well, has consistently favored freedom for India, and has not hesitated to tell the truth about the current struggle.

This paper very interestingly pointed out at the time of the crisis that the newspapers of China were not following the course of vilification which the press here has rather widely adopted. The People's World editorial stated:

"Far from the mean and blind misrepresentation of India's attitude which we find almost universally in the American newspapers, China's official press credits the All-India National Congress with the desire to aid the war against the Axis by the only possible way it has—the obtaining of something which the Indian people will fight for—independence." (From the People's World, August 4th, 1942.)

Mediate Now!

Only evasion of responsibility, isolation in a new phase, can permit the view that the question of India's part in the United Nations' war effort is England's business and not ours. India is the vital interest of all the United Nations and a special responsibilty of the United States, which stands in the best position to influence decisive changes of British policy.

On September 16, 1942, at New Delhi, N. M. Joshi, the great Indian labor leader in the Central Assembly stated:

"I am quite certain that every Indian in this Assembly will agree that an Indian National Government would raise an army of five or ten millions and intensify war production tenfold compared with what is happening now."

WHAT AMERY SAID ABOUT MUSSOLINI IN 1935

"Whatever we may think of Mussolini's Abyssinian adventure, we must in fairness recognize that no one in recent years has made a greater practical contribution to the peace of Europe than Signor Mussolini."

Lin Yutang, China's Modern Novelist, States a Few Facts

What then are the facts about India? The greatest fact is what these three hundred and ninety million Indians are feeling and how keenly they feel about it. That is the only thing to consider. India may be our asset or our liability . . .

They want their freedom. They want responsibility in the defense of their own country which was denied them by Sir Stafford Cripps. They want to live and fight as a free nation alongside the United Nations.

The full text of the Congress resolution shows clearly they want the allied soldiers to stay in India and help defend their own country, if they are given the status of a free and equal nation, which we find it so difficult to give them. The facts are, India wants her freedom; she is united in wanting that freedom; she is qualified by her splendid leadership to have that freedom immediately. She has pledged to use that freedom not for a decrease but for an increase in her share of responsibility to fight the Axis powers, and I warn that India will not give up her fight for liberty until she gets it

I warn that those who are clever at playing politics will, by their indecision and their narrow vision help to defeat the common war effort. Political cleverness is not enough to win this war. We cannot win this war with 19th century psychological and imperialistic politics. The war has gone ahead of us. Let us catch up with it.

Diplomacy in India

Excerpts from Stanley Nehmer, Current History, Sept., 1942

Since India is an essential and important war front, any disturbance that might jeopardize th strength of United Nations forces is of as much concern to the United States as it is to Britain. Japanese forces are on the borders of India, after having achieved the conquest of Burma . . .

As the crisis developed in India, the British began an anti-Gandhi campaign in the United States to mold American opinion against the Nationalists so that there would be less danger that pressure would be exerted on the British to grant some of the Indians' demands. Statements were published in the American press to show Gandhi's supposed naivete, such as the one stating that Gandhi believes the Japanese would not hold India if they discovered that they were not wanted!

The wisdom of the British campaign against Gandhi must be seriously questioned. Instead of helping to solve the Indian problem, it only increased animosity against the British. Its effect upon American sentiment cannot be determined, although it is interesting to note that the White House has made no move to interfere in the dispute in any way, even just to suggest United Nations mediation. American forces in India have been ordered to remain absolutely neutral.

One cannot help thinking that the situation in India should never have been allowed to advance to the present stage. According to Sir Stafford Cripps, upon the British Government rests the obligation to guarantee that "India remains a safe base in and from which to operate against the Japanese enemy." This responsibility on Britain's part involves the use of all possible measures to bring about this end. But, the British fail to realize that the present situation in India is hurting the United Nations war effort. India cannot be safeguarded unless the entire India people cooperates and is made to realize that it will be fighting not for the British Empire, but for its own freedom. The best—and only—thing for Britain to do is to let India have control over every aspect of her war effort,* to institute measures of democracy in the provinces ruled by the native princes, to point the way for complete independence — which does not have to wait for the end of the war to be granted.

The way in which this cooperation can be brought about without either party losing "face" is to have the United States recommend mediation by the United Nations. The disorders in India are also Amercia's concern, for it is a vital American war front. It is the duty of the United States to convince the Congress Party leaders that Britain is sincere and to persuade Britain that the only way India can be held will be if the entire people is united in defendng its own liberty.

Complete Anglo-American cooperation is of the greatest importance if the war is to be won—and in the shortest possible time. For too long Great Britain and the United States have spoken about cooperation and failed to practice it to the fullest possible extent. Complete accord on a second front, a unified command, and the problem of India are prerequisites to a United Nations victory.

*NOTE: Leaders of the Indian National Congress have on many occasions reiterated that the setting up of a provisional national government would not preclude the possibility, even the likelihood, of retention for the duration of the war of a British commander-in-chief in India.—Ed.

Excerpts from the Chungking Speech of Wendell Willkie

"I have traveled through thirteen countries. I have seen kingdoms, soviets, republics, mandated areas, colonies and dependencies. I have seen an almost bewildering variety of ways of living and ways of ruling and being ruled.

"But I have found four things common to all the countries that I have visited and to all the ordinary people in those countries with whom I have talked.

"First, they all want the United Nations to win the war.

"Second, they want the United Nations to get on the offensive now.

"Third, they all want a chance at the end of the war to live in liberty and independence.

"Fourth, they all doubt in varying degrees the readiness of the leading democracies of the world to stand up and be counted upon for the freedom of others after the war is over. This doubt kills their enthusiastic participation on our side . . .

"However, men need more than arms to fight and win this kind of war. They need enthusiasm for the future and a conviction that the flags they fight under are in bright, clean colors. The truth is that we as a nation have not made up our minds as to what kind of a world we want to speak for when victory comes.

"Even the name of the Atlantic Charter disturbs thoughtful men and women I have been talking to. But do all of those who signed it, these people ask, agree that it applies to the Pacific?

"We must answer this question with a clear and simple statement of where we stand And we must begin to sweat over our common problem of translating such a statement into plans which will be concrete and meaningful to the lives of these millions of people who are our allies . . .

"We must set up firm timetables under which they can work out and train government of their own choosing and we must establish ironclad guarantees administered by all the United Nations jointly that they shall not slip back into colonial status.

"Some say these subjects should be hushed until victory is won. Exactly the reverse is true. Sincere efforts to find progressive solutions now will bring strength to our cause. Remember that opponents of social change always urge delay because of some present crisis.

"After the war, changes may be too little and too late. We must develop between the nations trade and trade routes strong enough to give all people the same vested interest in peace which we in America have had.

"In the United States we are being asked to give up temporarily our individual freedom and economic liberty in order to crush the Axis. We must recover this freedom and this liberty after the war. The way to make certain that we do recover our traditional American way of life with a rising standard of living for all is to create a world in which all men everywhere can be free." From Wendell Willkie's speech delivered at Chungking, China.)

The Cripps of 1939

"Again India provides the test as to the answer which is to be given to the question of a better international system. In my submission, no better international system can arise which continues to be based upon the domination by individual European nations of large colonial or other native areas in the world. That same system, if it is perpetuated, even with considerable alterations between one country and another in dominance, will leave something which is an essential cause of future wars and we shall simply be waiting until this rotten international structure sooner or later falls about our ears and brings about our own destruction.

"I believe that India has given a challenge upon this point which any country and any government desirous of leading the world to peace must take up and answer courageously, in the direction that freedom and democracy in their view represent the right development and the immediate development of such great territories as India and other parts of the British Empire as well. If we are to do that, we must, in facing this problem, make what some of us consider to be British interests secondary to world interests. If we are, indeed, to see a new world after this war, it cannot be built on the basis of preserving British interests at all costs. Where they come up against world interests, and, unless the governments are prepared to take a much more imaginative view of the future world situation and this new international order, and realize that it means a great change as far as the British Empire is concerned, then I am convinced that we shall emerge from this war, not only in no better circumstances than those in which we emerged in 1918, but in far worse circumstanes." (Sir Stafford Cripps. Extract from "Hansard," official publication of the British Parliament, Oct.26, 1939.

The present crisis is immeasurably more compelling than that of Sept. 3, 1939, and demands an immediate implementation of the policy advocated by Sir Stafford Cripps on October 26, 1939. There is no basis whatever for a reversal of his above outlined policy. The extension of that policy now would let loose at once untold energies for the winning of the war.

"The argument that people are unable to rule themselves makes no appeal to the true American."—by Upton Close.

Necessity is always the first stimulus to industry, and those who conduct it with prudence, perseverance, and energy will rarely fail. —Smiles.

World Labor Movement's Responsibility

Labor is responding wholeheartedly to the appeal of their brothers in India, but the greatest responsibility now rests on the people of Britain and the United States. Upon them devolves the action which would find the way to bring India into the United Nations' ranks—at once!

AGITATE FOR RELEASE OF INDIAN LEADERS

Mr. Amery, speaking for the British government, refuses to reopen negotiations with the Indian National Congress. He discredits the Congress by pointing out mischievously that they do not speak for the majority. He refuses to accept the decision of all sections of the Indian people who support Congress demands. His intransigence and refusal is a deliberate attempt to by-pass the Indian movement

DEMAND RELEASE OF INDIAN LEADERS! DEMAND REOPENING OF NEGOTIATIONS NOW!

THE PATH TO VICTORY

Only through the voice of the entire labor movement and all anti-fascist organizations can the obstructionists to this people's struggle be removed.

Only the people through the preservation of unity in the all-out war effort can maintain the common front of the peoples against fascism.

The unity of the British, American, Soviet, Chinese, Indian and colonial peoples and the peoples now subject under Hitler and his Axis partners is the path to victory for the United Nations over fascism.

The First AME Church at 801 Towne Avenue has planned an extensive Christmas program for this season. Rev. Frederick D. Jordan, the pastor of the church, stated that because of the distress under which most people labor today, the Church should undertake to make Christmas this year as full of spiritual emphasis as possible. Beginning with this Sunday and continuing through the First Sunday in the new year, the Progressive Club, Mrs. Lillian Moore, president, will furnish the church with special seasonal decorations. For several months the choirs under the able direction of Mr. Jester Hairston, with Miss Robert V. The Senior Choir will present Sunday afternoon, December 27, at 4:00 p. m. John Sebastain Bach's famous Christmas Oratorio. Mr. Charles Holland and Mr. Elijah Hodges will sing the tenor and baritone solos respectively; while Mrs. Lavida Ervin is the soprano soloist, and Mrs. Willie Mays the alto. Musically informed persons of the community state that this is the first time in recent years that any choir in metropolitan Los Angeles has undertaken this ambitious work.

During his absence Mr. Fred Baker, assistant superintendent, is carrying forward the work. A special Christmas program of the Sunday School will be rendered this afternoon at 3 30.

Chaplain Wm. A. Dickerson Stationed at Camp Campbell

CAMP CAMPBELL, Ky., Dec. 18.—First Lt. William A. Dickerson, chaplain, has just been assigned to the 365th Engineers Regiment at Camp Campbell, Ky. Chaplain Dickerson is the only Negro officer now stationed at Camp Campbell, and as a chaplain and a Negro, he has the opportunity to gain a particularly close knowledge and understanding of the Negro troops in camp.

His reaction so far, he states, is very favorable; he finds the morale and spirit of the men excellent.

Chaplain Dickerson is a native of Pasadena, Calif. He received his bachelor of arts degree at the University of Redlands, Redlands, Calif., in 1938, graduating with honors in the field of political science and philosophy. From 1938 to 1941 he attended the Berkeley Baptist Divinity school, Berkeley, Calif., from which he graduated with the degree of bachelor of divinity. Chaplain Dickerson then went to Yale university, New Haven, Conn., where he completed his first year of residence work toward his doctorate.

Returning to California, he became assistant pastor of the Friendship Baptist church of Berkeley. Flowers Show Real Xmas Spirit, Say Redondo Florists

HEAD-- -- -- must go -- ----- --

In another column of this pre-Christmas issue, appears one of the most unique veritably talking advertisement that has ever appeared in the Eagle or any other newspaper. It is a composite photographic layout of the eleven story Financial Centre Building at Seventh and Spring, featuring its most historic unit, the 53-year old Redondo Florial Co. on the ground floor. Pointing to it is the figure of Ham-Mee Banks, conscientous, agreeable, artistic young manager, gifted with great originality, thoroughly versed in the florist's art, and the only known member of his race, anywhere in the country, holding the position of manager in a downtown floral establishment.

"Only free America, and her peace loving allies, can still see the beauty in flowers," declared Mr. Banks, "the gangster Axis nations are blinded to nature's messages that come through flowers and songs of the fireside. They trample the blosoms of enslaved countries under their feet, in their mad bloodthirsty rush for power. So this year of all years, Americans should "say it with flowers." Flowers for the morale of the family, flowers to gladden and welcome the visitor; flowers for the recreation room of that loved one at camp. And as a present to friend or relative, nothing can surpass the thrill of the delivery boy handing in a lovely boquet on Christmas morning."

The Redondo Floral Co. also has a new supply of unusual table ornaments and backgrounds for floral creations, that they will be glad to show you or help plan that holiday decoration with you.

War Record of Negroes Lauded

WASHINGTON—One year after Pearl Harbor, the Negro stands as an example of the many nationalities which make up the United States and his part in the U. S. army has taken on additional importance as has been pointed out by Lt. Fitzgerald, a membert of Col. Page's staff in the public relations division of the war department.

Requested to furnish information on a comparative basis concerning the Negro a year ago and as of today in the army, Lt. Fitzgerald wrote:

"The requirements of military security prevent disclosing the number of Negro units or the exact number of Negroes in the army. Negroes, however, are serving in every arm and service of and service of the army and the number of Negro soldiers practically equals the ratio of the Negro race to the total population of the United States.

Metal Workers Choose CIO Over AFL

CHICAGO, Dec. 18.—By a vote of almost three to one the employes of Magnus Metal company chose the CIO over the AFL in the recent elections. The majority of the workers in the plant are Negroes.

The Magnus Metal company is part of a big metal corporation, the National Lead company.

A year ago the workers chose the AFL. However, after a year's experience with the AFL, the workers were convinced that their best interest would be served in the CIO.

In charge of the campaign, which was centered around the CIO anti-discrimination and win-the-war program, was the international representative of the Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers, Ishmael P. Flory, assisted by Benny Banke, president of Local 738 of the organization.

Card of Thanks

To our dear friends, neighbors, religious and fraternal organizations, and clubs:

We wish to extend thanks and appreciation to Rev. L. E. Jordan, Rev. Father H. R. Moore, and Rev. E. W. Rakestraw, who so lovingly and sympatheticall rendered services and visited in the sad hours of our bereavement. Also to Mr. Thomas E. Norman, who so beautifully and faithfully portrayed the life of the deceased.

We wish also to thank Mesdames Madeline Osborne, Ernestine Wade and Messrs. James Brown and Cornelius Wicks for their beautiful solos.

Pioneer Texan Passes Here

Isiah Jones, of Austin, Texas passed Dec. 2, 1942, at the home of his son-in-law, Mr. L. E. Pearl, 927 So. Berendo, where he had made his home, since his arrival here in 1920. Mr. Jones joined the Second Baptist Church under the late Dr. Proud, where he was an active member until his passing. He was one of the pioneers of Austin, where he raised a large family of 14 children.

He leaves to mourn him, six children, four daughters and two sons, Mrs. I. E. Pearl, Mrs. W. J. Sims, Mrs Nelia Holiday, Mrs. S. E. Bailey, L. M. and E. M. Jones; eleven grand children, four great grand children, all of Louisiana.

Funeral services were held Saturday, Dec. 5th from Angelus Home.

TEDDY WHITE, COAST GUARD, IMPROVES

Friends are glad to know that Teddy White who joined the Coast Guards in Brooklyn, N. Y. is improving after an attack of illness.

49th Street P-TA Has Variety Program

Talks, busical and vocal selections and an exhibit made 49th St. P-T A meeting, Dec. 10, very interesting.

The meeting opened with the flag pledge, then Mrs. Monroe treasurer, reported 121 paid up members.

Mrs. Schaaf the guest speaker put on a very unique exhibit of toys and decorations to be made at home by children and parents. The purpose of the work is to keep the children out of mischief and also to save money for war stamps. The materials used were very reasonable in price or cost nothing. Eggshells and bits of wall paper utrned out to be good materials.

Mrs. Craft, the principal of the 49th St. school, said that the salage consisted of one and one quarter ton of rubber and over five tons of metal. 49th Street School brought in more salvage than any other eastside school.

The Thrift flag was shown to the audience and it was explained that when 90 per cent of the students had bought 50 cents worth of defense stamps each the flag could be put up. There are between $100 and $200 in stamps being bought per week now.

The orchestra, under the direction of Miss Hauerwas made its first public appearance. Certain students added a very professional touch with their instruments.

Christmas Carols, sung by the students and directed by Mrs. Banks reminded everybody of the holidays.

Tea was served at close of program from a beautifully decorated table.

METRO-GOLDWYN-MAYER'S LION'S ROAR

Published in this space every month — The greatest star of the screen!

Greetings theatre-goers and with them we wish you a Merry Xmas and a Happy 1943.

★ ★ ★ ★

As timely as the times themselves is M-G-M's latest entertainment "Stand By For Action". Backgrounded by the glorious tradition of our heroic fighting men o' war dressed down for battle, it's a thriller from the word "take".

Its stars and featured players are men made of stern and patriotic stuff. The big guns are Robert Taylor, Brian Donlevy and Charles Laughton. Walter Brennan who can always be depended upon for a great performance and a good fight, is among the enlisted men with the will to do or die.

★ ★ ★ ★

With plenty of zip "Stand By For Action" is a war story that's different. It wears a reversible coat of tears and laughter. You will sit on the edge of your theatre seat.

★ ★ ★ ★

We will not give the plot but will tell you this: It has the majesty of a picture you might remember—"Mutiny On The Bounty" plus its own action, humor and heart.

★ ★ ★ ★

Superbly woven together by director Robert Z. Leonard, "Stand By For Action" has been specially adapted for screen entertainment and is based on the Reader's Digest story, by Laurence Kirk, "Cargo of Innocence". We take a proud salute and say that it is a smashing, thundering drama of America's Navy in action. A saga of fighting men teeming with battle thrills, significant and timely.

★ ★ ★ ★

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer believes that their pictures reflect the true American spirit embodying our national watch words—"Life, Liberty and the Pursuit of Happiness".

★ ★ ★ ★

Stand by for "Stand By For Action".

BLAZING GUN PLAY ENDS IN DEATH, INJURIES; HOLD 'DICK'

1 Dead, 1 Hurt in Cafe Shooting

Gunplay at the famed Hottentot Cafe, 1400 East 51st street, scene of frequent shooting scrapes, netted the death of one man and the serious injury of another Sunday.

Worst comment of the cafe proprietors is the fact that the newest shooting spree in their establishment grew directly out of an effort to clear up the spot's extensive police record.

Special Detective Leonard Robinson, 32, of the Paramount Detective Agency, hired to keep the Hottentot peaceful, blazed away at two unruly customers Sunday night after a brief altercation. One was killed instantly. The other is in a serious condition at General Hospital.

The tragedy occurred shortly after special dick Robinson told Cook and McCoy, Hottentot patrons, to leave the place because they were assertedly disturbing the peace. Robinson and the two men argued, finally got into a

On the Sidewalk

BY C. A. B.

My thoughts stretch out across 1942 and even back of that. Old friends and loved ones; once part of my life's drama, are now shadows lurking in the distant past; but no, I have not forgotten. As the years come in that others may go out, and life moves with here and there a ripple of joy and a bitter tear; I still remember those far away and you, nearby. And this is my Christmas cheer.

The year 1943 is knocking at the half open door of 1942. There is only now in which to act and live. The lessons we learned in 1942 will help us if we heed them. The future will be as good as we make it. So it is good cheer to you, and good luck, too, not only now, but all through the year.

Wanted: 3 or 5 Acre Ranch for young couple with three healthy youngsters.

"We would like to rear our children in the country on a small ranch," said Mrs. John Doe to an Eagle editor this week.

Now, this newspaper has assumed the responsibility of finding just what this far-sighted young couple wants and needs.

Because the young mother must care for three small children, she cannot help earn the living. Her husband is employed in one of the defense industries. I am not solliciting for them; but, realizing how little the young father is able to lay aside from his weekly earnings to pay down on such a ranch or small farm, for them, I am asking any person in position to help with this problem to call.

MERRY CHRISTMAS -- TO OUR BOYS -- BLACK AND WHITE -- EVERYWHERE!

Race Celebs Will Cavort at 'V' House

Negro motion picture and stage stars will take over Los Angeles' far-famed Victory House (Pershing Square) in the heart of the town's business district New Year's Eve.

Under sponsorship of the militant Negro Victory Committee, headed by Rev. Clayton D. Russell, the day will see the turnover of thousands of dollars in United States War bonds. Even before official opening of the Victory Committee bond drive, $1,500 has been subscribed.

Scheduled to be on hand New Year's Eve to do their bit for Uncle Sam are Ethel Waters, Clarence Muse, Bette Davis, Hattie McDaniel, Eddie "Rochester" Anderson, Jeni Le Gon and scores of others.

CELEBRATE EMANCIPATION

It was on January 1, 1863, that President Abraham Lincoln enunciated the Emancipation Proclamation and it is in celebration of this historic event, along with the bond drive, that the Victory Committee program is sponsored.

Officials of the Victory House predict that an unprecendented over-flow of jubilant Angelenos will be on hand to join in the festivities.

Testimony of 4 Whites Clears Youth

A demonstration of national unity was the testimony of four elderly white neighbors which cleared youthful Tommy Wynn, 18, of a hold-up attack upon Frances Monroe, 28-year old white woman, in Judge William McKay's superior court this week.

Wynn, son of social leader, Mrs. Elzora Wynn, has lived all his life in the fashionable North Broadway section at 443 East Avenue 28.

He was accused of striking the Monroe woman with "an iron window sash" during a one-man hold-up last June 15 at about 12 p. m.

During this week's trial, the victim stated that she could definitely identify Wynn as her assailant "because of his double-lensed glasses and because he stepped from under a street light when he first approached me."

The woman exhibited to the court ragged scars across the forehead where she assertedly had been struck. She held that Wynn sneaked up behind her as she walked in the street, beat her, and took her purse.

Police officers testified that Wynn at all times denied the attack and told them upon his arrest that he had never seen the woman to his knowledge before.

The most sensational part of the trial, however, was when defense counsel Walter L. Gordon, jr. called to the witness stand four white residents of the neighborhood where the attack took place who enthusiastically testified as to the youth's fine reputation.

Miss Elizabeth B. Sawyer, 234 S. Avenue 24; Mrs. Kate Jordon, 555 E. Avenue 28; Miss Katherine Dosser, 875 Elyria;

Fort Huachuca 'Surrenders' to 2 Companies of WAACs

FORT HUACHUCA, Ariz.—Not since the days of Caesar when he conquered Rome, was there a more triumphant entrance made than when the WAACS conquered Fort Huachuca, the largest Negro Military Command in the World.

Newsreel cameras clicking, bands playing, soldiers shouting with the distant hills resounding caused a riot of merriment as the train rolled into Fort Huachuca from Des Moines, bringing two full companies of these soldiers.

Qualities of leadership, a requisite upon which selection for the honor of becoming a WAAC is based, has been clearly seen as they paraded before the Post Commanding Officer, Colonel Edwin N. Hardy, who has done much towards making the quarters at "Waacville" as pleasant in surroundings as possible, showing to the world that women can fit themselves into any emergency and bring credit to their instructors at Fort Des Moines where they received their basic training.

Enlisted men stood spellbound as they gazed at the precision of the WAACS as this first contingent moved along in review.

TWO COMPANIES ARRIVE

There were two companies to arrive thereby releasing trained combat soldiers from tasks which these women can perform with perfection. These companies will be broken up into various Platoons. The Headquarters Platoon will take over sustaining units as clerical posts. The Clerical Platoon consists of Stenographers and Typists. The Motor Maintenance and Transportation Platoon will handle the operation of all light vehicles. There are other Platoons such as Communications, Theatre Section, Service Clubs and Library Sections.

PROPHECY OF CHRISTMAS 1942

By HARRY LEVETTE

One of the "Three Wise Men" who traveled far
On that first Christmas morn with rare gifts, bent
To greet the new-born King, led by the Star
Was a black man, a Cushite, grave, intent.
And kneeling there in robes bejeweled, rich,
With hands upraised he spoke this prophecy
Before this Child shall rule the earth, each ditch Dug to bar race, creed, color, all must be leveled by man who made them! But a war
In twenty centuries will come. Hell's hounds
Keep earth-wide! Death rains from the skies!
Red gore
Of slaughtered children dye the streets of towns!

State Industry Asked to Crack Down on Syphilis

Using late returns on men examined for syphilis by Selective Service as a basis for his estimates, Dr. Bertram P. Brown, state health director, today drew a picture of the venereal disease problem in California industry and called on industry to intensify efforts to control it.

"The picture shows that among California's two and one-quarter million employees including administrators and executives, there are approximately 90,000 cases of syphilis and several times that number of gonorrhea infections," Dr. Brown said.

"Of the 90,000 syphilitic employees in the state, 45,000 are not aware of their infection," Dr. Brown declared.

"And of the remaining 45,000, at least 30,000 have had inadequate treatment.

"This leaves only 15,000 of the total of 90,000 infected employees who may be classified as receiving proper treatment.

"Among the 75,000 untreated or improperly treated industrial syphilitics in this state, about 11,000 either now have or will develop central nervous system syphilis; and almost 4,000 either now have or will develop syphilitic heart disease.

"Each of these 15,000 employees represents a potential industrial accident. Each of these loyal Americans is potentially an unwitting saboteur.

"All risk could be very simply eliminated--by finding the cases through blood tests for syphilis, arriving at complete diagnosis, placing the cases under adequate medical supervision, and assigning syphilitics to jobs according to the medical status of each case.

"Industry can go far in protecting itself against these involuntary saboteurs, and thereby prevent industrial accidents. decrease the loss of man-hours of working time, help to keep down the incidence of venereal disease in the armed forces, and actually

Army Beats Law to This Man

John Ryan, 1312 Paloma Ave. is about to receive the greatest Christmas gift that anyone could wish for--his freedom. Ryan stood trial on November 19th in Judge A. A. Scott's court on three charges of burglary and attempt of burglary and sat calmly at the counsel table while Deputy Attorney Russell Parks built up an iron-clad case against him. At this point however, his wide awake Attorney, Curtis C. Taylor, veteran of many court battles, seeing that the jig was up made another of the smart legal moves for which he is famous. He suddenly arose and asked the permission of the court to change Ryan's plea to guilty of one count of the information. When this was granted he applied for probation for his client.

In the meantime the long arm of Uncle Sam had reached out and called Ryan in for information by his draft board. Attorney Taylor secured a release by court order for the purpose of taking the physical examination. He passed the examination with flying colors and Judge A. A. Scott has given his consent that Ryan can go to the Army with a clean slate. So he will now get an opportunity to do his stuff for Uncle Sam.

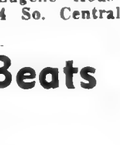
Spiritual Alliance Entertains 250 Soldiers



The Spiritual Alliance of Truth Seekers, Inc., an organization whose motto is "Do Good Unto Others", sponsored a gala affair given for 250 boys of the armed forces at the AWVS Canteen Branch, 45th and Central Ave., Saturday, Dec. 19.

The eight churches of the organization, pastors and co-workers, all cooperated in this one accord. They entertained the boys in great splendor with song and food. The great success of this affair is also due to the work of the women of the AWVS.

The tables were blessed and a program was rendered. Many readings were given. Rev. Leslie Friar, vice-president of the organization sang "My Desire", accompanied by Mr. Nash and scored a hit. George Smith presided at the piano. A song and lecture was given by Rev. DuVall.

It was a joy and a blessing to see our boys grouped around the piano singing hymns headed by Rev. Janerio Jones accompanied by one of our sailor boys. Reverends Washington and Werner and many of the others were inspirations to the boys.

The churches which were represented at the affair were, Temple of Divine Truth, Rev. Susie Jackson, pastor; Haven of Rest, Rev. D. Wyatt, pastor; Liberty Spiritual Temple, Rev. H. L. Mor-

The Spirit of Christmas changes hate to love, and sadness to mirth.

It is the greatest known builder of morale . . . a mental message of faith.

With it held foremost in our thoughts it is possible to have cheer and happiness in our homes even while our country is engaged in a conflict to insure the right of future generations to celebrate this great day.

The Spirit of Christmas hasn't changed. The holly, the candles, the tree with its ornaments, the happy laughter of children, the gifts and the greetings remain the same.

We have only to hold the Christmas Spirit in our hearts, trusting implicity that whatever is, is right.

Gauges, Precision Tools Sought for War Production

Before you leave for the Army, turn in your precision tools to war industry.

D. L. Sullivan area chief of the War Production Board's materials redistribution branch, issued this appeal today after being besieged by requests from local war plants for help in getting used gauges and other precision instruments quickly.

Many such manufacturers are training numbers of men and women recruited from other fields, Sullivan said, and unlike the old-time machinist who usually has his own "pet" instruments which he treasures and lends to no man, the neophytes are entirely unequipped. With deliveries on new tools requiring six to eight months, the plants are seriously delayed in putting the recruits to work.

One local manufacturer yesterday had 150 new trainees who were in need of gauges and other tools before they could take their place on the production line, Sullivan revealed.

"If you're going to the Army or Navy, or have precision tools that are not working, let us know and we'll pass the information on to war plants where the equipment is seriously needed," urged Sullivan.

Depth gauges, micrometers, calipers, and other instruments commonly used by machinists are needed. Owners are asked to get in touch with WPB materials redistribution branch at Room 840 Western Pacific Building, Los Angeles.

St. Paul Baptist Marches On Under Banner of Holy Ghost

Sunday, Dec. 20, 1942, will be long remembered by St. Paulites as one of the most outstanding days of the Yule season. Despite the worries of the world in general, hundreds of members and friends of St. Paul Baptist church came out to worship and hear a marvelous Christmas message; they came with a marked degree of nonchalance, in the face of a war-torn world. This spirit was heightened by the unusual message delivered by Pastor S. A. Williams, from the subject, "The Birth of Christ the Greatest Day in the World's History."

In his exegesis, he showed clearly that his physical power as well as the Holy Ghost power was above par; his volume was excellent, and at no time during the lengthy dissertation did he wane in power either physically or spiritually. We, the St. Paul members and friends have been centering our prayers for him, by his request, on one specific objective, i. e. "Holy Ghost Power" in his preaching status; and we have realized that our prayers have been answered, for no man, physically, could preach as he preached last Sunday. Many favorable comments have been made by our new members, some of whom had not heard him before, and were astonished at his doctrine and elucidations. All in all, the one dominant feature of our worship was the prevalence of the Holy Spirit. He moved upon men and women to the extent that there were 17 accessions, including one for baptism.

The afternoon service was a special phase of worship, under the auspices of the St. Luke Departmental church, and the All Saints Traveling Prayer band, known by them as "the young ministers' love feast."

The evening service was very spiritual. The Rev. Mrs. Bell, a noted evangelist, was the speaker, and our hearts were filled with joy.

Beginning next Sunday, Dec. 27, St. Paul is conducting a soul-saving campaign, which is to continue for one week, or 'til the Holy Ghost directs its close.

In our Soul Saving campaign, three dynamic preachers will be in charge of the preaching, Mrs. Sallie Martin and two major choirs will have charge of the music. Our financial bureau showed receipts of $330.00.

You are a world unto yourself
You are storms, dawns, tides, winds
You are ageless trees, stars, and a crashing symphony . . .
On the highest hill, which is your heart, lives a man--
He is an atom in this world which is you
He knows the sun, the moon and a soaring gull . . .
Never lonely, never lonely--
(He is I, my love!)

Another year, by golly . . . and a new twelve month coming up in which to chronicle doin's of you, you 'n you . . . which always is a privilege and really a heluva lot of fun this dept., no kidding . . . can't we touch eggnog glasses on that? . . . let's! . . . a clean, shining slate--what could be better?

I believe 'tis--or was—birthday time thru here for the son of Ouida and Bill Williams; Nadine Hicks birthdayed on the 20th; Edith Houston birthdays today (Xmas Eve); the Sonny Greers observe their 16th anniversary on Jan. 27th; the Fayard Nicholases celebrate their first on Jan 19th; Simms Campbell birthdays on the 2nd; Howard Univ prexy Dr. Mordecai Johnson birthdays on Jan. 12th; Georgette Harvey birthdays on New Yr's Eve; Dean Dixon will be 28 this yr; if Florence Mills were alive she'd be 44 on the 25th of Jan.; Bert McDonald birthdays on Jan. 10th; "Lift Every Voice & Sing" will be 44 yrs old this yr; 'twill be 19 yrs ago (in '43) that Max Yergan sailed to Capetown as the first YM sec'y to go to Africa; 'twas 19 yrs ago this month (Dec.) Roland Hayes made his NY debut at Town Hall;

Dr. Tom Griffin birthdays on the 19th; Reggie Arnaud (hail the proud new papa!) birthdays on the 24th; Lt. Chas. Black birthdays on the 21st; the Girl Friends (theyre having a Xmas party) will be 3 years old this new year; Sam Morgan (he'll be in town from 'Frisco in Jan.) knows Jan. 25th as his birthday; the junior Lucius Lomaxes observe their 4th anniversary in Jan.; Nu Sigma (Deltas) wil be 30 yrs young in Jan.; the Arthur Topsils observe their 2nd anniversary in Jan.; Tommy Long birthdays on Jan. 24th--phew! That's quite a list!

Dear Santa Claus: Please bring a smooth-salin' yr for deserving Cal Bailey . . . and that long-delayed one-man exhibit of his . . . which, I believe, the Allied Arts will sponsor sometime soon . . . and get behind him, Santa, and make him complete that masterpiece in oils, "The Crucifixion" . . . thanks, pal!

Many village hearts will be heavy this Yuletide, but let's be gay just the same . . . It's a worthy attempt . . . Rita Christiani (seh's been having trouble with her hand) will be an open-house hostess tonite (Xmas Eve) . . . Luvercha Bray is having a buffet supper party, with all the trimmin's, Monday nite, at her Westside place . . . Thrifty 16 gave their anual Xmas party Satd. nite. Honor guest was Mrs. Esther T. Greenlee . . . Of a sudden: havent seen the Reggie Harangues in mos and mos Nor Flo Ross. Nor Hylda Booker, who usually goes East at Xmas. And its been so long since we saw Tommy Southern we wouldnt know the guy! Ran into Freddy Doyle the other midnite, who was a glad sight for sore eyes. Freddy's a thoroughly nice guy.

AWVS give their big party tonite (Xmas Eve) . . . Bobbee Black Borders is one of the guiding lights in that snazzy new USO Center in Ft. Wayne, Ind. . . . 19 men from Alpha Delta and Zeta Psi Lambda chapters of the Alphas are in uniform, did you know? . . . This is worth comment: it's surprising the no. of Jap businesses taken over by tan tone folk! . . . Canteen nites, they tell me, are worth looking into out Holylwood way. Which we shall . . . We hear Leon Washington may climb into khaki soon . . Well, imagine our shock running full tilt into Ralph Matthews at the Alpha assembly, Satd. morning! We left bombastic Ralph in DeeCee in Sept., busy between his editorial desk and putting on his annual revue. He was in these parts on movie biz, left for DeeCee Mond. a. m. . . . Vivienne Baber Johnson of DeeCee sat in on the movie confabs with him. Ralph is QUITE a guy, so help me . . . 'twas good seeing the ole rascal . . .

We can think of few debs more atractive, lissome, and downright gorgeous than velvet-brown, peaches 'n cream Charlotte Hartsfield! A lovely type, we always wanna stare when she's around. And we do . . . Thot: All this vague talk of revivals, why not revue Run Lil Chillun as a treat? . . . Startling: the depth and vibrancy of Kenneth Spencer's speaking voice . . . On your MUST list: the magnificent work in ceramics now on view at Hatfield Galleries, created by a young unknown (to us) race genius, one George Farmer! You absolutely must see them. He's army-bound, unfortunately . . .

We've but recently rediscovered the intense interest in those waxes of Josh White, especially the one on "Uncle Sam Says" . . We like: Dick Bailey's soothing, original and sparkling piano work. The lad's versatility goes with one of these mirrored, glinty and expensively subdued rooms . . . Nice, seeing Mrs. Carter Lewis at the Alpha session, ditto Murlah Eason, who looked lovelier than we've seen her in ages. Renee McDonald, eye-filling in a green gown with wide gold leather belt encircling her waist, dancing a few well-placed conga steps; a good hug for Rhetta Jean Boswell; Constance Gordon, radiant in soft red, mixes her dance dates somehow; the Paul Williamses, the Chas. Matthews, always chic Lela Walsh, Lieut. Cato Robinson, the Dr. Henry McPhersons, Betty Hudson, the Hezz Howards, the Junior Celestus Kings, Tommy Long, the Dr. Jeff Fowlers, the Cris Wrights, scads of others . . . and scads we missed this year . . .

Satd nite, a brief glimpse of the Harry Morgans and their party entering the Elks for a dance. Gosh, havent seen 'em in ages! Harry's quiet-spoken, likeable wife always reminds us strongly of Gert Hayes Ellis, back in Cleveland; they have similar smiles, lovely homes, successful hubbies and two sons of same age. Both, too, are capable hostesses . . .

Well, I dunno what I'm gonna do for a well-dressed list this January, what with most of the well-tailored lads wearing khaki this season! Will have to look the current crop over and run up a list next wk or so . . . One of the lads from last yr's list, Clifton Russell, is in town for a few holidays with his folks. He's in uniform, of course . . .

Meanwhile . . . Happy Eggnogin'! Hapoy New Yearin'!

Traditional Xmas Breakfast to Be Held

The citizenry of Southern California have been recently perturbed over the reported illness of Mr. Charles Dodge, pioneer citizen of the state of California.

But the many friends of Mr. and Mrs. Dodge were pleasantly surprised when they received their traditional bids to attend the Xmas breakfast, which has been given for many years, every Xmas, by the Dodges.

Mr .Dodge, former clerk in the First National Bank of San Diego, is an authority on early day California, having lived here most of his life. He and his wife, Mrs. Dodge, founder of the recreational center for girls in San Diego, have been pioneers in many fields.

Since his retirement, Mr. Dodge has invited his many friends to join him and his wife on Xmas morning. This is how the traditional Dodge Xmas Breakfast started.

V Greetings V

AS we approach the Christmas Holiday Season this year we do so with mingled joy and deep concern. Joy because we live by the grace of God whose Son's birth we celebrate, and concern because of the global conflict which violates the spirit of peace and good will exemplified by the Prince of Peace. Thus we enter this Christmas Season in a more serious mood and with an attitude of thoughtfulness rather than the usual spirit of levity.

ON entering this Yuletide, Golden State Mutual feels proud of the service it has rendered to policyholders and to the nation. This year, as in the past, Golden State Mutual policies have provided funds for life's necessities and comforts to thousands during periods of disability and bereavement. Through our Investment Department funds have been invested in real estate mortgage loans and we have made heavy purchases of War Bonds. We are deeply appreciative of the contribution you have made to this success.

WE now face the New Year with the hope and determination to continue to merit your confidence and cooperation. It will be our earnest endeavor to contribute more of ourselves in the fight for victory, a victory which we hope will bring to us a real democracy in which all people, regardless of race, creed or color, may share in a full measure.

IT is a source of deep satisfaction to us to know that we have the priceless good will of a great host of loyal policyholders, unitholders and friends.

IT is in this spirit that we extend to you the Seasons's Greetings.

Sincerely,

TO YOUR

PEOPLE'S

VICTORY MARKET

A COMMUNITY ENTERPRISE

1--HOW IT BEGAN:

The People's Victory Market was born of the strivings for community ownership by masses of citizens of this district. It is owned by literally hundreds of people. No one gets rich from its operations.

The market was first considered an impossible dream. It was said that this impoverished area could not purchase, equip and operate a real California Super Market.

But it wasn't the people who said these things. They came to meeting after meeting as thousands were raised to purchase the People's Victory Market, an institution dedicated to service — not profiteering.

The store began — with the people!

V

2--HOW IT HAS SERVED!

In less than a year, the People's Victory Market has established a reputation envied by all its competitors. The store has been supported by those it serves.

A gross income of nearly $100,000 is the achievement of the enterprise which "couldn't succeed."

Born at a time of unprecedented chaos in the food industry, this market has withstood all the tribulations of our time. It has steadfastly maintained the quality of its merchandise. It has scrupulously observed the orders of the Office of Price Administration and the rationing regulations. But this is easy to understand, for, from its beginning, the People's Victory Market has one great objective — to serve, not exploit!

It's OUR Market!- Operated By OUR Boys And Girls!

It's Support Is OUR Job!

The great tasks which lie ahead for the People's Victory Market, tasks fundamentally identified with the winning of this People's War, can be accomplished only with the solid support of this community. Feeding an area occupied by workers vital to war industries is a solemn obligation, one which the Victory Market considers a patriotic duty.

The Victory Market will "Keep 'em Supplying!" Your job is to "Keep 'em Buying!"

THE PEOPLE'S VICTORY MARKET WISHES YOU

A VERY MERRY CHRISTMAS!

★ What's Doing in the Younger Set

By JESSIE MAE BROWN

By JESSIE MAE BROWN

Christmas Greetings to Our Boys. First across the waters, and then to those who are in the home front camps. Just a word to let them know that we are prayerfully hoping that the next Christmas will be a white Christmas of Peace, and reuniting of loved ones and old pals.

This second Christmas season of World War Number Two, was ushered in by the Alphas' annual formal. The affair, as in the past, was one of the years best. "A Salute to the Men in Service," served as the theme this year, with names of all the enlisted Alphas appearing on white cards as sole decorations. Music for the affair was furnished by the California Rhythm Rascals, who played all the solid tunes.

Seen having a ball were Lester Wagner, Puffy Huston, Carl Alexander, Norma Lee McDaniel and George Winchester, Florence Cornelius and Arthur Trent, Pvt. Henry Alexander, Lt. Carl Gross and fiancee, Leo Williams, and the rest of the crowd, including a few high school subdebs and gents.

Wendell Green made a clever M. C., introducing the Alphas by the years they were made into the fraternity, starting in 1900, and ending with 1942. Bill Johnson, Kenneth Hays, Bobby Boswell, and Paul Weaver were among the '42 absentees due to army service.

DINNER PARTY

Vivian Staton was dinner hostess last Sunday evening, when she entertained a group of her friends with a well-planned birthday dinner party. The service was ideal, regardless of food shortage. Turkey, with all the trimmings, including champagne, made up the bill of fare. Guests included Gloria Roberts, Norma Lee McDaniel, Pauline Evans, Alphonsine Paitrone, Edna Robinson, Gwen Johnson, Alpha's Artis Grant, Frank DuPas, Leonard Grimes, Herbert Simmons, and A. J. Johnson.

The Ivy Leaf Pledges are presenting their annual Skunk Hollow dance on the second of January at the Elks' hall. Tickets are on sale by the club members, and will not be sold at the door.

WELL, WELL, WELL!

Vernon Coleman received his greetings, and we don't mean Christmsa. He goes for his physical in a few days. Before his departure he plans to tie the knot with Reaper Shaw. Speaking of weddings, Margaret Heron will be married at Second Baptist church on the 27th. A complete military wedding is planned. By this time, Muriel Folley is now the wife of Lt. Vernon Spaulding. Muriel left L. A. last Monday. I hear that Eloise James is planning to tie the knot; the real thing this time. Carl Alexander and Lorenzo Morris were only on at the Alpha formal; Carl formed an individual Conga line, while Lorenzo took two flops . . . The SC students are still sick over the UCLA victory. The UCLA campus is still jumping and will continue to do so 'til after the Rose Bowl mix-up. Charles Earls and Dotty Dent are still making a fine couple. By the way, Julius Anderson was very original with his Christmas cards this year. Have you seen one? The cards from Tuskegee were also fine.

We close this column extending our deepest sympathies to Mrs. Kenner and family in the loss of Louie, son and brother.

'Til next time.

BAD NEWS FOR US

Alabama's notorious Governor Dixon once again lashed out at the Roosevelt Administration in a recent New York speech in which he held that the President is trying to blast the "social foundations of the South."

What he means, of course, is the chief executive's effort to enforce executive order 8802 in the South and the recent Administration supported bill to abolish the poll tax,--thus forever eliminating the scandalous restricted ballot which permits the election of demagogues of the Dixon stripe.

Before such enemies of the war effort, there can be no whimpering or compromise. Renewed, fiery anti-poll tax agitation must become the political blitz of the next session of Congress. Passage of anti-poll tax legislation will cut from under Dixon and his plutocratic pals the rotten system of mass disenfranchisement which has bolstered their stench-ridden political dynasty for the last seventy years.

The blustering challenge of Dixie Die-Hards and their Northern Copperhead allies among Hoover Republicans and Farley Democrats should suffer the same fate as Hitler's disastrous assault upon Stalingrad.

The Red Army has taught Negro-America a fundamental lesson: One good offensive deserves another.

To my friend Judge William McKay of the superior bench this week my warmest congratulations!

His successful efforts to save 16-year old Robert Smith from a sentence at San Quentin, securing his placement at a Youth Correction center, are a credit not only to himself, but to California jurisprudence as a whole. Had such a man sat in the case of Festus Coleman, this State would have been saved a great disgrace.

Robinson reached for his service gun and before he could pull the trigger, according to police, the weapon discharged. Cook and McCoy, neither hit, ran out of the Cafe. Robinson rushed after them in a rage. He shot both as they ran across the street in front of the Cafe.

He then waited for the arrival of arresting officers M. E. Ullery and A. E. Winters.

Cook, the dead man, is a former Smith Market employee. His funeral will be held Saturday at 2 p. m. from the People's Funeral Home at 42nd place and Central Avenue.

McCoy, at last report from his General hospital physician, is doing "fair," although it was at first expected that he had little chance to live.

Robinson, held in jail, is expected to draw a murder decision from the coroner's inquest jury, which will meet in the case—???

SEES EAGLE REPORTER

When visited by an EAGLE reporter and cameraman, Robinson, a quiet spoken and apparently "nice" young man, refused to permit photographs. Especially opposed to our cameraman's activities was Robinson's attractive wife who wistfully hoped that there would be "no publicity."

His sleepless eyes and bent figure gave no hint of the rage which must have driven him to the bloody killing.

He is known as a quiet neighbor to those who live near his 913½ East 54th street home.

CAFE BLUES

The Hottentot Cafe which lives up to its name extravagantly, was also the scene of a recent melee in which five were wounded by a crazed gunman, and another similar crime. Special Detective Robinson was employed to halt the Cafe's crime wave.

Detectives investigating the Robinson case are A. D. Johnson and E. C. McGruder.

and Miss Elsie Gregg, 5539 Monte Vista testified that they had known Tommy from kindergarden to the present and that his reputation "was very good" for being a peaceful and quiet boy. Two of the witnesses were school teachers.

Tommy's father and mother also testified that he was home in bed the nite of the attack.

Judge William McKay told the jury that he didn't believe the attorneys needed to argue the case. The jury returned with its verdict, acquittal, in a few minutes after it left to deliberate.

The case caused Tommy considerable inconvenience, as he was forced to stop school until the case was decided and prior to his being arraigned in the municipal court he stayed in the Juvenile Detention house for over two weeks awaiting disposition of the charge by the Juvenile Court.

MR., MRS. DRISDOM, OF BAKERSFIELD, HOST DINNER

BAKERSFIELD (By G. A. Jackson)—One of the season's outstanding social affairs was witnessed Saturday night at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Al Drisdom. A delicious turkey dinner was served. LT. V. A. HARRISON HAS THINGS READY

The Supply Officer, Lt. Vera A. Harrison, a resident of Hamilton, O, arrived November 21st to help the Post Enlisted Personnel whip the barracks, Mess Halls and living quarters of the WAACS into shape. There are many enlisted men who can profit by the way the WAACS are handling one of the men's dreaded tasks of bed-making. The enlisted men have to give credit to the female soldiers who after all these years are surpassed by the women who really fix a bed in record time so that it looks most inviting to the weary soldier.

THE 'HILL' BECKONS NON-COMBAT SOLDIERS

The time has come when there will be changes made in the enlisted personnel of the offices and places where the WAACS will replace manpower for the field forces. Some of the WAACS can put male soldiers to shame the way they handle the light vehicles.

save money.

"California state institutions now pay out $400,000 a year for the care of the syphilitic insane alone, and industry contributes materially to this unnecessary expenditure, in the form of taxes."

A well developed and coordinated venereal disease control program adaptable to almost any industry should embrace the following points, Dr. Brown said:

1. Routine blood tests for syphilis should be given all applicants for jobs and should be a routing part of re-examinations.

2. Venereal disease should not be used as an indiscriminative basis for firing employees. Adequate treatment soon renders syphilis non-infectious, so that the patient can be employed safely even in such work as food handling and in laundries.

3. Strict confidence should be maintained between the plant physician and the infected worker. Management should not be informed unless the patient refuses treatment or has complications that make employment dangerous to himself or others.

4. A single positive blood test should not be regarded as adequate grounds for a diagnosis of syphilis. It should be followed by additional tests and physical examination.

5. Infected workers should be referred to the family physician for confirmation of the diagnosis and for treatment, if these services are not provided by the plant. If the worker is unable to pay for private medical care he should be referred to public clinics, where diagnosis and treatment will be given without charge.

6. An educational program should be developed, teaching employees the facts about venereal diseases. Both local health departments and the State Department of Public Health will assist industries in working out venereal disease control programs.

Eastern Star Chapter Here Holds Annual Installation

Thursday, Dec. 18 at Prince Hall, 1050 East 50th Street was the scene of beauty plus beautiful women, faultlessly gowned and the fragrant flowers that turned the hall into a California garden. Above this gorgeous setcool with its never fading beauty.

Sister Marie Sheffield, General Chairman of Juveniles, sounded the gavel promptly at 2:30 p. m. The meeting opened by singing the "Negro National Anthem", with Sister Anna Mae Griffith Morrow at the piano. The salute to our flag was led by Sister Bessie Prentice.

Xmas greetings and a letter from our Grand Worthy Matron, Sister Vivian Osborne Marsh, regretting her inability to attend the meeting was read by Sister Echo Stanton Robinson, Grand Ruth.

The General Chairman presented the Grand Worthy Patron, Herbert Lampkin, who to the strains of "Let The Breath of Heaven Breathe Upon Me", proceeded to install the Worthy Matrons and their corps of officers for the ensuing year. The incoming matrons, looking like brides and holding white Bibles, dedicated their life for another year to their work and thus started on their last mile of their Starlet trip.

The Matrons are as follows: Electa Chapter No. 6, Lillian Drake; Queen of Sheba, No. 7, Allie Busbey; Deborah No. 13, Louise Keys; Affectionate No. 18, Esther J. Mann; Princess Oziel No. 32, Pecola Brown; Victory Chapter No. 37, Alice Shannon; Queen Vashti No. 29, Lucille Spears.

To the age old hymn, "Silent Night, Holy Night", the most beautiful installation, ever held in Prince Hall was over. About 300 persons witnessed the installation, dainty refreshments were served by gracious committees headed by Sister Ethel Page, Past Matron of Queen Vashti Chapter.

Many gifts were presented. Thus the various chapters of Los Angeles completed another page in the history of the Eastern Star.

In sad but loving memory of my darling sister who departed this life two years ago, Dec. 23, 1940.

Two long years since you went away — to me it was but yesterday — a loving sister and wonderful pal. Sleep on, dear sister, your toils are o'er, so wait for me on "Heaven's Shore."

Sadly missed by your sister, Lillian Gaines; brother-in-law, William Gaines; Roland and Daisy Bruce, cousins; Dorothy and Edward Booker jr., niece and nephew.

THE SPIRIT OF YULETIDE

The purpose of the birth of Christ was divinely planned. He was to become the Saviour of the world. This truth was foretold by the Prophets many years before it came to pass.

Christmas also brings with it a message of hope and good cheer. Christ was a magnificent gift to a troubled world, and so we find joy in giving on this Holy occasion.

As we enjoy this Xmas with its gifts, decorations and elaborate feasts, let us not forget the true reason for Xmas, and give thanks to Almighty God for his bountiful goodness and kindness.

E.E.—Dear Prof. Herman: As we near this Xmas Day, may I just write you and thank you for your wonderful help during the year. And this Xmas means so much more to me than last Xmas did, for thru you I have found true love and happiness. Thanks Prof. Herman, for everything.

I. P.—Will I see him before the Xmas Holidays?

Ans.—It appears to me that you are going to be surprised soon, and it will be his visiting you. You are on his mind constantly and as soon as he can arrange, he intends to have you with him.

A. W.—My family is supposed to make a change, will we do so?

Ans.—Probing into the matter, I find that this change would benefit every member of your family and strongly suggest that you encourage it.

J. D.—Does my husband love me?

Ans.—A careful analysis of your question indicates the fact that you are now living with your husband's people and wish to make a change. You are wondering if your husband loves you enough to leave them and move into a place of your own. Yes, he loves you dearly, and realizes this move is necessary to insure your future happiness. Be patient a little longer, he is doing everything he can to make this break tactfully and without causing any trouble.

E. Q.—Dear Prof. Herman: I have just received my Hindu Charm Bag and think it is wonderful. I believe in prayer and its powers too, and am sending for the Prayer and Mediation Combination within the next week.

M. R.—In regards to your problem, I suggest that you have your husband consult a good physician and follow his advice closely. I am sure he can overcome this habit if he tries.

R. J.—Will I make the trip I am planning on taking?

Ans.—It comes to me that you will take this trip and enjoy yourself very much. Look forward to this.

Mrs. M. J. L.—I am in love with a man that has changed toward me. Will he ever be the same again?

Ans.—Concentrating upon your question I find that this man has been worried over several matters hence the change in his attitude. He still cares as much for you as he always did. If you ask him about this, he will explain everything to you.

M. G.—Is my husband having an affair?

Ans.—Probing into the matter I find that your husband is true to you. I do not vision any other woman. He is friendly, and likes to have a good time, but nothing more. Have more faith in him, and trust him and you will find that your marriage will be much happier.

'I MARRIED A WITCH,' 'SILVER QUEEN' AT UNITED ARTISTS

In the realms of screen fantasy "I Married A Witch" stands as one of the most delightful comedy realizations of the supernatural ever to emerge from Hollywood. It is so imaginatively and extravagantly whimsical that no one possibly can take it seriously.

Admiration of the manner in which this entertainment is put together sheds the highest of praise on everyone who had a hand in its production. Veronica Lake's performance of the witch is by long odds her best film work. She invests the role with an impish enchantment that establishes her as an actress of talents more profuse than those which captured public fancy with a peek-a-boo lang. Her witch is indeed bewitching. Invaluable in playing the selate gubernatorial candidate who succumbs to her charms is Frederic March, his part exhaustively augmented by delineation of ancestors whose marriages were cursed in 1690 by the witch and her father before their spirits wee imprisoned in the roots of an oak tree, not to escape until our present day when the tree is struk by a bolt of lightning. March is faultlessly polished.

On the same program United Artists offers "Silver Queen" a turbulent romane of a lush period in the 1870's. "Silver Queen" is the name of a gold mine that brought a fortun to the Adams family, also brought many problems that are settid amid violent action.

George Brent personifies the honest gambler. Fiscilla Lane is the gambling quen, and Bruce Cabot her double-ealing suitor.

For genuine entertainment, don't miss, "I Maned A Witch" and "Silver Queef" now playing at the United Aists Theatre, 933 So. Broadway, owntown Los Angeles.

3500 Southland Tire Inspection Stations Ready

Approximately 3500 Southern California tire inspection stations are now ready, willing, and able to inspect the 1,524,938 passenger cars and the 205,218 trucks and other commercial vehicles in this area, was the report today from Fred Yerger, OPA State organization officer.

"We have more than 3500 inspectors already appointed, and now we are in the process of qualifying a large additional group," Yerger said.

Yerger warned drivers not to wait until deadline date, January 31, to receive inspection clearance, but to do it now. All holders of A, B, or C books must have the tires on their cars inspected.

The portion of the original gasoline rationing application, which bears the serial numbers of the five tires on the car, bust be kept in the car at all times and must be submitted to the tire inspector, Yerger said.

The tire inspector's job is to see that the driver gets the best possible use out of his tires. He checks possible need for repairs before neglect ruins a tire. He also determines possible need for replacement or recapping.

A standard charge of 25c per passenger car has been established, provided the wheel does not have to be removed.

For trucks and other commercial vehicles nowever, the inspection deadline is Jan. 15.

Set Up 'Earn-as-You-Learn' Classes in Welding

In an experiment, the Los Angeles City Board of Education, War Production Training Division, is seting up "learn-as-you-learn" classes in welding at San Pedro High School, in San Pedro, in cooperation with the Los Angeles Shipbuilding and Drydock Corporation. Under the plan, untrained and unskilled individuals in non-war production industries will obtain welding training by working on a part-time basis, and at conclusion of the training may expect to be employed full time, according to J. Douglas Wilson, Supervisor of War Production Training for the city schools.

The plan provides for a six weeks initial period during which time the trainee receives approximately 144 hours of welding training without cost, and approximately 144 hours of employment in the shipyard as a welders helper. The first four weeks constitute a probationary period during which it is determined whether the trainees show the aptitude, interest, and ability to warrant full time employment. Earnings, paid by L. A. Shipbuilding and Drydock, will average $34.00 per week.

Claude Hodges Celebrate 25th Wedding Date

One of the outstanding events of the mid-winter social season was the beautiful reception given by Mr. and Mrs. Claude H. Hodge on December 13 at the Camille Party Den, celebrating their 25th wedding anniversary.

The receiving rooms were very artistically arranged with gorgeous baskets of lovely flowers, palms, ferns and candles. The centerpiece on the dining table was a large three tiered cake with 25 tiny, silver wrapped candles on it while tall wrapped tapers were on each side.

The bride wore a beautiful white satin dress, styled with a princess effect, a long train, a wreath of gardenias in her hair and a gardenia corsage on her shoulder.

In the receiving line with the bride and groom were Mrs. Arnette Henderson, who was attractively gowned in pale blue lace with orchids and pink sweet pea corsage and Mrs. S. L. Marshall, who was gowned in soft blue crepe with a sweet pea corsage. Mr. G. W. Stafford, who served as the best man and Mr. Hodge, the groom, were properly attired in dark suits. The entire bridal party stood under a beautiful silver bell.

Many friends old and new came to congratulate the happy couple. Promptly at five o'clock the Rev. Isaacs, in ecclesiastical gown read the impressive ceremony where by the Hodge pledged anew their vows to carry on another 25 years.

Other elegantly gowned ladies wearing beautiful corsages, who acted as hostesses for Mrs. Hodge, were Mesdames Marguerite Boston, Bessie Wall Adkin, Lydia Spiller, Maggie Robinson, Betty Bryant, Florence Carter, C. J. Martinez, Eva La Chappelle and Cullie Hubert who played the piano an afternoon.

The couple was honored with many congratulatory telegrams, beautiful cards, money and variety of exquisite gifts.

The arranging and displaying of gifts was done by the very efficient and capable hands of Mr. Charles Boston.

"Now when Jesus was born in Bethlehem of Judea in the days of Herod the king, behold, there came wise men from the east to Jerusalem, saying, Where is he that is born King of the Jews? for we have seen his star in the east, and are come to worship him."—St. Matthew 2:1-2.

1943: A People's Offensive

The last months of 1942 have seen a disturbing upsurge of reaction in the United States, have witnessed an increasingly solid formation of old-line Republican and Dixie Democrats in opposition to the President's win-the-war policies, prominent among which is the extension of democracy to thirteen million American Negro patriots.

What this strident reactionary broadside means is that top-flight sections of American imperialism are conspiring for the military defeat of our country because they are opposed to a people's victory for the United Nations. They oppose this victory because it would certainly bring with it a truly democratic, anti-imperialist Europe; because the reconstruction of occupied Asia along old-time imperialist lines is a rank impossibility; because the dominant forces in the new world, Russia, China, liberated Europe, the United States, Latin America, even strong peoples' forces in Britain itself, show every indication of opposing the system of imperialism as practiced in the past, as practiced to the detriment and degradation of the vast majority of humanity.

This view of the situation is supported by the following facts: that the National Association of Manufacturers, reactionary holy of holies, abandoned any pretense of vigorous war support at the recent session of its resolutions committee and of the annual conference. Both meetings placed as U. S. industry's FIRST job the defeat of Roosevelt "social reform," i. e., the defeat of those progressive mesaures requisite for victory. Important among the Roosevelt policies despised by the NAM is his executive order 8802, barring defense industry race discrimination.

Of vast significance to Negroes, was the statement of one top NAM figure that the Republican party (meaning its anti-Willkie, defeatist sections) and the Democratic party of the South have common interests in opposition to the Roosevelt Administration . . . in opposition to the granting of Negro rights as a means of winning the war.

Success of the reactionary conspiracy was reflected to a degree in the Nov. 3 elections, which failed to strengthen the president's Congressional arm, though it was by no means the triumph of 'conservatism' which anti-Administration figures have hailed.

Reaction's plot was most dramatically demonstrated in the Senate filbuster death of the anti-poll tax bill.

In California, reaction chalked up victories in the election. The influence of this trend we may also perceive in the refusal of the state Prison Board to pardon Festus Coleman and the parallel acquittal of pro-Fascist Father Riker by a San Francisco jury.

There is only one answer for the people at such a time. We must launch an immediate people's offensive in support of the war, in opposition to the traitor's conspiracy against it, aimed at fortifying every pro-war policy, including executive order 8802.

Nationally, the central point of this campaign must range itself in forefront of those forces contending for a central war economy as outlined by the Tolan committee,—a central war economic control with the power to effect a permanent, blanket employment policy for the United States guaranteeing to every laborer, regardless of race, employment measured only by his individual qualifications and capabilities.

Fully as important is a fierce, new demand for passage of anti-poll tax legislation. Despite its effect in killing the Pepper-Geyer bill during Congress' last session, the Dixie Democrat filibuster brought the poll tax before the American people as it had never been presented previously. The filibuster itself brought from all sections of the nation severe condemnation. It served to focus national attention upon the foul clique of Southern autocrats who are able to balk the legislative proceedure of the United States government.

Although its composition is more reactionary than even the last Congress, the new one can be forced to accomplish those historic tasks in which the Seventy-Seventh failed. A people's offensive, the united, clear demand of millions of Americans, along with the progress of offensive warfare all over the world, can force our representatives to express the democratic will of a great nation fighting a war of liberation

Community Job: Organize! Organize!

From a nebulous mass of relief clients, domestic, railroad and other non-essential workers, the Negro people of Los Angeles have bolted into the front rank of American industrial labor, producing with their hands and brains war material which will help decide the fate of the world.

This new, decisive laboring mass is as strange to trade unionism now as a year ago it was to industry. For those who clung desperately to marginal jobs, there are today high wages. Thousands of Negro defense workers are women, emerging out of triple oppression into industry, and every indication points to an increasing proportion of female workers.

It is vital to remember what energies were expended in order to secure the present employment of Negroes in local industry, a job, incidentally, which is by no means complete. Given the opportunities of an historic moment, our city organized a tremendous mass demand for fair employment of colored workers and the establishment of training schools available to Negroes. That the mere presence of a manpower shortage was not enough to have secured Negro employment in industry is demonstrated by the fact that Mexican workers, 300,000 to our 60,000 in this city, face even today terrible discrimination in an industry whose doors have been burst open for Negroes. What did the job was a united community quivering with the demand for equal employment.

To a large extent this objective has been fulfilled. Our problems have changed. The scene of battle is shifted. Today Negroes raise new slogans, embark upon greater win-the-war efforts. Industries connected with the war effort which have not yet complied with executive order 8802 must be forced to do so. Prominent among these is the Los Angeles Railway. Housing restrictions which bottle up Negro workers in ghetto communities miles from their defense employment, placing an unnecessary strain upon trasportation facilities and the workers themselves, must be broken everywhere in Los Angeles. Negroes must be given free opportunity for upgrading in industry so that the full weight of their blow may fall against Hitler. They must be made secure against firing ON A RACIAL BASIS after the war. Now is the time that basic reforms in PEACE-TIME industrial hiring practices must be written into law, i. e., a permanent state regulation barring industrial discrimination on the basis of color.

The scope of these aims clearly indicates that they cannot be achieved by an isolated Negro community, no matter how thoroughly mobilized. The campaign against housing restrictions, for instance, strikes a deadly blow at one of the State's biggest respectable rackets, one which is enforced by present law and the vested interest of realty boards all over the State. Breaking restrictions is a win-the-war task demanding utmost coopertion between the masses of Negro and white people.

There is only one channel politically capable of bringing to bear sufficient pressure to lead such a campaign successfully, —the trade union movement. It is also the medium through which proper upgrading may be obtained for Negro workers. It is the means of securing job-openings for Negroes in industries still barring the race. It is the decisive political weapon of our time.

Therefore, the KEY JOB of our community is to ORGANIZE THE UNORGANIZED NEGRO WORKER. It is as important as the previous 'job' campaign, and, indeed, is an extension of it. This can be accomplished only through marshalling all community organs into an aggressive organizing campaign.

Most necessary, we think, is the immediate mobilization of local churches in this effort. A Ministers' Organizing Committee should be established immediately. Second only to the church is the role which social clubs and women's organizations must play. A Social Clubs Organizing Committee must be immediately brought into being, along with a Women's Clubs Organizing Committee.

Paralelling and supplementing these efforts within the Negro community, Labor unions should raise the question of Negro rights as a vital win-the-war issue. The greatest burden of proof here rests upon the shoulders of the American Federation of Labor, which maintains Jim Crow unions and is frequently distinguished by a reactionary leadership. But the stress of war, the over-all necessities of Labor unity, black and white, must be brought to bear within the AFL to effectively eliminate past discriminatory practices by this branch of Labor in our state.

No less challenged is the progressive Congress of Industrial Organizations. Its record on the Negro question is already a heartening one. But CIO, as the recognized leader of the progressive labor movement in America, must forge ahead aggressively in fighting the everyday battles of the Negro worker against discrimination directed especially against him. The housing restriction fight is a case in point. Here the superb CIO organization must reach the thousands of Los Angeles CIO workers who can become the leaders of a city-wide demand for an end to the restrictions.

Where ever labor is organized, according to government statements, war production booms. Labor is the principal adherent of the people's war. It has become almost the sole support of the progressive Roosevelt Administration.

By 1944, Los Angeles, especially its Negro community, must have become one of our nation's great "union towns."

This is a COMMUNITY JOB! LET'S GET AT IT!

SUM TOTAL

California has been busy in this first year of war. A survey for 1942 just completed by the State Chamber of Commerce finds that war contracts in the State passed the seven billion dollar mark. Almost a million workers are employed in manufacturing--that's triple the average for 1939. During the year, 291,000 more men worked in aircraft, shipbuilding, and war material industries--that was an increase of 24,000 a month. Factory payrolls doubled the previous year to hit a total of $1,350,000. We are contributing a considerable proportion of the food that goes into the national market and the Victory Food program Result? California farmers will have a 1942 gross income in excess of $1,250,000,000—an increase of 50 per cent over 1941. Production of crude oil climbed higher than last year, amounting to 230,000,000 barrels with a value of $219,000,000. Production of quicksilver, tungsten, and chromite, increased considerably. There are darker shadows laid against this Gargantuan total--among them farm labor costs, labor shortages, and beyond all this, the fact that our total is a minute part of the darkest total in history--total war.

DID YOU KNOW

That a single cargo vessel can supply a battalion or feed a city? Can carry, in a year, as much wheat across the ocean as could be grown on 20,000 acres? As much timber as a small forest 20 years old would yield? In a year a tanker can carry enough gasoline across the sea to run 20,000 Army trucks 10,000 miles each, or launch 20,000 bombers against the enemy's war plants? If you knew all this, then you know the significance of the fact that U. S. shipbuilders this year delivered 625 cargo vessels for war service. A comforting reflection at the year's end.

EXIT WPA

Exit Work Project Administration. In passing and despite the opprobrium "boondoggling", the WPA left some monuments on the map of the USA useful in war as in peace--800 airports built, improved, or enlarged; 700 miles of new airport runways. Some 77,000 bridges span the pages of its operations and of the 2,936,200 miles of roads intersecting the country, the WPA built 644,000 miles. These highways were paid for, to a large extent, by special motor vehicle taxes. Over the past ten years, such taxes from motor trucks alone have been sufficient to build 137,000 miles of modern roads at $22,000 per mile, or more than $3 billion! A number of states even in the midst of war business, are giving their attention to the maintenance of highway systems. Iowa, Oregon, and West Virginia, voted in November this year, to amend their state constitutions to require that all special motor vehicle taxes should be dedicated solely to highway purposes, not diverted into other state expenditures. Many other states, among them our own California, adopted this policy some years ago. In view of the heavy demands of war production, and of Army and Navy needs upon all road transportation, road systems must be kept in full service. WPA may go out largely unsung by a populace who felt it crushed the prestige of free enterprise, but we'll need it's gallute adherence of the roads, bridges, et al. We're in a hurry, now and can't stop to build any such before we get that convoy on its way!

ENVOY TO INDIA

President Roosevelt's appointment of William Phillips, outstanding career diplomat, to New Delhi, marks the interest our government feels in the vital Indian problem India has one of the two largest populations in the world, second only to China. But the political aspects in India are far more complex Should Japan over-run India, the whole Allied position in the Middle and Near East would be imperiled. Russia would be threatened from the direction of Transcaucasia. Our stakes are big. We need to be kept constantly informed on developments within the country where eruptions and even sabotage of communications and public services are fairly frequent.

NO CAKE

King George VI observed his forty-seventh birthday this month. There was only a "simple gathering of the royal family". Usually the King's birthday is an all day celebration beginning with the Trooping of the Colors, when his guard performs intricate ceremonies replete with music and marching, swords and bright uniforms, topped by the tall, terrific busby Perhaps with eggs so scarce in England, there wasn't even any cake! But the war scene must have looked brighter than it did last year. That was something of a gift.

Rasmussen Explains Pay Hike for City Employees

Regarding the increase of salaries to city employees, Councilman Rasmussen made the following statement to the California Eagle:

"We have finally been able to settle the controversy concerning increase in pay to city employees by adopting an ordinance which gives the largest increases to those in the lowest paid brackets. This is exactly what I had hoped for and fought for.

"Previous ordinances which were before the City Council would have granted the larger increases in the higher brackets. For this reason I refused to vote for them. Now those getting less than $200.00 a month will get a flat $20.00 monthly increase except those who have received salary increases since July 1st of this year, in which case the amount of those increases will be deducted from the $20.00.

"Those receiving from $20.00 to $300 a month will get $15 flat also with the exception of increases since July 1st of this year.

"This is much fairer to the laborers' groups inasmuch as they now receive the full amount whereas they formerly would have received only 15 per cent of their salary which in a great majority of instances would have been much less than $20.

"Those in the higher salary brackets above $300 receive no increase under this arrangement which seems only reasonable inasmuch as the cost of living has been a greater burden on the man with a small income.

"Thus it will be readily seen that city employees in the lower brackets are now receiving more than they would have received under any previous proposed ordinance. There is only one exception to this which is that of the City Hall Janitors of which there are 112 who received a $5.00 raise in August and, therefore, will now get an additional $15, as against approximately 1,000 other low-salaried employes having received no increase in salary since July 1st and who will now get the full $20."

Councilman Carl C. Rasmussen.

Your Unused Head Phones Are Wanted

If you have a set of unused head phones which you can dispense with, here is an opportunity to put them to use in a way which will help relieve the misery of the sick and disabled

Chairman Gordon L. McDonough of the Board of Supervisors revealed today that because the war-time scarcity of materials makes it impossible to buy headphones, many patients at the General Hospital are denied the pleasure of radio programs.

At the insistence of Supervisor McDonough funds were set up in this year's county budget for this purpose, but efforts to buy them have proved futile.

"We want every General Hospital patient to have bedside radio service," McDonough declared. "Any one having head phones is requested to get in touch with the hospital at once

★ SPREADING JOY

By JOHN FOWLER

"Joy to the world, the Lord has come;
Let Heaven and Nature sing."

"Two men stood before the prison bars;
One looked down at the mud,
The other looked up at the stars."

In this hour when the world is in turmoil, when men are dying by the thousands, with mud and muck all about us, our only hope is to lift our eyes to the stars, to Him whose birthday we celebrate.

One has only to turn the dial on the radio and listen to the sweet strains of music as many voices are raised in the carols of the season, which help to inspire and lift our eyes and hearts to the stars.

I have just listened to the sweet music coming from the radio program of "The Visitor," Rev. Clayton D. Russell. With the strains of "Silent Night, Holy Night," "O Come Let Us Adore Him" and "Hark the Herald Angels Sing," I extend my season's greetings to my many friends and readers.

The regular monthly meeting of the Pioneers was held at the home of Mrs. Catherine Morgan, 1543 E. 48th street, last Monday night. This Yuletide meeting was one of the most interesting meetings of the year. As usual, Mrs. Georgia Robinson was the lead in singing Xmas carols and favorite old hymns.

The theme of this meeting was "Xmas Fifty Years Ago."

I think that one of the fine old customs was the Sunday School Christmas tree for the youngsters.

Who of the old pioneers remembers Xmas 50 years ago and the Sunday School Xmas trees held that year?

If you were at the old Azusa Street church you will remember that B. F. Talbot was the superintendent of the Sunday School. You will also remember that the Sunday School Xmas tree was held the night before Xmas. I remember that tree and I can still see high up, on its top branches, two pretty little red hobby horses, and I remember that they were Santa's gifts to little Paul and Chester Williams.

Other little boys and girls who received presents that night were Joe Brunson, Willie Talbot, Lauretta Green, Jessie Cole, the Jamisons, the Moultons, and others.

If you were at the Second Baptist church 50 years ago, you saw a well-filled Xmas tree and you may remember that the biggest and prettiest doll on that tree was Santa's gift to little Irma McDowell.

You will also remember that the Sunday School superintendent was Robert McDowell. Some of the children who received presents from that tree were Charlotte Thompson, Minnie McClellan, Roxa Fowler, Ardelia Davis, the Bedneys, the Porters, the Sims and others.

Those who were at Wesley Chapel, then at Sixth and Maple streets, will remember that James Jackson was the Sunday School superintendent. There Sunday School Xmas tree was second to none. Some of the favorite children who received presents from that church were the Scotts, Bertha, Mattie, May, Lottie and Nellie, the Coopers, Pearl, Birdie and Maude, the Alexanders, Florence, Milton and Lucius, the Tibbits, and others.

Yuletide meeting of the Pioneers found fitting tributes being paid to outstanding pioneers. Among those so honored were Pioneer Dan Smith, Mrs. S. J. Bruington, the late Henry Bushy, Mrs. Laura Young, the efficient secretary, Pioneer Percy Buck, who has served the Southern Pacific for 40 years without one demerit.

Ike McVea remembered 50 years ago he and the writer were employed at the Ramona hotel at Third and Spring streets.

Among the Pioneers who were reported ill by our very efficient chairman of the sick committee are the following: Mrs. Nannie V. Holt, Mrs. Myrtle Crumbly, Mrs. Sallie Richardson, William Wells and Harry Frye.

I shall close with a special greeting to all of the married couples I have named in the mythical old sweethearts parade. My sincere wish is that God will bless each and every one of them.

Leading the old sweethearts parade this week are Mr. and Mrs. Jefferson, the proud parents of Judge Edwin, Professor Bernard, Lt. Dr. Ronald, and Miss Ruby Jefferson.

My hearty congratulations.

★ THE REAL GLORY OF WAR

By RUTH TAYLOR

The glory of war lies not in the lines of marching men, in the stirring music that sets our pulses beating and straightens our shoulders in pride at the sight of our best and finest.

The glory of war lies not in the clash of arms, in the screaming rush downward of the bombing plane, or in the silvery streak of the torpedo darting straight to its goal.

The glory of war lies not in battles won over the enemy, in victory attained at great cost in lives, heartbreak and tears.

The glory of war lies not in the subjugation of the conquered, in the final conquest of the aggressor. It lies not in the death sentence of the tyrant.

The glory of war lies not in its destruction but in its construction.

Such glory as war may have lies in the lessons of war--in the driving home of the copy book maxims that "for what we take we must pay." That "if we don't work, we die." That "a stitch in time saves nine."

The real glory of war lies in its ability to separate the chaff from the wheat. The sacrifice it entails is like a clear white light upon our lives, pointing out what is essential to us and what is just a cluttering up.

The real glory of war lies in its power to raise the focus of attention from our narrow lives to those of our brothers. What we learn now in keeping our fighting men fit will always be a barrier to careless indifference as to our brothers' needs.

The real glory of war lies in its cohesion, its ability to make men live together--to forget for the moment prejudice, hatred, suspicion and misunderstanding--to fight for a common cause. It teaches men of different faiths and background to know one another--and whee there is understanding there is no hate.

The only glory of war lies in the lessons that we learn. War shows men what they really can do. It spurs them on as personal ambition never could. They acquire new skill, new talents, new resources in themselves--which they will notforget in time of peace.

OTHER papers say . . . . . .

Eight million Americans read the daily column written by Westbrook Pegler and syndicated by Roy Howard, notorious labor-baiter, friend of Japanese appeasement, and head of the United Press which President Roosevelt has accused of being an outright liar on several occasions. According to the CIO News story, headed "Pegler Is A Liar," documentary evidence proves that this notorious anti-labor columnist also falsifies the poisonous statements he makes against labor. Now at last men and organizations who believe in America democracy are beginning take action. We note:

AN EXCLUSIVE CALIFORNIA EAGLE SERIAL

"NATIVE SON" ★

From the book by

"There ain't nothing, Ma. But I'm all right," he mumbled louder.

She seemed so little and helpless. She should not have come here. Her sorrow accused him. If he could only make her go home. It was precisely to keep from feeling this hate and shame and despair that he had always acted hard and tough toward them; and now he was without defense. His eyes roved the room, seeing Gus and G. H. and Jack. They saw him looking at them and came forward.

"I'm sorry, Bigger," Jack said, his eyes on the floor.

"They picked us up, too," G. H. said, as though trying to comfort Bigger with the fact. "But Mr. Erlone and Mr. Max got us out. They tried to make us tell about a lot of things we didn't do, but we wouldn't tell."

"Anything we can do, Bigger?" Gus asked.

"I'm all right," Bigger said. "Say, when you go, take Ma home, will you?"

"Sure; sure," they said.

Again there was silence and Bigger's taut nerves ached to fill up.

"How you l-l-like them sewing classes at the Y, Vera?" he asked.

Vera tightened her hands over her face.

"Bigger," his mother sobbed, trying to talk through her tears. "Bigger, honey, she won't go to school no more. She says the other girls look at her and make her 'shamed . . ."

He had lived and acted on the assumption that he was alone, and now he saw that he had not been. What he had done made others suffer. No matter how much he would long for them to forget him, they would not be able to. His family was a part of him, not only in blood, but in spirit. He sat on the cot and his mother knelt at his feet. Her face was lifted to his; her eyes were empty, eyes that looked upward when the last hope of earth had failed.

"I'm praying for you, son. That's all I can do now," she said. "The Lord knows I did all I could for you and your sister and brother. I scrubbed and washed and ironed from morning 'til night, day in and day out, as long as I had strength in my old body. I did all I know how, son, and if I left anything undone, it's just 'cause I didn't know. It's just 'cause your poor old ma couldn't see, son. When I heard the news of what happened, I got on my knees and turned my eyes to God and asked Him if I had raised you wrong. I asked Him to let me bear your burden if I did wrong by you. Hone your poor old ma can't do nothing now. I'm old and this is too much for me. I'm at the end of my rope. Listen, son, your poor old ma wants you to promise her one thing—Honey, when ain't nobody round you, when you alone, get on your knees and tell God everything. Ask Him to guide you. That's all you can do now, Son. Promise me you'll go to Him."

"Ahmen" the preacher intoned fervently.

"Forget me, Ma," Bigger said.

"Son, I can't forget you. You're my boy. I brought you into this world."

"Forget me, Ma."

"Son, I'm worried about you. I can't help it. You got your soul to save. I won't be able to rest easy as long as I'm on this earth if I thought you had gone away from us without asking God for help. Bigger, we had a hard time in this world, but through it all, we been together, ain't we?"

"Yessum," he whispered.

"Son, there's a place where we can be together again in the great bye and bye. God's done fixed it so we can. He fixed a meeting place for us, a place where we can live without fear. No matter what happens to us here, we can be together in God's heaven. Bigger, your old ma's a-begging you to promise her you'll pray."

"She's tellin' yuh right, son," the preacher said.

"Forget me, Ma," Bigger said.

"Don't you want to see your old ma again, son?"

Slowly, he stood up and lifted his hands and tried to touch his mother's face and tell her yes; and as he did so something screamed deep down in him that it was a lie, that seeing her after they killed him would never be. But his mother believed; it was her last hope; it was what had kept her going through the long years. And she was now believing it all the harder because of the trouble upon her. His hands finally touched her face and he said with a sigh (knowing that it would never be, knowing that his heart did not believe, knowing that when he died, it would be over, forever!):

"I'll pray, Ma."

Vera ran to him and embraced him. Buddy looked grateful. His mother was so happy that all she could do was cry. Jack and G. H. and Gus smiled. Then his mother stood up and encircled him with her arms.

"Come here, Vera," she whimpered.

Vera came.

"Come here, Buddy."

Buddy came.

"Now, put your arms around your brother," she said.

They stood in the middle of the floor, crying, with their arms locked about Bigger. Bigger held his face stiff, hating them and himself, feeling the white people along the wall watcthing. His mother mumbled a prayer, to which the preacher chanted.

"Lord, here we is, maybe for the last time. You gave me these children, Lord, and told me to raise 'em. If I failed, Lord, I did the best I could (ahmen!). These poor children's been with me a long time and they's all I got. Lord, please let me see 'em in peace. Let me see 'em again beyond the grave! (Have mercy, Jesus!) You said you'd heed prayer, Lord, nd I'm asking this in the name of your son."

"Ahmen! 'N' Gawd bless yuh, Sistah Thomas," the preacher said.

They took their arms from round Bigger, silently, slowly; then turned their faces away, as though their weakness made them ashamed in the presence of powers greater than themselves.

"We leaving you now with God, Bigger," his mother said. "Be sure and pray son."

They kissed him.

Buckley came forward.

"You'll have to go now, Mrs. Thomas," he said.

He turned to Mr. and Mrs. Dalton.

"I didn't mean to keep you standing there so long. But you see how things are . . ."

Bigger saw his mother straighten suddenly and stare at the blind white woman.

"Is you Mrs. Dalton?" she asked.

Mrs. Dalton moved nervously, lifted her thin, white hands and tilted her head. Her mouth came open and Mr. Dalton placed an arm about her.

"Yes," Mrs. Dalton whispered.

"Oh, Mrs. Dalton, come right this way," Buckley said hurriedly.

"No; please," Mrs. Dalton said. "What is it, Mrs. Thomas?"

Bigger's mother ran and knelt on the floor at Mrs. Dalton's feet.

"Please, mam! Don't let 'em kill my boy! He ain't never had a chance! He's just a poor boy! Don't let 'em kill my boy! I'll work for you for the rest of my life! I'll do anything you say, mam!" the mother sobbed.

Mrs. Dalton stooped slowly, her hands trembling in the air. She touched the mother's head.

"There's nothing I can do now," Mrs. Dalton said calmly. "It's out of my hands. I did all I could, when I wanted to give your boy a chance at life. You're not to blame for this. You must be brave. Maybe it's better . . ."

"If you speak to 'em, they'll listen to you, mam," the mother sobbed. "Tell 'em to have mercy on my boy . . ."

"Mrs. Thomas, it's too late for me to do anything now," Mrs. Dalton said. "You must not feel like this. You have your other children to think of . . ."

"I know you hate us, mam! You lost your daughter . . ."

"No; no . . . I don't hate you," Mrs. Dalton said.

The mother crawled from Mrs. Dalton to Mr. Dalton.

"You's rich and powerful," she sobbed. "Spare me my boy . . ."

Max struggled with the black woman and got her to her feet. Bigger's shame for his mother mounted to hate. He stood with clenched fists, his eyes burning. He felt that in another moment he would have leaped at her.

"That's all right, Mrs. Thomas," Max said.

Mr. Dalton came forward.

"Mrs. Thomas, there's nothing we can do," he said. "This thing is out of our hands. Up to a certain point we can help you, but beyond that . . . People must protect themselves. But you won't have to move. I'll tell them not to make you move."

The black woman sobbed. Finally, she quieted enough to speak.

"Thank you, sir. God knows I thank you . . ."

She turned again toward Bigger, but Max led her from the room. Jan caught hold of Vera's arm and led her forward, then stopped in the doorway, looking at Jack and G. H. and Gus.

"You boys going to the South Side?"

"Yessuh," they said.

"Come on. I got a car downstairs. I'll take you."

"Yessuh."

Buddy lingered, looking wistfully at Bigger.

"Good bye, Bigger," he said.

"Good bye, Buddy," Bigger mumbled.

The preacher passed Bigger and pressed his arm.

"Gawd bless you, son."

They all left except Buckley. Bigger sat again upon the cot, weak and exhausted. Buckley stood over him.

"Now, Bigger, you see all the trouble you've caused? Now, I'd like to get this case out of the way as soon as possible. The longer you stay in jail, the more agitation there'll be for and against you. And that doesn't help you any, no matter who tells you it does. Boy, there's not but one thing for you to do, and that's to come clean. I know those Reds, Max and Erlone, have told you a lot of things about what they're going to do for you just after buliding themselves up at your expense, see? They can't do a damn thing for you! You're dealing with the law head, then you're gambling with your own life."

Buckley stopped and relit his cigar. He cocked his head to one side, listening.

"You hear that?" he asked softly.

Bigger looked at him, puzzled. He listened; hearing a faint din.

"Come here, boy. I want to show you something," he said, rising and catching hold of Bigger's arm.

Bigger was reluctant to follow him.

"Come on. Nobody's going to hurt you."

Bigger followed him out of the door; there were several policemen standing on guard in the hallway. Buckley led Bigger to a window through which he looked and saw the streets below crowded with masses of people in all directions.

"See that, boy? Those people would like to lynch you. That's why I'm asking you to trust me and talk to me. The quicker we get this thing over, the better for you. We're going to try to keep 'em from bothering you. But can't you see what you're in. Tell me about this thing. Don't let those Reds fool you into saying you're not guilty. I'm talking to you as straight as I'd talk to a son of mine. Sign a confession and get this over with."

Bigger said nothing; he sat looking at the floor.

"Was Jan mixed up in this?"

Bigger heard the faint excited sound of mob voices coming through the concrete walls of the building.

"He proved an alibi and he's free. Tell me, did he leave you holding the bag?"

Bigger heard the far-away clang of a street car.

"If he made you do it, then sign a complaint against him."

Bigger saw the shining tip of the man's black shoes; the sharp creases in his striped trousers; the clear, icy glinting of the eyeglasses upon his high, long nose.

"Boy", said Buckley in a voice so loud that Bigger flinched, "where's Bessie?"

Bigger's eyes widened. He had not thought of Bessie but once since his capture. Her death was unimportant beside that of Mary's. He knew that when they killed him it would be for Mary's death not Bessie's.

Holiday Season Starts in Oakland's DeFremery USO Club

The holiday season started at the DeFremery USO Club, 1651 Adeline street, Oakland, Calif., on Tuesday evening, December 8, 1942, when the Arts and Industrial club of Oakland, Mrs. Elizabeth Ridley, President and Mrs. Mattie Dickson, Chairman of Entertainment Committee, entertained over 250 service men and their friends with a full course turkey dinner.

After dinner, entertainment and dancing was indulged in. Music from the machine was insufficient to be heard over the crowd of men and friends, and resort was had to the piano and musical instruments in possession of the club by men of the club and by men of the service who were musically trained.

The men had a very enjoyable evening, and one long to be remembered.

The committee responsible for the splendid arrangements were: Mesdames P. McCoy, Sadie Woods, Candis Sadler, Ethel Brooks, Justina Ross, Gertrude Barns and Miss Edna Mae Wilkerson.

Of all the affairs given at the USO Club, it was the concensus of opinion that this was one of the finest and best prepared.

The club is greatly indebted to these genuinely enthusiastic women of Oakland. They have made a lot of service men happy.

Just two days later, on December 10, 1942, over 250 service men and a large number of charming hostesses from Oakland, Berkeley, and San Francisco, and surrounding territories danced to the delightful music furnished by the Treasure Island Navy Band under the direction of Band Master Samuel Offenbach. The majority of musicians in this band are men who have played with famous named bands when they were in private life. They presented one of the finest musical organizations within the Navy.

During the intermission, Freddy McWilliams, famous Oakland entertainer put on a floor show of fast stepping dancers, singers, and several variety acts. The floor show was the highlight of the evening.

A Committee of ladies served the service men with refreshments and cigaretts. This was the second monthly dance of the club and the men are looking forward to a return engagement in the very near future.

Nursery Schools to Be Operated With U. S. Funds

A method for continued operation of nursery schools established by the Work Projects Administration was explained today by H. Russell Amory, state administrator, on his return from a regional conference in Salt Lake City.

"Although we have been definitely ordered to discontinue WPA operation of nursery schools in California," Amory said, "these schools can be kept open by the use of Federal funds made available by Congress under the Lanham Act where their continuance can be justified as a result of war connected needs."

"To carry out the President's order liquidating the Work Projects Administration," the administrator continued, "it will be necessary for us to cease operation of all nursery schools for children of women war workers no later than February 15, 1943.

"However, this will not necessitate the closing of these units provided applications for grants of Lanham Act funds to operate them are submitted by sponsors and approved prior to this date.

"Application blanks for such funds may be secured from the WPA office 1206 Santee Street, Los Angeles.

"The Work Projects Administration as a constituent unit of the Federal Works Agency will be glad to give assisstance in filling out these forms to public agencies and non-profit private agencies entitled, under the act, to operate the schools."

Amory said administrators at the conference called by Rex. L. Nicholson, regional director of the Federal Works Agency, were urged to spare no effort in helping qualified agencies take over operation of established schools.

"Within the past few days," he said, "we have opened six more schools in Southern California making a total of 63 here and 117 in the entire state."

Use Mails for '43 License Plates, Save Gas, Tires

Mail your application for 1943 plates to the Department of Motor Vehicles in Sacramento now and save gas and tires!

This admonition was given all your town or county motorists today by James M. Carter, Director of Motor Vehicles, and followed an earlier announcement that there will be no delay in the 1943 license renewal season, as hitherto expected because the War Production Board has made steel available for plates.

Sojourner Truth Has Xmas, Red Cross Programs

Sojourner Truth Home has just closed another Red Cross class in First Aid with Mrs. Clara Creuzot as the very splendid instructor and she will guide the class in the new class of Advanced First Aid beginning in January.

A beautiful gift was given her by the class and the board of directors, headed by Dr. Vada Somerville, were on hand to take part in the closing program. The organization of these classes is under the supervision of Mrs. Walter L. Gordon.

A special Christmas program will be featured at Sojourner Truth Home next Monday afternoon at two o'clock with Miss Consuelo Bright, teacher in the city schools, giving the main feature, a Christmas Story. Also, the prize winner in the recent Polytechnic oratorical contest, Mrs. Lillie Roberts, will give her winning oration. Mrs. Fredericks will lead the Christmas carols.

The public is invited to enjoy this special Christmas treat. No charge whatever.

Forest Highways

There are 24,077 miles of improved highways running thru the national forests of the United States, according to the outing bureau of the Automobile Club of Southern California. In addition, the forests of America contain 118,307 development roads and 157,501 miles of horse and foot trails.

Although all branch offices of the Department will be ready to receive applications when the regular renewal season opens, Carter pointed out it is much simpler and easier to apply by mail.

Auditors Wanted By State

Opportunity for capable accountants to obtain permanent employment under state civil service is offered by the State Board of Equalization through an examination for accountant-auditors,, anounced today by Wm. G. Bonelli, fourth district member of the board.

The examination will be held January 16, 1943 in Los Angeles and San Diego, with December 31, 1942 the final date for filing application.

The usual requirement of one year's residence in California has been waived, Bonelli stated, and the examination is open to any citizen of the United States. Entrance requirements have also been lowered from former standards.

Successful applicants will be classed as Auditors, Grade 1, and may qualify to take promotional examinations for higher classifications as they are announced. The salary range is $160 to $200 monthly and appointments may be made at more than the minimum salary.

Those interested should address the State Personnel Board at Los Angeles or San Diego, requesting copies of Form 660 and Personnel Board bulletin dated December 7, 1942, which contains full information as to requirements. Inquiries should not be sent to the State Board of Equalization, all examinations being under supervision of the State Personnel Board.

"This examination gives an excellent opportunity to men looking ahead for permanent positions when the present emergency has passed," Bonelli said.

Gov. Olson Saves Slayer of Jap from Execution

As one of his last acts before leaving office on Jan. 1, Gov. Culbert L. Olson, made the difference between life and death in the New Year of T. J. Ellie, 28, last Saturday, Dec. 21. Ellie was convicted in 1941, of the murder of Sokitare Okita, a Japanese, and having been convicted was to have been executed Feb. 8, 1943.

Upon due consideration of the case, the Governor decided that the circumstances deserved clemency, and changed the sentence to life imprisonment at San Quentin. The doomed man was overcome with gratitude, for in a life term there is always the possibility of a pardon in the future after a record of good behaviour.

Recommendations for clemency came from the advisory pardon board, District Attorney John Dockweiler, and Superior Judge A. A. Scott, widely known Los Angeles judge.

Have a Safe Christmas; Tips Given Citizens

The Fire Department recently appealed to all citizens of this community to be governed by the City Ordinance in the disposal and burning of their combustible material. This Ordinance, Section 57.43, states, "All Burning Regulated Under This Section, except in a Class 1 incinerator, Shall be done between the hours of six a. m. and nine a. m. (A Class 1 incinerator is usually a structural part of a building. The average residential incinerator is Class 2 or Class 3).

It has come to the attention of the Fire Department that, under the recent 'Dim-out Regulations', no light or fire, unless properly shielded, is permitted between sunset and sunrise. During the winter months sunrise comes at a much later time than during the summer months. At present, sunrise is approximately 7:45 a. m.

Remember we are at war. Don't violate the Dim-out Regulations by burning before sunrise and don't violate the City Ordinance by burnnig after nine a. m.

"The disastrous toll taken of life and property in the recent Boston Cocoanut Grove catastrophe further emphasizes the extreme danger connected with the use of inflammable decorations. With the Christmas season upon us, most people will again use cotton batting, cloth drapes, Christmas trees and accessories, paper hangings and trimmings, palm fronds, and other inflammable decorations to liven up their homes, places of business and social centers.

"The dangers connected with such practices at this Christmas season, are not worth the risk of losing one of your loved ones by fire or panic, when safe and sensible materials can be used to accomplish the same ends. Remember that non-inflammable materials are available for decorative purposes--use them for your own protection".

Tuskegee Given $4,000 Scholarship By Medicos

TUSKEGEE INSTITUTE, Ala.—A $4,000 scholarship in government bonds has been presented to Tuskgee Institute by three colored physicians of Washington, D. C., Dr. F. D. Patterson announced today.

The donors of the scholarship are Dr. John W. Brown, Dr. Sara W. Brown and Dr. Nancy Fairfax Brown of Washington, D. C. The scholarship is given as a memorial to their mother Maria Fairfax Brown, born 1840 and died 1908.

These three busy, distinguished physicians have kept green the memory of their beloved mother through their numerous deeds of charity and civic service. They have been ever ready to extend a helping hand to Negro youth struggling to get an education. Early in September these busy Americans, mindful of the nations great need for its citizens to buy bonds to finance the war, the acute need of Tuskegee Institute to keep its program going, made the happy decision to combine patriotism and race loyalty into a memorial to their mother, Maria Fairfax Brown.

The Maria Fairfax Brown memorial scholarship is in the form of 4 series G War Bonds of $1,000 each. They were purchased in the name of Tuskegee Institute, and are in the U. S. Treasury for safe keeping. These bonds bear semi-annual interest of 2.5 per cent and are redeemable at the end of 12 years.

Luther L. Foster, treasurer of Tuskegee Institute states that the interest from this gift of $4,000 in bonds from the Brown family will bring $100, the cost of tuition for a student. Dr. Nancy Brown in her letter to President Patterson requested that the beneficiary of the scholarship be a young woman student.

May Remove Needless Traffic Control Devices

County boards of supervisors and city councils throughout the Southland this week were slated to launch preliminary surveys of local traffic problems to the end that needless boulevard stop signs, stop-and-go signals and other traffic control devices may be removed to aid rationed motorists seeking maximum mileage available from their respective allotments.

Off the press a day earlier, Thursday, Dec. 24, the EAGLE would be a happy medium for that Xmas and New Year greeting of yours to your friends.

★ BEHIND THE SCENES With Harry

By Harry Levette

Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year to all old friends and new. And thanks for many pretty holiday cards. First to arrive was from Paramount, next Clotilde Wilson, then Rev. and Mrs. C. Tucker, Joan Helen, Gus and Mrs. Hawkins and Universal Studio.

Flaring up into excitement that caused hurried meetings of executives to be called, the edict coming from the Office of War Information on last Saturday, December 19 that all film studios must submit scenarios of forthcoming films is the foremost topic in the motion picture industry.

The move which came as a surprise to film industry was in the form of a letter from Lowell Mellet, chief of the motion picture bureau of the OWI asking for pre-production screen treatments, and all scenarios in their final stage before reaching the cameras. He also stated that after a picture is finished, his Hollywood office be permitted to "long cut" before it is previewed.

Mellet stated that his department had decided that this move was necessary because some recent films have unwittingly hindered the war effort by their dialogue and subject matter.

Will Prevent Films Insulting to Negroes

While the chief objection by the studios is the delay while waiting for a decision from the OWI to start shooting, it is believed by members of the race here that such a censorship may aid in the prevention of pictures offensive to the Negro. Thus they point out, such films as "Tennessee Johnson," now under fire, and "Birth of a Nation," still in screening condition may be nipped in the bud. The new drastic order by the OWI is a victory for the many citizens who have persistently protested against stereotyping of Negroes and such insults as "Tennessee Johnson".

USC Professor Takes Cinema Class to Studio

Here's something new under the Hollywood sun!

Prof. Frank Judson, head of the Department of the Cinemas at the University of Southern California, brought his class several times to the sets where Fritz Lang is producing and directing "Unconquered." Arnold Pressburger's new United Artists feature.

Prof. Judson believes his students can learn more about motion pictures by studying the actual processes by which a film comes into being than by viewing only the finished product.

Lang therefore provided the classes with script notes, production jottings, property requisitions, rejected pages of dialogue, etc.

Star Receives Wig for White Savage

A black wig worn by auburn-haired Maria Montez for her native role in the Technicolor film, "White Savage," weighs six pounds—more than three times the weight of "sheelong," her principal costume.

Many colored players are to be included according to predictions.

Dorothy Gish Aids Fight Against 'Tennessee Johnson'

Regardless of the fact that in a recent preview held at Pasadena of MGM's "Tennessee Johnson" some of the objectionable features have been removed in the cutting room, a large number of white movie stars and film celebrities have joined Negroes urging that it will not be given further release. Singularly enough one of the most determined of these is Dorothy Gish with her sister, Lillian, was a star in "Birth of a Nation", the predecessor of "Tennessee Johnson," which had the production title of "The Man on America's Conscience."

Hollywood Victory Comm. Plans New Entertainment

Presaging the most extensive program of soldier entertainment to be undertaken since the Victory Committee's organization, three days following Pearl Harbor, Lt. Col. Young revealed plans for a new type of celebrity tours. The War Department he said, wants players to spend as much as a week of time at some of the larger, isolated camps; not to give shows, but to mingle with the troops in their daily routines, breakfasting with one outfit, lunching with another and visiting the rifle range or other training grounds with still others.

Arrangements also are under war for the routing of "spot" shows, in collaboration with USO Camp Shows, Inc., to all sections of the country.

MGM Has Great Plans for 1943

Already every star on the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer roster is assigned to pictures to be made during the first months of 1943.

Additionally, however, there are a number of very valuable literary properties, for production during the next twelve months, to which final casts have not yet been assigned. These include the remarkable play of war nurses, Cry Havoc; the immortal story of W. L. White of the "mosquito boats," They Were Expendable; the eternally exciting Quo Vadis; and Pearl Buck's Dragon Seed.

Besides Kenneth Spencer in "Bataan Patrol"; Lena Horne, Ethtel Waters and other colored stars will appear in MGM films during 1943.

MONOGRAM FILMS LAST TWO FEATURES FOR 1942

Monogram now has two films in production, as the final pictures of the calendar year. These are "The Ape Man," starring Bela Lugosi, with Louise Curry, Wallace Ford, Wheeler Oakman and Henry Hall in support, directed by William Beaudine for producers Sam Katzman and Jack Dietz; and "Robber's Roost," first "Range Busters" picture featuring the new lineup of Ray Corrigan, Dennis Moore and Max Terhune, with Phyllis Adair, Charles King and Forrest Taylor in the supporting cast, directed for producer George W. Weeks by S. Roy Luby.

Window Display in Redondo Floral Service Lovely

Of all the window displays inspired by the Yuletide, just about loveliest of the floral art is that of the Redondo Floral Service at 702 S. Spring street on the ground floor of the Financial Center Building southeast corner 7th and Spring. A shopping trip in the short time left for Christmas and New Year's, would not be complete without stopping by to feast on the beautiful artistic arrangement, even if one has to go a bit out of one's way.

Of especial interest to race readers is the fact that it is the work of Ham-mee Banks, only known colored manager of a downtown floral shop in the country. Employees will gladly show you the varieties of many colored blossoms, and help you plan your holiday decorations.

The window has attracted hundreds of passerbys daily since it was unveiled to public view last week.

Will Rogers Playground Is Enlarged

Purchase of an additional 10 acres adjoining Will Rogers Memorial Park and Playground in Watts in order to expand the facilities of that popular County play center was announced today by Chairman Gordon L. McDonough of the Board of Supervisors. The additional acreage doubles the area of the park.

The addition, according to Supervisor McDonough, fronts on 103rd Street, between Success and Central Avenue. The County Regional Planning Commission will cooperate with a local committee of citizens in working out a plan for the park's full development.

Present facilities include two tennis courts, basketball court, volley ball court, badminton court, three shuffleboard courts, five horseshoe pits, picnic facilities, and one night-lighted soft ball field. For youngsters there are two small softball fields, kiddie slides, swings, climbing bars, sandbox rings and other play facilities.

BRONZE HOUR CELEBRATES CHRISTMAS

The Bronze Hour Radio Program celebrated its second pre-Xmas program last Thursday evening with a grand musical fest and a dramatic monologue on what Xmas Means, by Father H. Randolph Moore of the St. Philips Episcopal church.

The essence of the presentation was in part, "If the world is to have a real peace it must be built on the fundamentals of brotherly love, humility and justice for all."

Ernest Whitman demonstrated his great talent when he sang "The Earth Is The Lord's". The vocal and dramatic renditions of Mr. Whitman are some of the outstanding features on the Bronze Hour.

Little Bobby Brooks received public acclaim for his presentation of "I'm Dreaming of a White Christmas." Some think that he may be the next Roland Hayes.

The all Xmas Program for Xmas Eve will feature the Rev. J. Raymond Henderson, prominent pastor of the Second Baptist Church. Reverend Henderson will speak on the Birth of Christ. Miss Beatrice Alexander, vocalist, will offer "Silent Night" and Mr. Ernest Whitman will do two special numbers.

The Bronze Hour is heard every Thursday at 6:30 p. m. over Radio Station KGFJ. Members of the regular staff are Mrs. Fannie Benjamin, popular pianist, Mrs. Leontyne King, society editor; Mrs. Theresa Lindsay, assistant director and Gilbert W. Lindsay, managing director. The Conner-Johnson Co. is the sponsor.

7-Pound Girl for Welford Wilsons

A 7-pound girl was born to Mr. and Mrs. Welford Wilson Sunday morning at 5:05 a. m.

Wilson is an employee of the United States Employment Service. The baby has been named Carol Elizabeth Wilson.

ELLA FITZGERALD . . . whose soldier entertainment jaunts are earning her the title of Negro-America's modern Elsie Janis.

McKinley Jr. High Students Helpful to Community

By FERDINAND DeJAN

The students of William McKinley are helpful in more than one way, not only in the school but in the community. About two weeks ago the Ration Board located at 45th Street and Central Avenue was short of help and needed some assistance; so they called McKinley asking for students to help. About 30 students volunteered. The Ration Board think they did a very fine job and we at McKinley agree with them.

When you are walking downtown past the Hall of Records, you will see a Service Flag flying. The numbers that are on the flag were drawn and cut by James Westbrooks, one of our many fine students at McKinley. The folks at the Hall of Records called to thank James and congratulate McKinley for having such fine students.

Two weeks ago the students of McKinley started trying to get a Minute Man Flag and to date we have bought $650.25 worth of War Stamps.

Tuesday, December 1, the A9's were honored by having Mr. Floyd Covington of the Urban League as guest speaker. He brought along two guests, Mr. T. C. Allen, the first Negro to fly across the continent; and Mr. J. Baker, a radio expert now working at the Douglas Plant. Both guests gave some excellent advice regarding preparation for future employment.

The students of McKinley contributed 1105 cans of food for the needy of our community. Mrs. Hickman, chairman of the Welfare Committee of McKinley Parent-Teacher Association is in charge of distributing the baskets.

Off the press a day earlier, Thursday, Dec. 24, the EAGLE would be a happy medium for that Xmas and New Year greeting of yours to your friends.

COVAN KIDDIES AT LINCOLN

This week the management of the Lincoln theatre in the person of Mr. Johnny Malone, is proud to announce the feature stage attraction of the week.

For one week starting Saturday, Dec. 26, the Covan Kiddies will appear on the famed Lincoln stage.

Willie and Florence Covan have had their proteges before the footlights on many an occasion and everyone who has seen the performance of the pupils of these two exponents of the fine art of tripping the light fantasy, have marveled at the ability and talent exhibited by a group so tender in years.

Good dancing is a pleasure to behold as anyone will say, but when it is combined with song and scene that is really something, A Covan Revue is all that money can buy and then some.

Two gay troupers, imbibed with the zest and tang of their youthful following, Flo and Willie Covan are past masters in the art of pleasing audiences. One thing is certain. You will probably recognize every member of the cast. Some of them may be that cute little boy or girl of your next door neighbor.

Don't miss the theatrical treat of the season. Be sure to see the Covan Kiddies at the Lincoln Theatre, starting Saturday, Dec. 26.

Issue Bulletin to All Street Light Blackout Volunteers

We are now at the most dangerous time of the year as far as Air Raid probability is concerned. The nights are now at their longest and this gives the enemy maximum time to sneak in under cover of darkness to launch planes for a hit and run raid.

A great many members of the Street Light Blackout Volunteer Organization leave their homes for work before daylight and do not return home until after dark. This leaves their positions uncovered at times when the street lights are burning. This is a dangerous condition, especially in the early morning, and in order to remedy it we are asking all Street Light Blackout Volunteers to instruct some other member of their household in their Blackout duties so that their posts will be covered during all hours of darkness.

During periods in which there are not enough "Alerts" to provide the Blackout Organization with sufficient practice, "Time Tests" will be held at irregular intervals. No advance notice of these tests will be given. The purpose of these tests is to give the dispatchers in the Blackout office and the District Chiefs in the field needed practice in broadcasting the alarm under conditions simulating an "Alert".

Is As Follows:

The dispatchers in the Blackout Office will call each Chief or Assistant on duty for the night and state: "This is a 'Time Test'."

The Chief should record the time he received the signal, then as rapidly as possible contact one person on each switch in his district, recording the time at which he contacted his last switchman. The Chief should then call Blackout Headquarters and report the time at which he received the signal and the time at which he contacted the last switchman.

Alternates and Captains, upon being contacted by the Chief should merely identify themselves. They should not engage the Chief in conversation, as the purpose of the test is to see how quickly the routine can be completed.

In order to assure a successful Blackout, please observe the following necessary precautions:

Remain at home on your duty night, or arrange with your Chief for a substitute.

Keep you equipment available and become thoroughly familiar with the operation of your switch.

Time will be saved if you will answer the telephone personally on your duty nights.

If you are a Chief or Assistant, hold the phone until spoken to, even though no one answers you immediately. This is necessary because your dispatchers dials five numbers first, then answers them in rotation.

Remember--the strategy of the enemy has been surprise! He always plans to strike when least expected. Do not assume a feeling of false security because nothing has happened yet.

The Street Light Blackout Office personnel has asked me to extend to you, the Civilian Volunteers, on their behalf, hearty good wishes for a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year.

Very truly yours,
H. C. GARDETT,
Chief Electrical Engineer & General Manager
By ROY MARTINDALE,

Senior Mackey Junior's Biggest Booster

Clarence Mackey sr. is not junior Mackey's biggest booster without reason. Junior, of course, is now one of the sparkplugs of the professional Los Angeles Bulldogs—by way of Jordan High, Compton Junior college, and the University of California at Los Angeles.

Years ago, how many he wouldn't say, Mackey senior played football and baseball, and ran the sprints at Riverside High. Clarence jr., you see, came by his talents naturally.

The senior Mackey tells an intersting story as to how "my boy" was first introduced to the game of football. It seems that when Clarence was a little tyke of 8 his father contrived to show him how to run for touchdowns at six points per run. When young Clarence fell while trying to tag dad, the father thought he had had enough and took him in the house. Inside, he said, "Come on, Dad, I want to run for some more touchdowns!"

Bulldogs Using Mackey's Talents

Modest, and of a retiring nature, young Mackey wed a Jordan High school schoolmate, Frances Salazar, on Oct. 27, in Mexicali, Lower California. His wife is his second biggest booster, unable to take the play away from her father-in-law.

The Bulldogs, who with the Hollywood Bears, play the March Field Flyers Sunday in the Shrine game at Gilmore Field, use Mackey's grid talents to the fullest. The right halfback, or man-in-motion at UCLA, Mackey plays left half for the Bulldogs. Playing B football for Jordan in 1937, Mackey had a punting average of approximately 39 plus yards per try. As a quarterback at Compton Junior college, his passing and punting continued to improve. That was in 1939 and 1940.

The Dan Barnhart-Jerry Corcoran professional club, recognizing Mackey's proficiency therefore have assigned him to a heavy duty backfield role. His passes have been responsible for one win over the Bears this season.

Facing Mackey Sunday will be another UCLA great, Woody Strode, who is holding down a wing berth for the Flyers.

Jenkins Couldn't Have Gone Back THAT Far

Shocking is word of the death of track great, John Borican, just 29. The column saw him perform in the Compton Invitational last summer . . . Long John Thomas rendered potent-punching Lew Jenkins, the former lightweight champion, helpless Tuesday night at the Olympic. It was one of Long John's easiest wins. Jenkins didn't land a solid right hand on Thomas in any of the four and a half rounds the bout lasted. The column wonders if the hard-hitting Jenkins could have gone back THAT far in just about a year. Or is Thomas much better than anyoone has suspected, outside of his managers? . . . What with a war for freedom — equality of opportunity — going on, take a gander at the Royal Giants Sunday at White Sox park. A club of some of the best Negro baseballers in the country, they will give you a show and at the same time prove they are ready for the majors, which still happen to be un-American . . .

Saw George Moore, Henry Armstrong's manager, at the fights Tuesday. Hank was introduced from the ring, made an impromptu speech. He is slated to battle Ray (Sugar) Robinson in New York Jan. 29. However, he will tangle with Baby Breese and Al (Bummy) Davis first . . . The sportswriters who have seen the Georgia Bulldogs in action since their arrival here, are of the opinion that UCLA is in for a heavy afternoon Jan. 1 in the Rose Bowl . . . The column will make a guess at the outcome next week . . . First season's greetings from a sports figure: That from Manuel Ortiz, the bantamweight champion, and his manager, Tommy Farmer . . .

AFTERTHOUGHT: But for the fact Thomas was too smart, Jenkins would have turned the "mismatch" into an alley brawl what with his heeling, unclean breaking, and hitting after the bell.

Oglesby and Yeager in Olympic 6s

Matt Oglesby, the 18-year old fighting schoolboy with the educated left hand, and Bobby Yeager, dynamic socking lightweight, are featured in six-round fights next Tuesday night at Olympic auditorium.

Oglesby and Genaro Rojo clash in a rematch of their sizzling battle of last month which had the fans standing on their chairs for six hot rounds.

Yeager meets Gene Valenzuela, stablemate of Jimmy McDaniels, in their six-round lightweight fight.

Valenzuela is fresh from an upset win over Oglesby at the Grand avenue club. Matt was a four to one choice the night he came out second best with the charging Mexican from Watts.

Yeager has turned in several corking fights at the Olympic. He scored a two minute knockout over Chuck Railey, and stretched Felix Montalvo in three heats. Lupe Gonzales, who headlined at Hollywood stadium and Oakland in two fights with John Thomas, was trounced by Yeager at the Grand avenue club.

Fight critics said the Rojo-Oglesby match was one of the best of the year. Rojo had Oglesby down for 9, but Matt came back to even the round by a furious body attack.

Not all the thunder is in the two features. Joe Robleto of Pasadena, who looms as main event timber, opposes Henry Moreno in a six-round bantamweight scrap. Domingo Diaz, aggressive Mexican, meets Chuck Garcia, of the Art Martell stable, in a 6-round featherweight duel. Diaz recently returned from the East where he chalked up 8 wins in 10 starts. A four-round bout will round out the all-action program.

Thomas in Easy Win Over Jenkins

Serving notice on the nation's best lightweights to the effect that he will have to be reckoned with before Sammy Angott's successor can be named, Long John Thomas, 135½, captured an easy technical knockout victory over former lightweight kingpin Lew Jenkins, 137½, in the fifth stanza of a scheduled 10-round fracas at Olympic auditorium.

A near capacity house saw Thomas out-punch, out-box and out-speed his veteran opponent, to win as he pleased — and his 32nd straight victory.

There were no knockdowns. Referee Reg Gilmore stopped the go midway of the fifth round as it was apparent Jenkins was absorbing too much punishment. His left eye was cut and partially closed by Thomas' rapier-like left jabs and right crosses.

Alonzo Williams, was unable to cope with Vincent Villavicencio's terrific body assault and folded in the second round of the semi-windup slated for six stanzas.

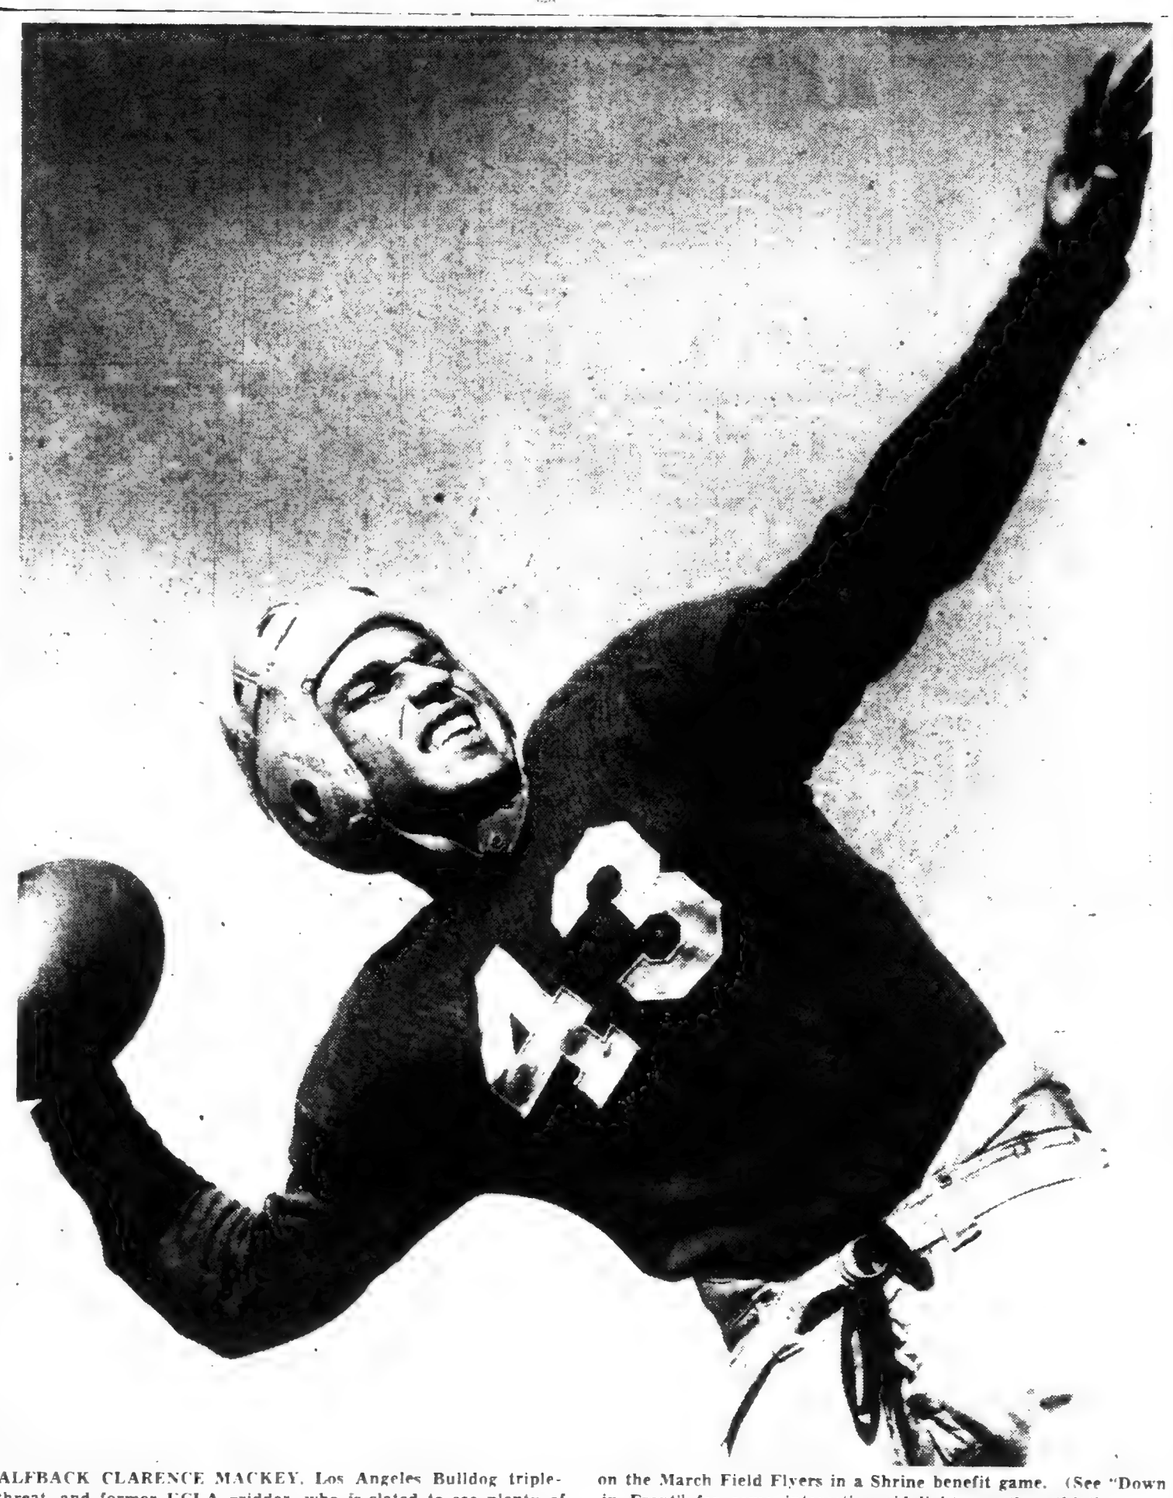
Dario Barron TKOed Chito Hernandez in three; Johnny Armando decisioned Manuel Villa; and Howard Morgan stopped Bob Moore in two. They were all four-rounders.

Jack Coggins TKOs Norden at H'wood

Jack Coggins, former light-heavyweight champion of California, came from behind Friday night at Hollywood Legion stadium to score an 8-round technical knockout victory over Connie Norden, white Oakland heavyweight.

Holding the edge in but two rounds going into the 8th stanza, Coggins, a 3 to 1 underdog, began to throw—and land—hard rights and left hooks to the head, flooring Norden three times before referee Charley Randolph halted the tiff.

Coggins weighed 177; Norden, 195.



Paul Guerrero, 116, decisioned Red Barker, 117½, in the semi-windup of six rounds, but got a draw from the referee.

In the fours Tino Ascasio, 128, shaded Orville Young, 126; Chito Hernandez, 135, nodded Kobie Scott, 137; Harold Dade, 121, whipped Ceferino Robleto, 116; and in the opener, Charley Armando, 135, drew with sub Benny Black, 131.

Dark this Friday night because of the Christmas holiday, Hollywood stadium opens the 1943 parade New Year's night with Carlos Chavez, California featherweight champion, meeting Al Medrano, who won the national amateur bantamweight title in Boston in 1940.

Chase, Booker Fight for Title

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 25.—Jack Chase, Los Angeles and Denver middleweight, gets a shot at the California middleweight championship here Jan. 11, when he meets champion Eddie Booker, of San Francisco, in a 15-round battle.

HALFBACK CLARENCE MACKEY, Los Angeles Bulldog triple-threat, and former UCLA gridder, who is slated to see plenty of action Sunday when the Bulldogs and Hollywood Bears gang up on the March Field Flyers in a Shrine benefit game. TEXAS-TUSKEGEE TO BE VULCAN BOWL FOES

TUSKEGEE INSTITUTE, Ala., Dec. 24.—When the Texas Steers of Texas college at Tyler, Texas, come to Birmingham for the Vulcan Bowl game with the Golden Tigers of Tuskegee Institute on Jan. 1, one of the most outstanding scoring teams of the nation will be seen in action. The Steers have racked up 324 points while the opposing teams have only been able to accumulate 36 markers.

The Steers, with Allen, Johnson, Pollard and Shepard, who have star backfield roles, will function behind a line which holds like steel. Coach Durley's players are already counting on giving the Tigers one of the hardest gridiron battles that they have had this season. The Steers have been able to turn in spectacular gridiron performances since their opening game in September, and in the final engagement of the season should thrill the fans with their brilliant passing and punting.

Pollard, who hurls the passes for the Texans is often hailed as the second Slingin' Sammy Baugh, who electrified the nation a few years ago with the accuracy of his aerials.

The Steers are a constant threat when in possession of the ball because of the excellent balance in their backfield performers who are capable of exchanging positions without the team sustaining any loss in driving power. The ability of this foursome to alternate their backfield posts causes the opposition all sorts of worry due to the fact that the opposing players are kept guessing regarding the next movement.

Coach Abbott hopes to have his full team on New Year's Day.

Leo Brinkley, who was injured early in the season, is still on crutches, but should be able to play a prominent part in the Vulcan Bowl activities. Raymond Head, Tuskegee's sensational 143-pound halfback, and George Robinson, quarterback, also on the incapacitated list since mid-season, should be in circulation about the first of the year. If these players are able to take the field against the Steers there should be considerable gridiron activity in the offing, come Jan. 1.

Whitney Van Cleve, fullback, of Kokomo, Ind., will have his usual heavy assignment, but Van Cleve has always been able to find his way around on a football field. The backfield chores will be assigned to Head, if able to play, Arthur Sawyer and Van Cleve, and they should cover the assignment in a most capable manner.

From end to end the Tuskegee line should be hard to crack. Charles Perry and Ernest O'Rourke are the ends; Archie McClinton and Josh Brown, captain, will handle the tackle berths; Edwin Wakefield and Frederick Cook are the guards. Carter Bowman will work in the center of the line. Leon Pinkney is the quarterback.

The Steers outweigh the Tigers and it is the opinion of the Southwest experts that they have considerable more drive and power than the Tigers.

ROYAL GIANTS OPEN AT WHITE SOX PARK

Sunday, Dec. 27, the Royal Giants, who have been playing the San Diego Major League All-Stars the past month, will return home. For their remaining games this winter White Sox park, located at 41st street and Compton, will be the home grounds.

For this gigantic opening, the Long Beach Los Almitos air base will provide the opposition. The base team is composed of all the major and minor league stars who have joined Uncle Sam's forces before and since the end of the baseball season. The lineup includes Vern Stephen, rookie sensation from the St. Louis Browns; George Caster of the same team; Sturgeon of the Chicago Cubs; Lemon of the Cleveland Indians, and many other minor league stars.

At press time, Billy Fiestner, who manages the club, was dickering with Red Ruffing, star Yankee pitcher, to twirl the first half of the game. In all probability Red will join the club as he loves to pitch and for such a worthy cause will do his bit. If he does then Cliff Dapper, of the Brooklyn Bums, will catch.

The Royal Giants fresh from beating the best San Diego had, will be strengthened by the addition of Bill Wright, Sam Thompson of the American Giants, a pitcher, and Red Rogell, from the New Orleans Stars, an outfielder.

During these gas rationing times White Sox park provides the ideal spot to attend a well-played baseball game. Its location makes it easy to reach by car, bus or walking. The "B" car, the Ascot bus, all stop within half a block.

The prices remain the same and the game starts at 2:15 p. m. Come out and see the best of our boys against the best of the other boys. Remember the bar is still on in the big show and here is our chance to show we have the players to make them lower it. The time: Sunday, Dec. 27; the place: the White Sox, 41st and Compton streets. See you there.

Motley, Strode on Little All-Coast

RENO, Nev., Dec. 25.—Halfback Marion Motley, of the University of Nevada, and Woodrow Strode, former UCLA end now with March Field, have been selected on the second annual little all-coast football first string, it was revealed here this week.

The squad was chosen from more than 40 eligible West coast minor colleges and service teams.

Motley was also named cocaptain, sharing that honor with Jackie Fellows, Fresno State quarterback, because of the big pile of votes they received.

Our bravest and best lessons are not learned through success, but through misadventure.—A. Bronson Alcott.

Former Local Baseball Star in Air Corps

Charles M. Fisher, former member of the famous Negro baseball team, the Cuban All-Stars, is one of Los Angeles' representatives in the U. S. Army Air Corps.

This former first sacker, who was also widely known as a baritone in the Dixie Four Quartet, a part of the Ted Lewis organization, is now stationed at Jefferson Barracks, Mo., famous old Army post near St. Louis. Jefferson Barracks is a basic training center of the Air Forces Technical Training Command which operates under Major General Walter R. Weaver.

Private Fisher, who lived at 624 E. 42nd Place in Los Angeles, is a member of the 39th Technical School Squadron at the Barracks.

Houston on '42 All-City Eleven

Holding down one of the tackle berths on the 1942 All-City first eleven is Ralph Houston, 200-pound, 6 foot two inch Jordan High school senior, it was disclosed last week.

The selections were made by the All-Southern California Board of Football and Helms Athletic Foundation.

The only Negro lad on the first eleven, Houston was termed by the board the equal of any tackle ever selected by the board, spilling more opposing ball carriers for losses than any other lineman in recent city history.

ON THE TURF

By Geo. A. Ramsey

SAN DIEGO, Calif.—As I am writing this Florida racing started and will they last? That's the big question of the horsemen, with gas ration and war time difficulties confronting them. Well even if we don't have racing in California we hope that it will continue and keep the sport of kings alive. Outside of Tropical Park only one other track in the country has racing and that is New Orleans, which opened its 75 days recently.

With the greatest and finest horses on the grounds, Tropical Park will have the best horses ever to assemble in Florida. The beautiful course is located just a few miles from town, but the only transportation is autos. We will just have to wait and see if they can put it over under the conditions.

There are lots of buzzing about Hollywood Park having a Spring meeting, but like all rumors we will wait until something from the officials come.

Racing has contributed more to the United States Relief than any other sport, and more bonds was sold at the tracks than any other sporting grounds. New York alone contributed more than three million dollars, and if California had of had racing at Santa Anita and Hollywood Park, not mentioning the others, we would have surpassed New York state.

Bay Meadows closed Saturday after one of the biggest season's in history, it is now rumored that they will have another meeting of twenty-one days, although it will be Tanforan's date.

Well about Caliente, all we can say that rumors are still going around about the beautiful course. An announcement will be made very soon.

At Bay Meadows, the handle was more than two hundred thousand daily, which is a record for the Northern track.

Of course you all know that Whirlway was the outstanding horse of the year with Alsab second, Shut Out was third.

Well folks we are hoping that this time next year all the country will have freedom, but the only way to accomplish this is to keep buying U. S. War Stamps and Bonds; saving all the fat and metals.

So let all say Merry Xmas to the boys that are over there fighting for us with more bonds and stamps. They want to get it over so they can come back to their loved ones and enjoy what we here are planning to do this Xmas.

Please do your part. Merry Xmas and Happy New Year to all.

Until next year so long—Geo.

Quarterly Meeting Slated at Second AME Church

Sunday last will long be remembered at Second Church as a Red-letter day. The pastor, Rev. Isaacs spoke at the morning service on "The Heart of Christman" to a very appreciative audience; the music rendered by the Senior Choir was very inspiring and helpful. There were two accessions. The Church was tastefully decorated and all present experienced the true spirit of the Christmas season.

Marvelous is the word that may best expresse the service as was presented at the Twilight Hour under the genial guidance of the pastor's wife depicting Living Madonnas in Art with Ave Marias in music. Mr. Buell Thomas, the soloist, was never heard to better advantage as he sang "Sweet Little Jesus Boy". The portrayal of the various Madonnas presented was exquisitely done and the artists having caught the spirit of the occasion gave their all and easily won acclaim from the audience. Violin numbers were rendered by Clotille Curry Woodard and Emma Smock. Mrs. Benjamin presided at the piano.

Midnight Mass will be observed at 11:45 p. m. on Thursday night with Rev. J. B. Isaacs as celebrant. The Pageantry will be directed by Mrs. Isaacs; Jess Brooks will be the soloist.

Next Sunday Quarterly meeting will be observed. The Presiding Elder Rev. F. A. Harris will be present and deliver the morning address.

REV. PERCY WILLIAMS

'Every Member Canvas' Opens at Congregational

This Sunday at the 11 a. m. services at Lincoln Memorial Congregational Church, located at Vernon and Hooper avenues, Rev. Percy Williams will initiate the yearly Every Member Canvas Drive with a Rally Day program.

In recommending a $6000 working budget for Lincoln in 1943, Rev. Williams is instituting a move for the greatest proportionate increase in the history of the church. This figure calls for an increase in all financial pledges for 1943.

At the Sunday morning service, Rev. Williams will preach a special sermon on the subject "Looking Ahead". All organizations of Lincoln are planning to sit in a group as an expression solidarity in the closing worship service of the year.

Assisting also are Mrs. Florence Johnson, Bertha Allen, Mrs. Jessica Marshall, Miss Mae Howard, Roderic Wilson. Miss Gloria Roberts will appear as guest accompanist to Biblical narrator, P. M. Marshall, while Mrs. Essie Roberts Saunders will be at the organ. Miss Jean Holmes, violinist.

A cordial invitation is extended to the general public Sunday, December 27, 7:30 p. m. Rev. P. M. Marshall, pastor.

Harmony Baptist Honors Pastor, Rev. Hemphill

Harmony Baptist Church, 327 E 42nd St. spent a busy week honoring its pastor, Rev. C. Allen Hemphill. The services were under the auspices of the auxiliaries of the church, but was conducted by some of the leading pastors and their congregation. The attendance was fine. The interest was very good.

The minister and his good wife has worked in the community for one year and the good that has been accomplished in that short time have endeared these fine people in the hearts of all in this community, and in the services just closed they expressed themselves in a big way, financially of course. The slogan of this fine church is: To Evangelize the Community. And their effort in that direction has borne much fruit.

In addition to the many duties imposed upon the Rev. Hemphill, he, in connection with his church find time to serve the interest of his people in another way, he is now commander of the Los Angeles Camp No. 2 of the American Woodman, the camp has grown considerably under his administration, both numerically and financially. This camp under his leadership in the last membership drive fought hard to win a trophy awarded by the Supreme Commander for group production, although they lost they made a record that is not easily equalled.

The minister served as District Musical Director in our last Regional Conference convening in the city of Shreveport, La. He is well liked by all of the well wishers of Woodcraft throughout the jurisdiction.

The First AME Zion will have as their annual affair the 6 a. m. Sunrise Xmas Service.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE CHURCHES

"Christian Science" is the Lesson Sermon subject, on Sunday, in all Churches of Christ, Scientist. A selection from John's Gospel is the Golden Text: "If ye love me, keep my commandments. And I will pray the Father, and he shall give you another Comforter, that he may abide with you for ever; even the Spirit of truth."

Jesus' sayings, as recorded in John, are included in the Lesson-Sermon: "Ye have heard how I said unto you, I go away, and come again unto you. . . . But when the Comforter is come, whom I will send unto you from the Father, even the Spirit of truth, which proceedeth from the Father, he shall testify of me: . . . I have yet many things to say unto you, but ye cannot bear them now. Howbeit when he, the Spirit of truth, is come, he will guide you into all truth: for he shall not speak of himself; but whatsoever he shall hear, that shall he speak: and he will shew you things to come."

Mary Baker Eddy, the author of "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," reminds her readers that, "Christ's Christianity is the chain of scientific being reappearing in all ages, maintaining its obvious correspondence with the Scriptures and uniting all periods in the design of God." "When the Science of Christianity appears, it will lead you into all truth. The Sermon on the Mount is the essence of this Science, and the eternal life, not the death of Jesus, is its outcome."

Midnight Xmas Service at 8th, Towne

The dramatic and thrilling Midnight Christmas Service which was so loudly acclaimed last year is being repeated at the First AME Church, 801 Towne avenue this year. The entire service will procede by candle light. Music which will be furnished by the Senior and J. E. Edwards Choirs will include the Anthem, "O Holy Night", chorus from the Bach Christmas Oratorio, "Christians Be Joyful", and the Spiritual "Who Do You Call The Wonderful Counselor". A brief Christmas message will be delivered by the minister, Rev. Frederick D. Jordan. Several of the pastors of the city have been invited to cooperate in the serice which will begin promptly at 11 o'clock Christmas Eve night.

THE BACH CHRISTMAS ORATORIO

The famous Bach's Christmas Oratorio which the Senior Choir is presenting Sunday afternoon, December 27th at 4:00 o'clock consists of six parts. It was written in 1734 for the Christmas celebration in the Reform Church of North Germany where the festivities began December 25th and continued through January 6th. The days of 25th, 26th and 27th, New Year's Day, the Sunday after New Year's, and the feast of the Epiphany were particularly important to them.

The gospel narative in the Oratorio is assigned to a tenor voice. The reflective passages with which the narative is interspersed are of two classes; chorals, or popular hymn tunes of the community; and second, choruses, airs, and recitations.

Originally the Oratorio was intended for performances on six separate days. One part for each day. Our presentation will consist only of the first three parts because of the limitation of time. Part one particularly appropriate to the first day of the Christmas festival is highly jubilant in character. Part two which begins with a symphony picturing the shepherds on their night watch is more quiet and passionate in character. With part three, we return to the jubilant rhythm of part one. Our presentation closes with the tenor voice in recititative telling of the shepherds return--the repetition of the opening theme of this part "Rejoice and Sing". Together these three parts constitutes "The Feast of Christmas."

The presentation will be directed by Mr. Jester Hairston, Miss Robert V. Edwards at the organ, and Miss Gloria Roberts, pianist. The soloists will be Mr. Charles Holland, tenor; Mr. Elijah Hodges, baritone; Mrs. Lavida Ervin, soprano; and Miss Willie Mays, alto.

Ministerial Alliance Airs Inspirational Hour

Station KPAS of Pasadena has announced an additional member of its family of broadcasters. It is the AME Alliance of Los Angeles and Vicinity which broadcasts the AME Inspirational Hour program each Wednesday evening at ten, 1110 on your dial. This weekly broadcast presents an inspirational theme through ministers of the several churches and their choral organizations. The program is said to be a broadcast of unusual merit and is planned to supplement the work done in the pulpits to bring comfort to the sick and shut-ins of the various congregations, as well as to give spiritual aid to many who are forced to nurse the family fireside because of gas and rubber rationing.

KPAS is one of the finest independent stations on the West Coast with studios in Los Angeles and Hollywood. It has a maximum broadcasting capacity of 35,000 watts and is heard as far north as Alaska. These programs can be heard by more than ten million listeners.

Four outstanding churches have already made broadcasts with their ministers as speakers and their choral organizations furnishing the music. They are the Rev. Jonathan A. Dames, pastor of First AME Church at Pasadena, the Rev. John B. Isaacs, pastor of Second AME Church of Los Angeles; the Rev. Alfred K. Quinn, pastor of First AME Church of Santa Monica and the Rev. J. Cincinatus White, pastor of Bethel AME Church, Los Angeles.

The Rev. Frank Harris, Presiding Elder of the Los Angeles District of the Southern California Annual Conference will deliver the New Year's message. The Alliance solicits your comments and messages. You may communicate with them in care of Station KPAS or P. O. Box 902, Pasadena, Calif. or in care of any of the participating ministers. The Rev. Jonathan A. Dames is president of the Alliance.

Don't miss this thrilling event.

Joy does not happen. It is the inevitable result of certain lines followed and laws obeyed, and so a matter of character.—M. B. Babcock.

One's first lesson is to learn one's self; having done this, one will naturally, through grace from God, forgive his brother and love his enemies.—Mary Baker Eddy.

Race Track GOSSIP

By Jay Gould

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 24.—The three glamour girls this week are Novel Hayden, Alice Crawford and Myrtle Jones. The three best-dressed women of the week are Ruth Whitfield, Anita Green and Mrs. Dennie Allen of San Francisco.

Whirlaway added 18 more Gs to his owner's bankroll by taking the Louisiana derby.

Bay Meadows faded out Dec. 19, until February, and then Bill Kyne will get a long Spring meeting.

A. Love, 50-50 owner of Jack's Tavern, taking the betting honors at Bay Meadows for the largest bettor, pushing two, three and five hundred through the mutual windows each race and winning.

That funny incident in which the pretty doesn't want to be in the column amused everyone in Jack's Tavern t'other night, even Love and Sweetwine, the super-duper mixologists.

Santa Claus will be better than eevr this Xmas as everybody has plenty of bananas and there are no pikers this year.

L. D. Benton, playboy and sport, was rejected from the Army. Somebody was very happy. I wonder if it was a beauty parlor operator?

Cleo Foster, who thought he would not pass the test for the Army, was received so he is now in camp. I wonder if Rose, his ex-wife, is glad or sorry?

Tite Montgomery, Rich Brody, Little Hicky, Calvin Vincent and Buck Cannon are handling big and raking in plenty money at the Monte Carlo smoke shop.

Clarence Dunford and wife and Carl Harris and wife from the Knotty Pine night club at Vallejo play all the dances and ringside all the fights and give the local night spots a good lacing when they are out.

When you see Mr. and Mrs. Richard Lee, ask them how they enjoyed the visit to New Orleans.

Frank Brown is perhaps the quietest business man in the Fillmore District. Recently bought a building and is waiting until Spring to do some modernizing.

We don't get a glimpse of Clarence Coffin anymore since the Doctors gave him the O. K. but he only has plenty of dough and he's betting it will be a boy.

Juanita Pinkston and Estella Cox and Elizabeth Booker are working for Uncle Sam in the day and playing hard at night. How can they keep the pace up?

Johnny Vallers can be seen in and out of the Alabam and different spots and a swell a fellow as you ever want to meet.

James Hill and Johnny Cobb still playing all the spots.

Irene Stevenson is one of the pretties about town having a fine time.

Mrs. Cleo Jones still going strong.

Gordon Creques, ex-New York fight promoter, presenting several boxers on all the local fight cards around 'Frisco.

The New York friend of Kid North who called George Moore, manager of Henry Armstrong long distance from Los Angeles just to get a chance to find out how to contact Kid North. A pal.

Jerry (The Fox) Chevalier, New Orleans playboy, seen in and out of the Town club with the pretties.

Mr. and Mrs. Elbert Bonsuelo of 'Frisco enjoying themselves while celebrating the wee hours of the morning.

Domingo Enriquez, U. S. Army, knocking himself out in and out of first one night spot and then the other.

Mary Lou Scott of Los Angeles out with Mr. Smith and seein' all the lights and sights.

Steve Coffey and Larry Simon cruising the night clubs with two lovelies and never allowing any checks to be payed.

A. Love, Vernon Brown and the crowd at Bay Meadows watching Vaudina Cloud, Blue Suit, Florizan Beau and Wise Barrister all run second and then sweating before Defense and Courtil broke the winning circle and made them catch up.

When paging Kid North over the loudspeaker system at Bay Meadows the announcer calls for Mr. Robert North. Mr. North is the cause of the fat checks going from Bill Kyne's office to the various colored churches up and down the penninsula.

Bill Kyne, genial manager of Bay Meadows, received a trophy Saturday for his contribution to the war effort.

Ike W. Bennett, Joe and Edna Mae and Hello Shirley visiting out late at night clubs and seeing the early and late birds come and go.

Billie Holliday will soon be seen with Lionel Hampton's band as the featured vocalist.

Noble Sissle and Earl Hines are both headed West. Watch this space for your entertainment in dancing notices of the big bands booked by yours truly and John A. Bur-ton.

Hockwells, well known race track globe trotter is on the Coast for the winter.

"Society" George Dean will be back in 'Frisco when the races open in February.

Wonder where Dolly Strange is? She must have skipped town.

Jean Brassfield of Santa Barbara seen about town doing the night clubs.

Big Steve and Gert's chitterling supper is every Saturday night at 1820 Post Street, upstairs.

Pick up on Mabel Hamilton's Sunday night come cooked meals at 1661 Baker street.

Give the Kirkland Hotel's Cafe, Sutter and Laguna streets, a chance when you're eating out. The Kirkland is operated by Ollie, Bea, Bertha and Lydia, the four popular sisters.

Drop in at the Cherryland Breakfast Club on the late watch when you're out doing the town.

Pete and "Big" Bill Rector now operate the Owl Smoke Shop, 1727 Post street and are two of the swellest guys in town.

Mrs. Kay Dunn and Clarence Dunn sporting the boys and girls to anything in the place at Club Alabam.

W. P. Proctor, Santa Barbara, old race track friend of yours truly, dropped into 'Frisco with a bale of cash and grabbed all the checks while staking the waitress and bartenders.

Bob Miles, bartender and globe trotter is now mixologist at the Town Club along with mixologist number one, Vernon Nocle.

Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Hambrake celebrated their tenth anniversary at their residence 2352 Pine street. Sixty-five friends were entertained while the Hambrakes received many bautiful and expensive presents.

Bobbie Bell, who looks like a "kept man" wears $125 overcoats and bonnets costing $25. He throws money away like it is water.

Jimmy Hudson, who won, lost and spent fortunes, is now working in the shipyards, but still playing the game in front, believe it or not.

Press row spectators at the Armstrong-Turpin fight were Jay Gould, Frank Young, jr., and Jerry (The Fox) Chevalier.

The Los Angeles, Stockton, Vallejo and Sacramento gangs turned out one hundred per cent for Armstrong's battle.

Duke Ellington just did a fat $27,500 week at the Earle theatre in Philly. Swell going, Duke.

Count Basie's $17,000 take at the Paradise in Detroit last week topped all records for the flicker house. He beat Cab Calloway's, Jimmie Lunceford's and Earl Hines', $16,000.

Late news flashes on the entertainment front. Three Clefs and Three Notes of Rhythm at Tony's Merry-Go-Round, Philadelphia; Leonard Ware trio at Cafe Life, New York; Three Chocolates at the Famous Door, New York; Ella Fitzgerald leaving the Royal theatre, Baltimore and headed for the Oriental Theatre, Chicago; Delta Rhythm Boys at Reuben Bleu's, New York; Peck and Peck at Ubangi, New York; Jerry Smith, Ubangi, New York; Tip Tap and Toe, Hollywood. Four Toppers at the Enduro Restaurant Theatre, Brooklyn; Broomfield and Greeley at the Bal Tabarin, Los Angeles; Ernestine Porter, Showboat, International Settlement, 'Frisco; Curtis Mosby with his all-star show at the Alabam, Los Angeles; Count Basie leaves the Adams Theatre, Newark, N. J.; Cab Calloway following Basie into the Paradise Theatre, Detroit; Duke Ellington leaving the Howard theatre, Washington; Erskine Hawkins, Apollo, New York; Fletcher Henderson, Palais Royal, South Bend, Indiana; Louis Jordan, Palace Theatre, Cleveland; Andy Kirk, Arcadia Ballroom, New York; Nicole Sissie leaving the Stewart Theatre, Lincoln, Nebraska; Eddie South, Hickory House, New York; and Teddy Wilson at Cafe Society Uptown, New York.

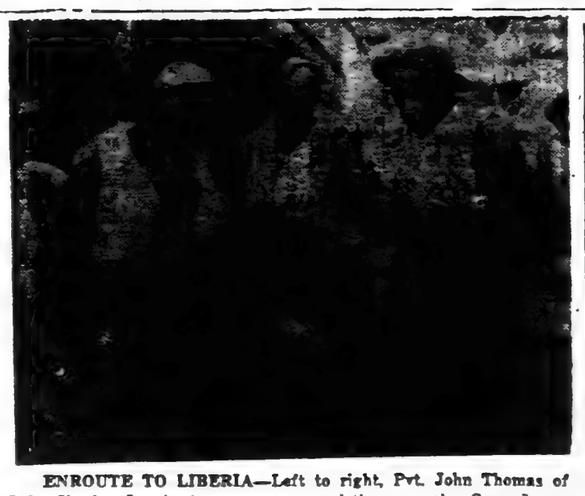
Racing has been okeyed for Florida and the night club owners are all in happy spirits as the night life looks forward to a good year-end.

Xmas Greetings to all youse guys and gals and al. the newspaper profession. In the fade out of this year let me send out the best there is to Lucius Harper and Fay Young of the Chicago Defender, Charlotta Bass of the California Eagle, Lucius Lomax, sr. and jr. and Almena Davis, Los Angeles Tribune, to all top bandleaders, entertainers, vocalists song stylists, comedians, screen and stage stars and celebrities who have always been a reader of yours truly's column and who never forget to remember me. To Etta Moten and Claude Barnett of the ANP, to George Garner who is recuperating in his Pasadena home from the recent automobile injury; to all the lads across the pond who used to be able to have so much fun out of reading this column and now are helping to keep it safe; to all my dear friends throughout the nation, too many to remember individually: "A Merry, Merry Xmas and A Happy, Happy New Year" with just a last bit of advice at the end of the fade out to all my race track pals, always remember: "Don't bet your money blindfolded." I've got mine and out of the red for the duration and afterward. Luck to you old sports.

Violet McGowan and T. L. McGowan ringsiding in the first row at the Armstrong battle along with Carmen Keeling.

Dave's Liquor Store on Fillmore is perhaps the first to start hiring colored girls as clerks. The rest are now following suit. Harriet McCann is the cutie in Dave's.

W. P. Mitchell, Oxnard, Calif., playing all the nite spots in 'Frisco and seen around with Frank Brown, Earl Lundy, all shooting at the world and doing O. K.



Joyce Morgan seen in and out of the night clubs and spots.

Youngblood of Seattle, returning from Los Angeles by United Airliner on which Mrs. Nellie Winslow also had a reservation, had his plane grounded and spent an extra evening en route back home, in the spots in 'Frisco.

The Dukes of Rhythm are still playing at Jack's Tavern featuring Slapsie Sims on Bass, Mad Bo on skins, Poindexter on Alto Sax and Clarinet, Roy on Tenor Sax and Otie Matthews at the piano.

Hoping everybody stays warm for the New Year.

Use Mails for '43 License Plates

SACRAMENTO—Mail applications for 1943 license plates may now be forwarded to the Department of Motor Vehicles in Sacramento, by Los Angeles vehicle owners according to announcement today by Acting Registrar Thomas V. Maloney.

Applications received by mail will be handled in the same fashion. The amount of the fee due is shown in the lower left hand corner of the 1942 registration card.

To apply for plates by mail, the applicant should place his 1942 registration card together with a postal or bank money order or cashier's check for the fee due in an envelope and mail to the Dept. of Motor Vehicles Sacramento. If he has moved since his registration card was issued he should write in his new address on the registration card so that this new card and plates may be mailed to his present address.

Applications in person may be made at any branch office after January 2nd, inasmuch as the new developments have caused abandonment of plans for postponing the license renewal period, Maloney said.

Deadline for Tire Inspection Jan. 31

Dearline for initial inspection of tires and wheels of vehicles operated by gasoline-rationed home-front motorists falls on January 31, 1943, the Automobile Club of Southern California warned this week.

Boys, 17; Men, 38-50, Wanted By Navy

The Los Angeles Navy Recruiting Service today sent out an urgent appeal to members of the Negro race who are 17 years of age and 38 to 50 to volunteer as mess attendants in the Naval Service.

Men in these age brackets are eligible to volunteer in the Navy and will be placed on active duty immediately.

Mess attendants have along with their regular duties a definite battle station and a number of Negroes have already distinguished themselves heroically at their post.

Pay for mess attendants ranges from $50 per month as third class, $54 monthly for second, and $66 for first class. In addition there are monthly allowances for dependants.

Those interested in joining the Navy are urged to apply today at the nearest Navy Recruiting Station.

Wornout Cars in Africa

Unserviceable motor vehicles are being converted into horse-drawn equipment to meet transportation needs of farmers and miners in South Africa, the Automobile Club of Southern California has been informed. In parts of Rhodesia, special iron rims are being fitted in place of rubber tires.

Traffic Volume Shows 19.89 Per Cent Drop

Traffic volume in and around the Los Angeles Metropolitan area has dropped 19.85 per cent since mid-May, checks conducted at six strategic locations by Automobile Club of Southern California engineers revealed this week.

Chest Appeal Nears Goal on Eastside

Within $200.00 of their goal, the Eastside Community Chest Volunteers will devote many of the holidays toward bringing in enough contributions to put the campaign for funds for hospitals, clinics, children's homes, youth and family agencies over the top.

Chairman John E. Hargrove appeals particularly to clubs and other organizations to give their group support to the fund, which is used for the aid of all people regardless of religion, race or other distinction. Already on the honor roll are Elks Lodge No. 86 and the Morning View Club, in addition to hundreds of individual and fir mcontributors.

"If other groups will come forward and help this worthy cause for the needs of our own people, we can speedily and with honor complete the campaign on the Eastside," Mr. Hargrove stated.

"We must keep in mind that the Chest agencies are working for home health and morale, and that 75 per cent of their services are for children. Victory would be barren if we at home failed to give every chance to the children now growing up, and who must carry on our nation."

Contributions made through Division 44, now amount to more than $1900.00, Mr. Hargrove reports, approximately 90 per cent quota. Mrs. G. V. Grayson, colonel of Division 47, previously reported over the top, now has $287.00, 110 per cent of quota.

Total Chest contributions are $2,269.887.00 81 per cent of the goal of $2,8000,000.00. Residential, suburban, business, and public and parochial schools division are over the top, and strong daily reports are being made by the large business houses and industrial plants, Chest officials state.

Terracing Is Taught Students at Tuskegee

TUSKEGEE INSTITUTE, Dec. 24.—Under the direction of their instructor, Dr. M. F. Spaulding, of the Tuskegee Institute School of Agriculture, who is a pioneer Negro agronomist, students of the institute, taking courses in agronomy, soil conservation and terracing are taught in the field with implements available on the average Negro farm owner's farm.

Special efforts have been put forth to teach students one of the simplest methods of terracing with team and a two-horse plow. This method has been reputed to be faster than with powerful terracing machinery and was perfected in the Tuskegee Institute laboratory area, then moved to one of the institute's cooperating centers.

Dr. Spaulding's class was able to check the slopes, determine terrace outlets, run terraces, build terraces, and check more than 1,000 feet of terrace in two hours.

Dr. Spaulding pointed out that the nation should begin now to save the soil for posterity and also to meet the immediate Food for Freedom goals by making water "walk off" rather than "run off" by terracing.

L. A. FORUM WILL MEET SUNDAY

There will be an open discussion at the Los Angeles Forum 1209½ S. Central ave., Sunday, Dec. 27, at 4:30 p. m. Subject: "The achievements of the American Negro" and a review of "The Life of Christ, as an Individual," by Hilton Philips, Forum Librarian. The public is cordially invited to participate in these two interesting topics.

Curtail Bus Trips

Bus trips in Canada have been curtailed to a maximum of 50 miles except where buses provide the only means of transportation or where other transportation facilities are entirely inadequate, according to information received by the Automobile Club of Southern California.

Nurses Group Observes Yule Season

Yule season was observed by the local Nurses Association Thursday, Dec. 17, at Sojourn Truth Home, with the presentation of a very timely and Patriotic Film led by the American Red Cross, entitled, "No Greater Glory". Following the show Mrs. Pauline V. Johnson, Enrollment Secretary for the Red Cross, gave a very interesting talk on the need of more nurses in the service. According to Mrs. Johnson, only one hundred and twenty-five nurses have answered the last call for nine hundred nurses; this, Mrs. Johnson feels, may give rise to drafting nurses to meet the urgent need. It is expected that many southland nurses will answer the call soon.

Mrs. Irene Campbell, led the Christmas Carols, Mrs. Ferrol Bobo Connor, at the piano. Gifts were received by all present. Refreshments consisting of: Fruit cake, coffee, candies and nuts were enjoyed by the guests.

Each guest was asked to bring cigarettes for the soldiers' Xmas box, which was presented to the USO.

AN IMPORTANT MESSAGE About the MEAT SITUATION

Recently it has become more and more difficult for all meat markets to obtain the same large variety of meats that patrons have been accustomed to choose from. Although we have spared neither time nor effort to maintain our stocks, we have not been able to provide as wide a selection as you or this market would like.

This market still has as large a variety as any and in fact a larger selection than many others. We regret seeing some of our patrons disappointed and appreciate the fine spirit and loyalty that our friendly patrons have shown in realizing that the situation is a necessary war sacrifice.

We pledge ourselves to continue to provide the largest selection of meat products possibly obtainable.

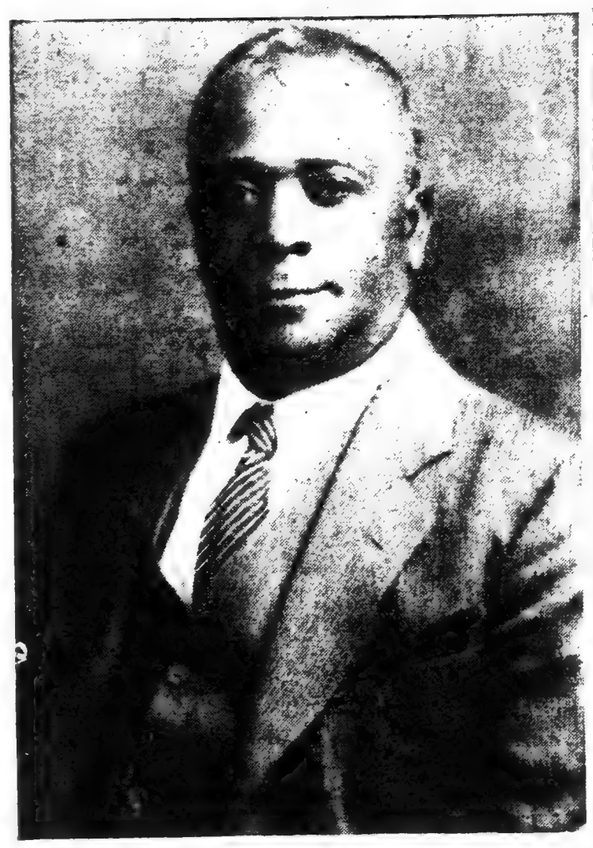
★ GOLDEN WEST BRIDGE



The GWBA is closing the greatest year in its history. Most of the credit for our success goes to the ladies. They really get things done. That is the reason why women were chosen to fill our four highest offices, president, vice president, secretary, and assistant secretary.

In a future issue of this great weekly, we will tell you our accomplishments. Also we will give the names of the West's 25 ranking players.

May Denton for the second time won the Sunday series, the only player to win this series twice. The new series started Dec 20.

Old Age Pensions Broadened By State Welfare Board

By VERNON KILPATRICK
Assemblyman, 55th District

In last week's issue of the EAGLE I promised to compare the California "pension" with the old-age "pension" in the State of Washington for you this week.

My information on the Washington State Old Age Security is based upon a study of the act itself, and then, by making a 2600-mile trip to Seattle and Olympia, Wash., for personal investigation.

Upon leaving there for home, I handed the state department in Olympia, the state capitol and the chairman of King county (Seattle) board of commissioners (supervisors), a list of questions which they were to answer and forward to me in Los Angeles. I now have these letters, which confirm many of the statements herein presented. It is on the basis of the following comparisons that I shall attempt to improve our California Pension.

Most important, I believe, of all in the Washington law is the provision permitting the filing for court action without cost and attorney fees being provided by the court, in case the judgment should be in behalf of the applicant or recipient.

In California we have the same legal right to appeal to the courts for rehearing of cases which have been before the state board, as they have here, but such rights are of little value, since the attorney must usually be paid and a $40 pension does not look promising to the attorney who must expend money for stenographic service and overhead, besides the giving of valuable time in preparing such cases, and too, our court costs are $7.50. These items nullify any practical means of taking advantage of the law. Therefore, if only this change was brought about great advantage would accrue to the pensioner. Social workers and department heads administrating pensions and relief would be much more exacting of the client's rights if there was an easy way of bringing them before the bar of justice.

In Washington, payments begin within 30 days of the application, while in California more than three months is the usual time. The applicant may establish age merely by their own affidavit before a court when other means fail. They have no citizenship provision, merely five years residence within the last 10 years, whereas we require that one be a citizen in addition to residence provisions. They provide hospitalization, medical care, dental and optical service as needed in addition to the pension payments.

While their law calls for $40 a month, as does ours, their average payments are but $33.00 as against our $36.00. The Washington State board is less liberal than ours while their local boards are more liberal than our supervisors, but the state as here sets the policy. If our county administration was as liberal as in Washington state, our troubles would be few indeed. For this reason we must write into the law more power to the state board and more regulation for the control of social workers and their superiors. Their law provides for review by the client, or his agent, of his own case record.

Our state board has provided for such review, but since the client has not been so informed the mailing is of little value. Washington state provides up to $100 for burial expense.

Their medical and burial benefits bring their average payments to about $36, thus actually equalizing our own. Washington state with one-fourth our population, pays pensions to about 65,000 aged persons against our 165,000. If we were paying to the same percentage of population, our load would be about 250,000.

Washington has a cash balance in the treasury of about 10 million dollars. We have about a 60 million dollar balance. To liberalize on the Washington basis will mean placing many more persons on the pension rolls and will necessitate heavier appropriations by 20 or more millions of dollars annually.

With recent budget provisions, as explained in last week's issue of the California EAGLE, deductions will almost be eliminated, bringing our average payments very close to $40.00.

I propose to ask the legislature to establish the need of all aged persons at $60 per month and that payments shall be made to $50, which will allow for living in one's own home, or would permit the earning of $10 per month without deductions from the $50 pension.

NO POORHOUSES

Washington state has abolished all of its former poorhouses, caring for the poor in a more humane and civilized manner in their own homes. They do not have the word "indigent" in their law. Relief is available to persons with one year residence in the state upon their own affidavit of "need." However, being in need does not imply that he is destitute. He may have $150 value in livestock, his own home, an insurance policy with a paid up value of $300 and a cash surrender value of $100, and yet be eligible.

As in California, the county may place a lien against his property, permitting foreclosure upon the recipient's death, except that the widow or child or stepchild of the recipient may not be evicted. Also there is an exemption of $100 in any claim by the county for burial purposes.

They have set up an enabling act to be available when and if the Federal Government should decide to assist the state and county in relief of the very poor. This act provides a means of accepting and administrating federal funds on a state-wide and uniform basis.

I am now preparing bills to introduce in the forthcoming session covering all of the above advantages in the Washington relief laws, and trust that much suffering and hardships will be thus alleviated in event of their passage.

★ FIRST AID DON'TS

4th in Series of 10

(This is the fourth of a series on "What Not to Do Until the Doctor Comes." Approved by the American Red Cross, we are printing them in the belief that untrained aid can be terribly dangerous. For standard courses in first aid apply to your Red Cross chapter.—Ed.)

Don't waste bandages, tape, medicines or any similar supplies. Don't even use them unless you know you are using them correctly. An unbandaged wound—unless it's bleeding—can wait till the doctor arrives.

Don't apply adhesive tape, cotton, fingers, ordinary cloth or even gauze bandage directly to wound. First place a sterile compress over the wound, then hold it in place with tape or bandage. Don't bandage too closely—or everything will slip. Don't bandage too tightly—or the swelling will produce severe pain. Examine each bandage frequently to make sure.

Don't use a tourniquet unless absolutely necessary, and then don't make a tourniquet out of wire, string or rope. Use a bandage, a necktie or any other material at least two inches wide. Loosen the tourniquet every 15 minutes.

You may find out where First Aid classes are being conducted in your neighborhood by contacting Stephen O'Donnell, American Red Cross, 1200 S. Vermont avenue, FI-5261.

If no class is now in session an adequate supply of instructors is available to teach new classes.

New Type of Interest in Farm, Home Week

TUSKEGEE INSTITUTE, Dec. 24.—"Participation of Negroes in Measures Essential to Winning the War" was the theme of the Sixth Annual Farm and Home Week which opened here recently. Farm men and women eager to listen and learn were registered from various counties in the state. The national emergency and demands made on the farmer have developed a new type of interest in the scientific skills offered by the Department of Agriculture at Tuskegee Institute.

Interest centered in the livestock for the men. Poultry, gardens, and the home food supply were the topics that interested the women. Said one woman who has learned to operate a tractor and helped in other farm operations: "We have had to use our ingenuity to successfully carry out our part of the farm program. We use honey and syrup instead of sugar. We have larger and better gardens and more chickens and eggs to send to the market since gas rationing and travel have become such acute problems."

The pedestrian gets a break in these days of lower speed. At least he has an even chance of outrunning the car.

Cross switch your ties now and then and help the boys double cross Hitler!

Triumph for Marian—Washington Will Honor Great Negro Singer

MARIAN ANDERSON TO SING FOR U.S. CEREMONY

Marian Anderson, noted Negro contralto, will sing at a special ceremony at the Department of the Interior on January 6, it was announced today by Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes.

Marian Anderson, noted Negro contralto, will sing at a special ceremony at the Department of the Interior on January 6, it was announced today by Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes.

Miss Anderson will appear in the auditorium of the Department of the Interior building for a ceremony to be attended by a group of prominent Federal officials members of the diplomatic corps, civic leaders, outstanding Negro representatives, and other prominent persons. The occasion will be the formal presentation to the Federal Government of a mural painting representing Miss Anderson's first concert in Washington when she sang on the steps of the Lincoln Memorial on Easter Sunday, 1939.

While all details of the program for January 6 have not been completed, Secretary Ickes said that Miss Anderson would sing several selections. The program will be conducted in recognition of the great cultural contributions made by Miss Anderson, Secretary Ickes said.

The mural to be presented was arranged for by the Marian Anderson Mural Committee, under the chairmanship of Edward Bruce. It depicts the scene at the Lincoln Memorial at Easter, 1939, when Miss Anderson sang an outdoor concert to a crowd of 75,000 persons gathered before the Lincoln Memorial. Use of the Memorial was granted by Secretary Ickes at that time following refusal of the use of Constitution Hall for a concert by the Negro singer.

To memorialize that event, the Marian Anderson Mural Committee was formed. Funds to finance a painting were raised by thousands of contributions from school children and others throughout the nation interested in the strengthening of racial relations. Mitchell Jamieson was chosen to paint the mural after a national competition. The mural has been installed in the Department of the Interior building, and will be formally presented to the Government on behalf of the Mural Committee. It will be accepted for the Government by Secretary Ickes.

Complete details of the program will be announced later, Secretary Ickes, said. In addition to participation of Negro leaders in the event, plans are being made for the attendance of a representative group of Negro school children who will appear on behalf of the many children who made small contributions to the fund which financed the painting of the mural.

Miss Anderson's appearance at the Department of the Interior auditorium will precede her initial appearance in Constitution Hall when she sings there on the following night (Thursday, Jan. 7) in behalf of the United China Relief.

On the Sidewalk

BY C. A. B.

A warning call to the nation was sounded by a great American legislator this week. He is former Senator George Norris, for forty years a bastion of integrity in the U. S. Senate. Hear him:

"Representatives of special interests are already attempting to frame the future so that, when the war is won and peace is made, they will be in control of a great part, if not all of our governmental structure.

"Many of them are now in key positions and waiting for the time to come to act directly where they are now acting indirectly and in secret in controlling our governmental policies.

"Yes, we say to the National Association of Manufacturers that the stranglehold which many of its members have had upon the happiness and the destinies of the common man will be loosened and this unseen and mysterious power known as electricity, through the instrumentality of many TVA's will lessen the labor of those who toil and will bring happiness, joy and comfort to every fireside in our land."

When George Norris talks about control of Congress by special interest, he knows what he is saying. This is no starry-eyed liberal fresh from his last editorial in "The New Republic," this is a distinguished American who has spent his life battling the forces which he now proclaims intend "taking over" the People's Peace.

The convulsions of American reaction against the war effort, the President of the United States and the declarations Vice-President Wallace's speech on the "Century of the Common Man" are a threat aimed directly at the cherished aspirations of the Negro people.

Relentless opposition to the war effort, however, veiled by patriotic postures, by the National Association of Manufacturers, and their legislative stooges, Congressional reactionaries, poll-taxers and Tories, is a fresh indication of the fact that this war coincides with the real interests of the masses of people in our nation.

Negroes, especially, must understand that the heart of their oppression beats in the dollar-sign bosom of the Manufacturers body. NAM's Congressional lackeys, an unholy combination of Southern Democrats, Northern anti-Roosevelt Democrats, and Republicans, intend to go scalping after Roosevelt in the next Congress.

Roosevelt's policies represent the correct way to fight this war to victory and lay the foundation of enduring peace. Those who

Pioneer Chas. Dodge Dead; L. A. Mourns

Los Angeles mourned the passing of Mr. Charles Dodge this week, a pioneer citizen of Inglewood, one of the West's truly historic characters.

Retired for several years, Mr. Dodge had been the only Negro bank teller in the West for decades. He was employed in this capacity in San Diego. Experts credited him with possessing one of the keenest financial minds in the country.

Funeral services were held Wednesday in Inglewood.

Mr. Dodge is survived by his widow, Mrs. Charles Dodge, noted social and religious figure.

The pioneer's tragic illness broke, for the first time, the tradition of early Christmas breakfast tendered annually to scores of friends by Mr. and Mrs. Dodge.

5 Knifed in Yuletide Rows

There's no way out of it. War nerves upset a number of citizens over the week-end.

Or something.

Anyway, Christmas cutlery was well exercised.

To wit:

Arnet Rogers, 1463 East 43rd place, went to visit his wife, from whom he is separated, on Christmas Day to spread some of the spirit of yule. His wife is a nice girl name of Florentina, in residence at 4920 Central avenue. But it happened she was entertaining a gentleman friend entitled Wesley Steele, 1049 East 46th street, when Arnet arrived full of the spirit of yule.

Well, pretty soon, as luck could have it, Wesley was full of Steele's steel.

The party broke up at the interruption of John Law. Arnet went to General hospital for a rest cure from knife wounds about the abdomen and back. Mr. Steele suffered somewhat lesser wounds and the inconvenience of the Newton Street clink.

Along in here, the song aint got much harmony, so to speak.

Steele claims Arnet commenced their difference of opinion immediately upon seeing him Steele with his Florentina. And Arnet says the same. Only vice versa.

Florentina don't say nothing much at all.

Three gentlemen got to debating the point about who bumped whose chair at a tippling establishment at 4006 Central Ave.

URGE NATIONAL PROTEST TO STOP MGM FILM

NEW YORK, N. Y.—Warning that certain appeasement forces in Hollywood are planning to utilize the influence of the Office of War Information itself to justify Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's release of the poll-tax appeasement film "Tennessee Johnson," the National Negro Congress today urged trade unions, people's organizations and individuals to flood the offices of the Office of War Information and MGM with telegrams and letters urging that the film be shelved for the duration as a menace to national unity.

Protests should be sent to: Elmer Davis, director of the Office of War Information, Washington, D. C.; Howard Dietz, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, 1540 Broadway, New York City; and Lowell Mellett, OWI Chief, Bureau of Motion Pictures, Hollywood, Calif.

Officials of the National Negro Congress made the announcement after Dr. Louis Reddick, curator of the New York Schomburg Library had received a letter from Lowell Mellett, which declared flatly that "This office has no power to prevent the making, distributing or exhibiting of any picture."

Mellett further declared that it is the practice of the Bureau "to forward such protests as yours to producer, distributors, or exhibitors." . . . but, he points out significantly "... this I would do save the ... letter indi-

STORIES CONFLICT ON VALLEJO RIOT CAUSE

VALLEJO, Calif, Jan. 1—Rioting between Negro and white sailors and civilians broke out here over the week end an involved more than 200 persons and several riot calls to the Vallejo City police department.

United Press statements held that the disorder was touched off following a fracas between a Negro and a white sailor.

United Press statements held that the disorder was touched off following a fracas between a Negro and a white sailor.

Marines, under the command of Col. M. E. Sherer, commandant of Mare Island base, blocked all street intersections in the city and machine guns were set up in firing position.

An old, old story appeared between the lines of a statement by Earl Dickering, Vallejo police chief. He said, "The chief cause of this trouble appears to be the fact that most of these colored sailors are from the south, and likewise most of the white sailors and civilians participating in the disorders are from the south."

That this wasn't the open-and-shut of it, however, was indicated in other stories from the naval building area which held that widespread discrimination and segregation of Negroes had been preparing the "spontaneous" racial outburst for months. It was said that southern Navy men brought Dixie methods to Mare Island and that favoritism had become a chief cause of complaint among Negro naval units.

DAMAGE TO NATION

Observers here, Negro and white, deplored the existence of conditions out of which the riot grew and urged that all progressive groups demand a thorough investigation of the situation in Vallejo. Inter-racial riots do not "happen," it was contended, but grow inevitably out of policies of segregation and discrimination which not only violate the principles for which the People's War is fought but are a military liability to the nation. A sweeping reform of naval policy in the treatment of Negro recruits and policies of segregation at Vallejo are urged as measures to preclude further classes.

According to United Press none too trustworthy in the treatment of news in which Negroes are involved, the riot story is as follows:

The trouble apparently started when 200 Negro sailors gathered at the night club. As they started to leave the club they were ordered to return to the club by a detachment of shore patrolmen armed with submachine guns.

Ordered to halt, they refused, according to reports, and a shore patrolman fired into the crowd wounding Leo A. Shaw, 18, and George Carpenter, 26, both Negro cooks, 2nd class.

The shore patrol detachment was unable to halt the crowd and street fighting and rioting spread to other sections of the city.

Shore patrolmen searched all theatres, cafes and parked automobiles and ordered men back to their bases on ships. All restaurants and bars in the city were being closed by military police.

On Saturday night some 75 Negro sailors and civilians and white sailors and civilians engaged in widespread disorders throughout the city—reportedly as the outgrowth of the alleged stabbing of a United States marine by a Negro on Friday night.

During Saturday's battle, two civilians: Samuel Dyer, 30-year-old Negro, and Victor

U. S. HAS 7-PART PLAN TO EFFECT ECONOMIC STABILIZATION

(This is the first of a series of four articles on Economic Stabilization. The series was prepared by the Office of War Information to explain, in simplest terms, the government program for economic stability.)

The United States government is working to bring about economic stabilization through a seven-part plan.

When we talk about economics, a lot of people stop listening. They think economics is something that belongs to the colleges and the professors.

That's wrong. It's more wrong than ever, now that the country is at war.

Economics belongs to everybody. It belongs to every man that has a dime, every man that has a want, every man that has a loaf of bread.

A boy sells a toy for a nickel. That's economics. The boy spends the nickel for six pieces of candy. Economics. We order a billion dollars worth of bombers. More economics.

Everybody knows what stabilization means. And economic stabilization is just this: The boy gets six pieces of candy for his nickel today, tomorrow, next month. We get as many bombers for our billion in January as we did last March.

Well, suppose we haven't got economic stabilization. What then?

Most likely: inflation.

Why?

There are 134 million people in the United States. All have appetites. Appetites for food, of course. And appetites for clothes, homes, radios, fur coats, kiddie banks, silk stockings, and all those things that make life so comfortable and so American. But a fighting country can't spare time, material or machines to make most of those things. Half of our manufacturing today is making things for war. In addition, we must help feed, clothe and equip our allies in Africa, Asia, Australia and other places--no matter who they are and where they are. The first half of our why, then, is less material than we want.

Meanwhile, more Americans are working, better wages, than ever before. They have the power—dollars--to buy more than ever before. So the second half of our why is more buying power.

Less goods, plus more buying power, produce inflation. People with more money than they have had before will bid up prices of scarce articles. That tendency produces inflation. In gold-rush days hungry Alaskans with large bags of gold bid up the price of ham and eggs to $50 a plate.

This up-bidding is only the beginning of inflation. As prices rise, workers demand more pay. Manufacturers of goods bid up wages to get the men they need. This increases as more men go into the armed forces. And to pay these wages, manufacturers raise prices. Farmers, losing workers to the services and to the manufacturers raise wages. They raise wages if they are sure they can get higher prices. If they aren't sure, they close their farms and go to work in factories. That makes farm produce scarcer. The scarcer farm produce is, the higher prices go.

History has a lesson here: in every period of inflation, wages have never kept up with prices. And, of course, pension payments, insurance returns and interest revenue remain where they were.

Inflation is a dizzy ride. No time to take it when there's a life-and-death war on.

The government, therefore, wants economic stabilization. How it goes to bring that about is no secret. There are seven controls--seven brakes on the inflation roller-coaster. President Roosevelt explained them to Congress last April 28. The seven main controls are:

1. Heavy taxation to pay war costs and reduce spending by every person.
2. Price ceilings for foods, goods and rents.
3. Stabilization of wages and salaries.
4. Stabilization of agricultural prices.
5. Increased savings through buying of war bonds.
6. Rationing of scarce goods to insure fair distribution.
7. Discouragements of the use of credit or installment buying and the encouragement of the payment of debt.

A program of heavy taxation has been approved by the Congres. The public is buying war bonds. Ceilings have been put on prices of most articles. limitations have been put on credit and installment buying and rationing is well under way. By the President's order of October 5, stabilization of wages and salaries was begun. Wages and salaries were set at September 15 levels, with provisions for adjustments in certain cases, and a ceiling of $25,000 put on salaries.

Passing laws and making regulations may be enough in a dictatorship. But this is a democracy. Those brakes will hold only if the people put weight and pressure behind them. Subsequent articles will explain why.

Buy War Bonds and keep inflation where we need it most--in our tires.

Race Soldiers Everywhere, OWI Says

Negroes are being inducted into the Army through Selective Service in the same proportion that Negro registrants bear to total registration, and Negro soldiers are now on active duty in most of the overseas theatres where other American troops are stationed, the Office of War Information announced today.

The OWI cited official records of the Bureau of Selective Service, War Manpower Commission, which reveal the following facts about Negroes in the armed services.

1. Although Negroes constituted 9.8 percent of the total population in the last census, Negro selectees and volunteers constituted 10.1 percent of all persons inducted into the Army through Selective Service by October 31, 1942.

2 In 9 out of 14 southern and border states, the percentage of Negroes inducted into the Army through Selective Service exceeded the percentage of Negroes registered in those States.

3. During the 1940-41 period, Negroes constituted 16.1 percent of the total number of volunteers entering the Army through the Selective Service System.

OWI pointed out that there are Negro units in Great Britain, Ireland, North and West Africa (including Liberia), Australia, New Guinea, Hawaii, Alaska and the West Indies.

Rumors that Negroes were not being inducted into the Army in comparable percentages have been circulated in various sections of the country, OWI declared.

Bureau of Selective Service statistics reveal that in the Southern states on October 31, 1942, Negroes constituted 38.4 of all Selective Service inductions in Louisiana; 34.5 percent of all similar inductions in Florida, 34.8 percent in Alabama, 27.8 percent in North Carolina, 27.2 percent in Virginia, 19.4 percent in Texas, 19.1 in Maryland, 9.1 percent in Kentucky and 7.2 percent in West Virginia. In each of these states, the percentage of Negroes inducted exceeded the percentage of Negroes registered under Selective Service.

In four states, the percentage of Negro inductions either equalled the percentage of Negro registrations or closely approximated the proportion. Negroes constituted 44.2 percent of all Selective Service inductions in Mississippi, 34.0 percent of all similar induction in South Carolina, 32.5 percent in Georgia, 21.3 percent in Arkansas, and 18.5 percent in Tennessee.

Discusing the high percentage of Negro volunteers during the first year of Selective Service, the Director of that agency declared in an official report to President Roosevelt:

"One state with a large Negro population over a period of several months filled every call made upon it for Negro selectees by volunteers. In large sections of other states also this has been true. The Negro has availed himself as freely as possible under the conditions to volunteer for service in the armed forces."

The Los Angeles League of Women Voters is holding a meeting at 3 p. m. on Sunday afternoon, January 10th, at the Woodlawn branch of the YWCA. A number of prominent women in the neighborhood have been invited to come and talk over the possibility of organizing a unit of the league in the southeast part of the city.

The League of Women Voters has been working in Los Angeles, educating women in their civic responsibilities, ever since women were given the vote. Recently, due to the difficulties of transportation etc., the league has been establishing units in different parts of the city. These units are closely integrated with the central board on which they have representation.

The Los Angeles League is a member of the California League, which in turn is a member of the National League of Women Voters. It is strictly non-partisan and non-sectarian. Efforts are being made to contact as many groups as possible, so as to have this unit thoroughly representative of the district.

Production and Service Awards to Insurance Agents

A year of war that has taken its toll of company personnel and raided the family ranks of employees failed to blackout the Christmas spirit that has prevailed at the Golden State Mutual Life Insurance company for 17 Yuletide seasons.

Although the Christmas tree was missing and many out-of-the-city employes could not attend because of gasoline rationing, the Christmas table was piled high with gifts and there was singing and merry-making by all present at the annual Day-Before-Christmas celebration held last Thursday.

Following the customary procedure the insurance company announced the winners of Monarch club and Torch Bearer awards, gold pins presented each year with cash bonuses to members of the agency department who maintained excellent production and service records. The home office and clerical staffs had previously been presented with bonuses attached to their pay checks.

Twenty-one members of the field forces qualified for Monarch and Torch Bearer awards.

Monarch award denotes excellence in the monthly department while the Torch Bearer award symbolizes over average production in the ordinary department.

John Curry

San Mateo Woman Selected for WAAC Officer Training

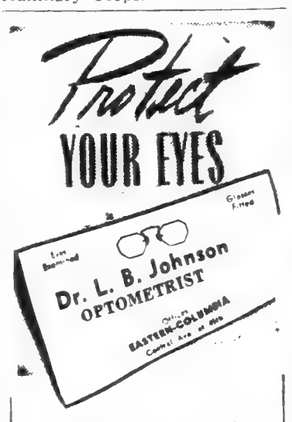
FORT DES MOINES, Iowa—Helen Louise Cox of San Mateo, Calif., is one of three Negro members of the Women's Army Auxiliary Corps who have been selected this week from the ranks of the Corps to attend Officer Candidate School at the First WAAC Training Center at Fort Des Moines.

Auxiliary Cox was selected for the thirteenth officer candidate class immediately after the completion of her basic training in the WAAC. Leadership, qualities, attention to duty, and ability are requisites for the selection for this honor.

Officer candidates take an intensive eight-week course that leads to a commission, for successful candidates, as a Third Officer in the WAAC. All Auxiliaries in the Corps have an equal opportunity to qualify for officer candidate classes, and all members of the classes have an opportunity to demonstrate their ability in competition with others.

Officers in the WAAC have much the same function as those in the army, being responsible for training and administering the affairs of their companies, who are working to release soldiers from non-combat Army jobs.

Officer Candidate Cox made her home in San Mateo with her brother, Harry Webster Cox, at 1 South Fremont Street. He was a Captain in the first World War and received his commission in the Cavalry at Fort Des Moines in 1917. Later he served overseas.



She was an auditor in the Quartermaster Corps at the San Francisco Port of Embarkation before joining the WAAC, and has a nephew, Lt. Harry L. Cox, in the Infantry.

An honor student throughout her school years, Auxiliary Cox won a silver medal for scholarship while attending grade school. She was graduated from San Mateo High School and Junior College and received her B. A. degree from San Francisco State College. She took post-graduate work in education at San Francisco State College and later attended the Merritt Business School in Oakland.

Auxiliary Cox belongs to Alpha Nu Omega chapter of Alpha Kappa Alpha sorority, Delta Sigma Nu sorority, Junior Council of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, YWCA, and the Nursery School Teachers of California.

She is a talented pianist, pipe organist, and singer, and speaks German, Spanish and Latin. She formerly appeared as soloist and with a vocal quartet over the NBC in San Francisco and Los Angeles. She was personnel clerk of the Linden Branch YWCA, in Oakland, and also was an assistant teacher for San Francisco government nursery schools. Prior to enrollment in the WAAC she was an interviewer in the American Red Cross Disaster Relief Committee.

"The impetus which prompted my joining the WAAC," she explained, "was the realization of a need for service to be rendered our country. Realizing there was an opportunity for serving that which serves me, I wanted to join the Corps. The concise, complete and intensive training which we as WAAC members receive and need is evidenced that the present need of women for active participation in the war is being met ably by the Women's Army Auxiliary Corps."

1000 Service Men Enjoy Yule Musical Comedy at Oakland USO

Under the auspices of the USO of Oakland, the boys at Camp John T. Knight, Port of Oakland, started their Christmas festivities on Friday night before Christmas, when they were entertained by a group of servicemen from a neighboring camp, called Pick and Packs. Over a thousand men enjoyed the musical comedy which they brought. After the show the boys danced to the strains of an orchestra assembled among the boys of the camp. Everybody had a swell time. It was the last show for the boys at the Camp, for they were leaving Oakland the next morning in furtherance of their military obligations. "Gee," said one of the men, "we certainly hate to leave Oakland. The people have been so good to us. They have made us feel that we were among friends. I say friends, for no one but friends would have been so nice to us. I am sure that all the boys feel the way that I do. The many good people of Oakland will never be forgotten by the boys of Camp Knight."

On Sunday night, continuing its holiday program, the USO presented the one and only Henry Starr, entertainer of radio fame, at the Club House, 1651 Adeline Street, Oakland. Amid the blinking lights of the huge Christmas tree hundreds of men and hostesses listened to Mr. Starr sing "White Christmas". There were many moist eyes in the crowd. He was called back time after time, finally ending up by all singing, "Hail! Hail! The Gang's All Here." After the entertainment a real jam session was had until closing time.

During the Christmas week the club maintained open house. Hundreds of men were given useful Christmas gifts, including the usual Christmas candies and goodies.

Thousands of sheets of Christmas stationery were distributed, packages were wrapped and mailed for the boys, Christmas dinners were provided in the homes of many Oaklandites, and a bevy of social affairs were provided for the men. The club arranged for an early Christmas service, at which many of the men attended at the Beth Eden Baptist Church, 10th and Magnolia St., Oakland.

"Oakland," said the Director, Jame C. Thomas, "has responded magnificantly to the requests of the club for gifts and volunteer services. Recently we have received several beautiful and useful pieces of furniture, musical instruments, books and magazines, cookies and refreshments. The volunteer committees are on the job, and are rendering a fine patriotic service. The local Post of the American Legion has taken a fine attitude towards the program of the club. It is supplying subscriptions to several national weeklies and is contemplating a program of unusual significance to the club. Some friends have asked what we need. There are so many things that can make the boys happy in the club, but we have had a number of requests for the recently published ix volumes of Carl Sanborn's Abraham Lincoln. We believe the lesson which the Great Abraham Lincoln taught of the Christian virtue of humility and the ability to lose ones self in a higher loyalty to God and Nation, will be worth many times any sacrifice that might be made to get this work into the hands of those who are hungering for it.

The story of the week:

A wife boarded the train at Newark, N. J. on Thursday night, a week before Christmas. She had all her belongings, a suit case and a paper bag filled with something to eat. On Tuesday morning six days later she arrived at Oakland, intending to reach her husband who is stationed at Camp Knight. Somebody sent her to San Francisco. The Red Cross found him at Camp Knight. They directed her to Camp Knight. She landed in Berkeley miles away from Camp Knight. It was raining harder than she had ever seen it rain. There she stood at the end of the car line, thousands of miles away from home, bewildered. Someone directed her to the camp. She went there and found that her husband was out on a detail. A sergeant gave her a key which he said her husband had left for her; that she was to go to the hospitality house, and wait for him. They sent her away from the camp to the USO in Oakland, which was originally called the Hospitality House. She came to the USO in Oakland and told her story to someone who told her she was in the wrong place. She started out into the rain again, crying to break her heart. We brought her back, and after comforting her, and doing a little telephoning we found that she should have gone to the Hostess House at the Camp. They had been expecting her. We took her in the club's car to the camp, and turned her over to the hostess in charge. We told of her difficulties, as we were leaving, we heard the hostess say, "Oh my dear girl, you must be tired and hungry. Come with me and we'll fix you a hot bath, and put you to bed." And that is where we left. Perhaps there is a happier soldier in Camp Knight tonight.

Friends do not forget that the USO is your club as well as that of the Servicemen. Come in and give the fellows a helping hand, won't you?

Delta Club Pays Tribute to Mrs. Lula Asbury

A tribute to the memory of a well loved member, Mrs. Lula Asbury, from Mothers and Sponsors Club of Delta Sigma Theta Sorority.

As time passes on, and the first harp pangs of grief begin to dull, we shall look back over the long years of association with our departed co-worker and many loving memories of her will be fixed in our minds. We shall love to remember that it was she who brought to us "Our Club Creed."

"A little more kindness, a little less creed,
A little more giving ,a little less greed.
A little more smile, a little less frown,
A little less kicking a man when he's down.
A little more 'we', a little less 'I'.
A little more laugh, a little less cry.
A few more flowers on the pathway of life,
And fewer on graves at the end of the strife."

She brought these beautiful sentiments to us, and our club adopted the poem as our club creed after she had explained what a solid foundation they were upon which to build our club life and how harmoniously one's life could be lived once these precepts were put into active use in our daily lives.

We shall love to remember the very valuable part she played in our club life, her regularity in attendance, her active participation in every phase of our club program, her sunny disposition, her optimistic outlook upon life. Because of her cultural and educational background, she had much of interest to give, and she gave freely of her abundance. She read and studied the beautiful things in art and literature, as well as the important events in current affairs, and her gleanings were brought back to the club to be discussed and shared by its members.

We shall love to remember her sheer joy of living—the brightness and happiness that she shed about her—the richness and sweetness with which she ripened—her willingness to sacrifice for the good of others—her unselfish interest in those less fortunate ones—her tender understanding of the frailties of the weak, and her lack of self righteousness toward those who had sinned—her sweet simplicity and naturalness, completely void of deceit or guile and her deep devotion to Christ's teachings, proclaimed not loudly from the house tops, but lived devoutly and sincerely in the simple duties of her daily life.

But most of all, we shall love to remember the beauty and serenity of her home life--an ideal life in our community. Two daughters were left her to brighten and cheer her life. Both were equally loving and devoted, both making their mother's happiness their first consideration.

But one daughter lived with her mother, and for her mother, and through her mother, and a rarely beautiful thing was this daughter's devotion. Like a fragile bit of precious parcelain, or a rare bit of priceles old lace was this mother, something to be handled carefully and sheltered and spoiled and loved—And how thoroughly this was done by this daughter. Her clothing was carefully planned and selected with regard to color and texture to bring out the soft loveliness of the mother's face and form. She supplied for this mother all the comforts of a well appointed home--shielded her from every care and worry--and surrounded her with the beautiful things her cultured tastes so enjoyed. She shared with her mother every phase of her own life, her work, her studies, her problems, her ambitions, her friends and her pleasures. She gave to her mother the most beautifully unselfish thi smother, receiving so much devotion and companionship, and reflected these blessings in her own life, and passed on to others some of the happiness that she knew.

A beautiful life has passed into the great beyond, but so well has she lived that even after many years, the goodness of her, the kindliness of her, the sweetness of her will linger on to cheer and bless and brighten the hearts and lives of mankind.

May she rest in beauty and peace.

St. Paul Baptist Church Marches on Under Banner of Holy Ghost

PASTOR WILLIAMS

At this time St. Paul is in the throes of a great soul-saving campaign. Last Sunday was the biggest day we've had for the year 1942 numerically speaking. The spirit was high and a great Christian fervor captivated the people; however, we had only eleven accessions and the financial status was not as high as it has been, only $203.15.

Pastor Williams is inviting 2500 people to be present Thursday, New Year's Eve at 7:30 o'clock promptly to hear his annual message on the subject, prayer; also our annual meeting and buffet lunch will be included.

Because of the unusuality and the fac tthat his message is divinely inspired it will be recapitulated Sunday night, January 3, at 7:30 p. m.

Rev. S. A. Williams, pastor; Josephine Jordan, assistant reporter.

Hold Chauffeur-Janitor on Felony Charge

Johnnie W. Brown, chauffeur-janitor employed at the Patrician Apartments, 226 S. Berendo St. has been held to answer on a felony charge of hit and run driving upon the complaint of Mrs. Bessie Bergman of 320 S. Berendo, who complains that on the night of Dec. 16th she was run down and severely injured at the corner of 3rd and Berendo Streets by Brown who did not stop and give her any assistance, but speeded on his way.

I nall six witnesses took the stand for the prosecution, but after severe cross-examination by Attorney Curtis C. Taylor representing Brown they all failed to identify him as the driver of the car. However, police officer Bound of the Figueroa Street Traffic Detail testified that in a conversation with Brown at the police station Brown admitted that he had been driving the car on the night of the accident, but maintained that he did not run down Mrs. Bergman

Attorney Taylor did not allow his client to take the stand, but told reporters after the trial that he had an iron-clad alibi defense for his client when the matter comes up for trial.

Brown was ordered to appear in Dept. 43 of the Superior Court on January 15th.

STORIES CONFLICT ON VALLEJO RIOT CAUSE

Teach, 18, were arrested. Special detachments of shore patrolmen and police finally quelled the trouble by ordering all sailors back to their ships

It was reported that the battle broke out again tonight when the Negro sailors gathered in the Knotty Pines bar

At 9:45 p. m. tonight, after the first flurries had been subdued, another riot call was turned in by Vallejo police at the Knotty Pines.

Police dispatched squads to the intersections of Sonoma and York streets, Vallejo and Santa Clara streets six blocks away and Sonoma and Georgia streets. A few minutes later, calls for reinforcements were sent out over police radio.

Police refused to comment except to say, "It looks bad."

Earlier Adm. W. L. Fridell, commandant of Mare Island navy yard, denied there had been a riot in Vallejo Saturday night between United States marines, civilians and Negro sailors.

Despite Fridell's statement, it was reported from other sources and partially confirmed by Vallejo police that more than 75 persons had engaged in widespread street fighting on Georgia street, Vallejo's main thoroughfare Saturday night.

New Banking Service Now Available

J. G. MAULHARDT

A new banking service designed for wage earners, salaried workers and others who have only a limited use for a checking account is now available in Los Angeles, according to J. G. Maulhardt, vice president of Market & Produce office of California Bank.

Under the new plan, a small fee is charged at the time the check book is issued (10 checks for $1) and all regular monthly service charges are eliminated. Thus, if no checks are written during the course of a month or longer, the account is carried by the bank at no cost to the depositor.

The special checking accounts may be opened in any amount from a dollar upward and checks issued at any time for the entire amount without discontinuing the account. All transactions in connection with the account may be handled by mail, doing away with the necessity of making frequent trips to the bank.

It was pointed out that with the volume of pay roll checks issued weekly in this area now reaching staggering proportions, the special checking account service should do much to ease the strain on the supply of coins and currency as well as to cut down the amount of travel now required to pay bills with cash.

In addition it is expected that widespread use of the special checking account service will tend to discourage the thoughtless spending frequently indulged in by those who formerly carried their pay in their pockets cates, you have taken the protest directly to the producing company."

Mellett's statement was in response to protest sent to Elmer Davis, director of the Office of War Information last week, and signed by Dr. Reddick and George B. Murphy, jr., administrative secretary of the National Negro Congress, on behalf of representatives of nineteen Negro and white organizations and newspapers who witnessed a special MGM preview of the film here December 14.

Congress officials pointed out that Mellett's failure to forward the protest to MGM through his own office, despite the fact that other protests went direct to Howard Dietz, of MGM, constitutes what amounts to out-and-out approval of the picture.

Mellett' statement, they said is also at variance with the action of the OWI in stopping further distribution of the infamous "Birth of a Nation", and its action in stopping MGM's picturization of Rudyard Kipling's "Kim", which treats of the poet's application of the white supremacy theory to India.

According to a story appearing in the New York Times, Sunday December 20, the Office of War Information made it clear that the picture could in no way contribute to the unity between peoples of the United Nations fighting this People's War.

According to the Times' story, "When the picture was virtually ready for the cameras earlier in the season, a script was submitted to the OWI and the OWI explained that a restatement of Kipling's philosophy of white supremacy in India could hardly be more untimely."

Representatives of the nineteen protesting organizations are expected to act on the Mellett Letter sometime next week.

Our bravest and best lessons are not learned through success, but through misadventure.—A. Bronson Alcott.

★ Bill Smallwood

I remember sitting on a rock at dusk
Looking broodingly out to sea
As waves crashed high around me . . .
A sudden flash of white wings--you looked into my startled eyes--
I bent forward to embrace you, but alas,
My ebony horns, catching twilite's glow, blinded you
And, angel-like, you flew away . . .
Waves crash still around my foam-flecked rock
And I brood at dusk--you, mightier than I!

Its been quite a long time . . . since . . . the sudden passing of a friend has so profoundly saddened me . . . as the shocking death of John Borican, back in Jersey . . . somehow we will never be able to really be convinced our fun-loving, likeable chum has hung up his track shoes and jog-trotted off on Another Track . . . the cups, medals, placques, etc. the Judge of that Other Track will give John will equal that array he left behind . . . an artist of repute, a scholar, a gentleman, a darn swell guy--goodbye, chum! . . . we'll miss you . . .

Alice Gilmore is hospitalized . . . Betty Scott (Jim) and Dorothy Metoyer (Solly) are singin' "He's 1A In The Army, He's A1 In My Heart" . . . Martin Hewlett is home 'til Tuskegee 99th Pursuit) gives him the go-signal . . . We're just hearing Herman Hill will be a papa! . . . The Art Tatums have bought a Westside place . . . Kay Wilson Robinson has joined her hubby in Mo. . . . Noble Sissle has his kit bags at the Harold Brownings . . . Godmothers Guild had a Xmas party Satd. nite . . . One of the most beautiful (an' toothsome) tables 'twas our privilege to encircle and attack during the Yuletide sessions was that masterpiece at the Satd. nite supper party given by capable Lucille Davis and her hubby, at their well-appointed place over on W. 28th (that naborhood has always been a fashionable Rue D'Or!) A houseful of festive folk--that, alone, is perfect foundation for a bright party. So was the Davis affair . . Later, swingin' and huggin' (holiday presumption, ya know!) and gigglin' with the intimate crowd at the Xmas party given by the Antique Arts Reunion, there, with Thelma Price, who never looked lovelier or was more happy to be home. She popped in the party for a few moments with always-striking Stella Lane, equally pretty Bernice Strange (gosh, havent seen Bernice and her hubby in moons!), all on the dependable arm of Cortez Strange. They'd been over to the December Club affair--the Dec. Club bids become more glamorous each year. Much later, over to Everett and Lela Walsh's cozy place for a round of morningcaps, thus meeting some of the chaps from Sissle's band.

The Frank Smiths (Marie Fielder) were Xmas morn breakfast hosts, and have assigned this dept. to the doghouse for oversleeping the date . . . ah, me . . . Walter Gaffney, who NY still recalls as a host of hosts in the good ole days, was Sund. nite egg nogg host . . . Iola and Marvin Johnson return from their NY trip within a fortnite or so . . . Delightful preholiday incident (I say incident, for 'twas no large-order affair), touching champagne glasses and carving a fine steak with Dorothy and Hezz Howard, thus observing their anniversary, family-style. Few lovelier or more competent hostesses in the entire village than Dorothy, and Hezz beams and beams . . . Have you been out to Hatfield Galleries to see the discussed George Farmer exhibit of ceramics? Jimmy Kelly (he sat in on that highly enjoyable discussion of life, love, politics and beige) folk a handful of us pow-wowed thru the nite at Rita Christiani's. Xmas Eve) has made arrangements for the exhibits to be seen at the Vernon Library. later . . . Luvercha Bray's Sund. nite party was another holiday highlight. A midnite supper fit for a king was grand climax, so help me . . . . gay evening.

As you probably know by this date, Sunday's social red-circle goes around the wedding reception of Rhetta Jean Boswell and Dr. Joseph Mitchell (he's a medico stationed at Huachuca) at the Boswell resident on San Pedro. 'Twill be an important event . . . and if Rhetta doesnt make a radiant bride, we'll miss our guess . . . doing the hours of hooray in "Chi with the gang none of us could ever get Rhetta to admit such future plans. Now that it's to be, Thelma Price and I surely wish the rest of the kids could be here for Sunday so we all could stand in a I-told-you-so circle . . heh! . . . Thelma and Rhetta shared a bachelor girls apt. on So. Pkwy . . .

The Wilbert Galbraiths poured egg nogg Xmas day as is their annual custom . . Edna Jamison, of Chi, is houseguest of the senior Celestus Kings. Her hubby, Dr. Clarence Jamison, is at Huachuca . . . Antique Arts take over the USO Center for the nite of Jan. 10th . . . Plans for the Jan. 17th fashion show of Independent Church are bubblin' right along. They plan all sorts of novel touches, I'm told. Of it, more anon . . . 'Twas Ernest Anderson, in town for a wk. from camp, who was the center of all the attention and hubbub at Hollywood Canteen t'other nite. Bette Davis gave him a pup for a camp mascot, and all the flashlight bulbs in Hollywood went off. Newsreel men were there, and all such doin's. They say Ernie looks splendid, and is reassured almost weekly by the powers that (always) be that his interrupted film career awaits his return. I'm sorry I didnt get a chance to say howdy to Ernie . . . Sund. nite 'twas Eddie Beale and the Swanne Inn gang who upset the Canteen with rhythm biz . . . Canteen nites really come on, me hearties . . . and our girls deserve a loud booray for their part in it. Tiny Cadrez (don't you think she and Anne Reed lookalike?) is doing a crack job of pitchin' in out there.

Calvin Jackson is on the verge of making the rounds of real estate agents. The gleam behind it all isnt altogether our climate, either! . . . The new YMCA sec'y arrives on Febr. 1st . . . Joan Black-Creecy, who will make a dashing divorcee, will be in town from Oakland for her birthday next month . . . Gladys "Boo" Dent will probably transfer her job down here from Sacramento very soon. A member of up no'th cafe society in good standing, nevertheless Gladys misses ole LA. She'll be the only tan tone person in her dept., here . . . . Certainly must make a bee-line to gab and ice-cube-tinkle with Edna Dever McPherson. She and her hubby have taken a Westside place . . . Did you know Langston Hughes was in a train wreck recently? . . . Gene Henderson is a benedict, living up No'th . . . Jewel Pavageau has been ill, we hear . . . Where on earth are Helen and Fred Toney keeping themselves of late?

Aside to the Roy Birds: Mostly here! Hi ya?

Passing thought: Haroldine Brownning would make a good deb society scribbler . . Havent seen Edith Spencer in months! . . Dontcha miss the thrill of hearing the bugle at Santa Anita, taking in the panorama of flowers, and looking up at the nearby mts? . . . Wonder what Burr Singer has done with her palette, of late? We still vividly recall the nobility in her oils we viewed at the library exhibit last season . . . and I wonder what Helen Chappell Smith has done with her poetry, of late . . . and I wonder if Verna Hickman still gets so much fun outve reading aloud snatches of "Mehitabel and Archy?" . . . We met Ruth Stewart recently, and know no one who reminds us SO much of Janet Collins than she! Startling . . . and she loves the ballet, as well . . .

An' now pass the tomato juice, please . . .

Eastside USO Club Spreads Xmas Cheer for Many Soldiers

Dreams of a White Christmas came true for the crowds of soldiers who visited the Eastside USO Club Xmas day. Canteen workers, Mesdames Bessie Shaw, Ruth Kimbrough, Capitola Green and Mrs. Faulkner, Supervised by Mrs. Ethel Atkinson, excelled all previous efforts in serving the men a complete turkey dinner with all the trimmings and an abundance of sorted cake, including fruit cake, as well as chocolate and plain cake.

Festivities, without a break, extended into the evening, when long tables laden with beautifully wrapped gifts for the men, were set up in the gymnasium of the YMCA by hostesses including Miss Lucille Jenkins, Mesdames Josephine Brown and Soares.

Large red paper-mache boots filled with candy were stacked in the form of a huge fire-place to be given to the girls.

From 8 to 12 p. m., joy reigned supreme. Beginning with a gala floor show, Miss Rosalia Saffold acting as M. C. and producer. A startling array of talent developed from the ranks of Junior Hostesses and soldiers alike. Miss Evelyn (Hot Shot) Burwell, entertainer par excellence ,presided at the piano as accompanist and as a singer of songs "the soldiers like." Junior Hostesses carrying the torch in song were: Elweise James and Maudie Bilbrew. Miss Doris Garrison (slender, tender and tall) pleased her audience with professional tap dancing that rivaled Bill Robinson.

Sgts. Stone and Hughes with Miss Marilyn Warren in uniform, gave their version of "pushing sand" to hand claps of the soldiers' buddies. Modella Bass, a modernistic danseuse, captivated her audience with two original dances.

The spotlights were in full blast when "Queenie" the unknown, performed her burlesque strip-tease; the unveiling revealed the staff secretary, Mrs. Evelyn Warren. Corporal Ernest Richardson, held his audience spell-bound with his torrid "Honey Suckle Rose". An unknown soldier gave vent to his feelings by tapping out a tune or so.

Standing room was at a premium. Nevertheless, chairs were moved back and the large floor cleared for dancing. During the dancing, cigarettes were passed by cigarette girls, Thelma Alexis and Nellie Goolsby in colorful costumes.

Cigarettes for the evening were donated by Col. James M. Beck Post No. 2651, Mrs. Marie Reed, president, and accompanying her were Mesdames Callie Mann and Elmira Moorhead.

Interesting remarks made by soldiers during the evening: "Gee, this was really swell"; "Wait till I write home"; "This is a real Xmas".

Orchid of Merit to Lloyd Thomas, assistant director, who was the handy-man of the hour. The dance ended at midnight with playing of the Star Spangled Banner.

Other groups participating in the Xmas festivities and donations were: The Golden West Bridge Association, Mrs. Agnes Beal, president; Alpha Kappa Alpha Sorority, Colored Graduate Nurses' Association; G. W. Wickliffe Unit WPSC, the Catholic Woman's Council, supervised by Mrs. Eddie Atkinson, jr. and Mrs. Josephine Brown, which group was also responsible for Sunday afternoon Canteen service.

Special mention goes to Mrs. W. H. Roan and Lucille Jenkins for purchasing and wrapping large numbers of packages of gifts; the George Harnetts for decorations, Doris Garrison, Ramsey Candy Co., Mesdames Yolande Stovall, Hebe Mack Robinson, Ida Ellis, Minnie Faraira-Mae Oliver, Vertner L. Gordon, Jennie Graham, Joe Hawkins and Hattie Mash.

Race Track GOSSIP

By Jay Gould

The three glamour girls this week are Irene Walton, Sybil Lewis and Mrs. Billie Starr.

The three best dressed women this week are Mrs. Cornelius Clipper, Mrs. Emma Middleton and Mrs. Lillian Robertson.

Northern California will have a representative newspaper soon when the Pacific Journal makes its appearance.

Bay Meadows has faded out until the 20th of February and then the meeting will swing into action for at least three months or possibly five as Bill Kyne's track will be the only one allowed to run in California.

Louise, the very pretty brown-skin girl who gave John (Mustard) Arnold, the bartender at Jack's, the gate, threw the hinges, lock and key at him, saying "Get yourself another girl, I'm no show stripper."

Who was that pretty making the race track and all of the night spots with Henry Randall and Ruth Scaggs? I believe she's from Honolulu.

Hortense Reed, the girl with the gold tooth smile, and Ernest Gabriel ringside all big events.

Rose Foster, owner of the Rose-dolph hotel, who went all the way to Detroit to outfit her hotel with new furniture and Maurice McGavock, the seaman, have hearts that throb for each other. The torch they carry will never burn itself out. Won't somebody be happy when he will arrive home from that ocean liner from Australia.

Wonder if Jewell Washington of 1716 Webster street, who took a trip to Pasadena to visit her mother and friends, just returned in time as her husband was all set to go places and do things with Miss Oh-What's-Her-Name.

See Ruth Whitfield's ex-boy friend has shifted from a Cadillac to a Plymouth. I wonder why? This info came from Ruth

I see Novell Hayden and Lane James doing the spots and bright lights before James leaves for the Army.

There are always some fellows doing someone else a good turn. Hank Burr has been rounding the gang to send a large autographed card signed by all of them to a pal who can use it. Good going, Frank.

Loretta Scott with her nails nicely polished, her hair in beautiful waves, exhibiting peach colored stockings while sipping mixed drinks at the Alabam.

After 3 months the Club Alabam finally got a faucet and paper for the men's room so you can now wash your hands.

Mr. and Mrs. Victor Francis, Oakland, can be seen at the race track, dances and fights. Lovely couple.

This writer is just warning some of you married men to try and get along with your wives. Please her if possible. In case you push her around she might report it to the Draft Board then in the Army you will go.

You late-spot owners take a tip from this writer. Since the 12 o'clock closing law went into effect, you must have all the glasses and bottles off the bar and tables at midnight as the Federal men are always around. To avoid trouble take my tip

Jim Roberts spotted with a bunch dining in his own night club with Mrs. Kay Grant, Mrs. Bea Roberts and Mrs. Gert Maxwell having a swell time.

When you don't see the reguar playboys and friends around, don't worry as they are either in the Army or helping Uncle Sam out of his jam including Black Dot McGee, Harry Bigelow, Bernie Bane, Arthur George, Quincy Ford, Johnny Baben, Small Black, Artie Graves and Max Pinckston who prefer the shipyards and the waterfronts.

Jumbo, the sport and playboy and his pretty wife out doing the late spots with everybody talking about how nice and sweet she looked.

The boys in camp at the Presidio, California, get the best break of anyone I know. They have swell living apartments and are tickled pink that they are there.

Bobbie Bell, dressed like the Dapper an of Broadway, carrying a bale of $100 bills in his pocket with no strings tied to them.

The most courteous waitresses and bartenders on the Pacific Coast are in 'Frisco as they handle the patrons with kid gloves.

Betty Lou, Peggy Armstrong, Margaret Dotson, Genevieve Friend, Ray Boughnight and Little Mamma missing the fights and have slowed down. They must be broke.

You just have to give it to Nathan Roberts of juke-box fame and his wife for having a good time when out and laying the cash on the line.

See since John A. Burton went to the cleaners for $900 he has cut out from the auditorium for a while in Oakland and is using the Savoy Ballroom for his local bands with big names. His Xmas dance at Sweet's Ballroom, Oakland featuring Harlan Leonard's Kansas City Rockets was one hundred percent. He packed them in from the roof to the sidewalk.

Marie Bryant, Judy Carol, Suzette Johnson, Artie Brandon, Lucy Battle, Ethlyne Stevenson, Dorothy Dandridge and Patsy Hunter, are in big demand in Hollywood.

The Golden State Insurance Co. of Los Angeles and Earl Carroll of Hollywood picks up on the most beautiful girls in the world. Some pretties.

Lena Horne, now featured in the Savoy Plaza's (New York) Lounge has lived up to this writer's predictions that she was tops.

Mrs. Myrtle Rector entertained numerous friends Xmas day with a very delightful egg nogg party at her residence.

Mrs. Nell Snow in San Francisco en route to Eureka to visit friends for the holidays, buying a drink for every tick of the clock at every night club.

Frank Bass and wife were ringsiding the Armstrong fight.

Miss Darlene Taylor and Mrs. Tillie McCovy making the rounds at night spots having a gay time. Miss Taylor just returned from Honolulu.

The greatest little champ in San Francisco is Baby Donald Compton with a lot of admirers and a host of friends. Dig his clothes.

Joe Stokes of Los Angeles was seen playing the spots in 'Frisco and having a nice time.

I guess that Rosa Henderson, one of the ace employees of Kid North, didn't care so much as he gave her the gate, saying "You are through at Bay Meadows."

Mrs. Geneva Banks is sending this paper to her husband over seas. She is also buying bonds to help fight the Japs.

Melvin Priestly and Olive Dawson seen at the fights with Jay Gould and greeting friends of the Kirkland hotel.

Juanita Pinkston dropped into San Francisco from Salinas. Very pretty, very swank and very well heeled with all kinds of money.

Among the pleasure seekers at the Town Club were W. M. Gibbons, just in 'Frisco from points East, not via the S. S. Coolidge (he left on that ship) and Mr. Fred Hill along with John Daudson and Michael Madison.

Bernice Jacobs, 1872 Sutter St., is seen around town during the gay hours of the night.

Saunders King now begins his evening performance downtown at the Backstage at 5 p. m. for which he wrote a ditty "Five O'clock Drag".

Mrs. Madeline Withers, formerly Madeline Hunt of Los Angeles, wife of Frank Withers, from Los Angeles. Mr. Withers is a flangerjourneyman at Richmond Shipyard No. 2 while Mrs. Withers is a welder at Moore Drydock Co., in Oakland. The Withers, with their children, Frank, Jr., Frances and Shirline are making their home at present in San Francisco. Mrs. Withers is a graduate of Samuel Houston College and a member of Delta Sigma Sorority.

Thelma Thomas and Elizabeth Booker busy sending away Xmas presents and cards all over the world.

Charles Walton and party at the Club Alabam.

Aaron (Little Tiger) Wade, Louis Verett and Vernon Brown present Ben Watkin's band for their New Year's Eve dance at the Pacific Hall.

Bernie Roberts in the Club Alabam knockin' herself out with friends.

Cactus went to New York with $4,000 and in six months he was ready to take the cut out back to the cactus in Arizona. Poor boob.

Beulah Bryant on way to Reno to be billed as the top star at Reno's Dog House. She is just on the coast from New York.

Ilene Charles having a gay time at the Town Club.

Irene and Eddie Edwards, Cordelia and Teddy Hopkins, plus Hope and Rooster Thornton were really knocking themselves out at the Alabam t'other night.

Wonder what happened to Prentice Del Lantis and his fine fly chicks?

Why does the waitress call Vincent Romeo? She doesn't assume she is Juliet by any means, does she?

Thelma Mason is playing hard down in the mid-city.

Brownie, the bartender at Club Alabam, donated $5 for the Xmas fund while at the Armstrong fight. Good going, Brownie.

Little Sights and wife from Detroit, Mich. were at the ringside of the Armstrong bout and are taking their mail at 1612 Baker Street, 'Frisco.

Additional personages seen at the Xmas Fund Boxing show: Big Tex and wife Ann, Oakland, Clyde Dorsey, Calvin Vincent, Ernest Gabriel, Hortense Reed and Pat Patterson.

Wendell Anderson, Windy to you, is ankling in and out of the night clubs in 'Frisco.

Ruby Barber, 1622 Buchanan Street, give me a ring at WAlnut 9974.

Vivian Jones, Los Angeles and Thelma Bradshaw of San Francisco seen in and out of all the spots in 'Frisco.

Eldorado Raye Mitchell was in Seattle, Wash. for five months and is now going to Los Angeles to visit her husband, Mr. Gaines Niles, jr.

Thou shalt have no other gods before me.—Exodus 20:1.

We hope that everyone has enjoyed a bountiful and very merry Christmas and wish you a very Happy New Year. Again we wish to emphasize the necessity of stopping for a moment and to fully realize the crisis through which we are now passing. While we are now enjoying a short respite from economic chaos perilous days lie ahead.

It has been a very convenient alibi to lay all of our economic troubles at the door of big industry. If we are to find a permanent solution to our economic problems the minds of the people themselves must change. Under our present monetary system there is little difference between the aspirations of labor and capital. The only difference lies in the inability of most individuals to acquire certain monopoli This fact is definitely be proven in the war effort. Today most people are interested in enhancing their nest eggs and not reducing the length of the war through full cooperation.

This is a democracy in spite of what anyone may say. When the people speak loud enough and public indignation is strong enough they are heard. As long as the American people continue to worship the golden calf there will be no change in the present state of affairs. The people themselves must change their mental attitude before our present system changes. Fellowship of men and the right of every individual to live a normal life are the most important factors. Money is elusive and does not constitute real security. Money never has and never will buy the finer things in life.

Christmas, 1942, is now history and indeed it has been history making in the Los Angeles Post Office Department. Never has there been such a representative group of all peoples from all parts of the country working in perfect harmony. War is a horrible thing and we all detest it, but as President Lincoln has said, "That these men shall not have died in vain." We stop for a moment to wonder why man's heart is so hard that he has to be driven to do what he should have done before. Both the motor vehicle division and working floor of the mailing section of the terminal annex used Negro temporary foremen this Christmas. As the song says, "Why can't we do this more often?" The union terminal used four Negro cutters to separate and dispatch mail. Yours truly was one of the cutters. The crews with which we worked were from all over—Okies, Hillbillies, and deep in the heart of anywhere. We never heard of any trouble and sometimes yours truly had as many as 32 working under him. Believe it or not nothing is impossible if it has to be done.

We are glad to hear that Moon Mullins and Walter Eckles have been certified as Post Office carriers and wish them the best. It was with a great deal of pleasure we received the news that Walter Jackson had been promoted to custom guard. He really deserves anything that might come his way. Joe Freeman had to take back the drapes and pipe he bought and exchange them for a dress and compact, but his chest is poked just the same when he tells us how the baby is growing.

We are waiting for the comptroller general's ruling on S. J. R. 170. Let us hope he will not throw a wrench into the works. The resolution will be retroactive from Dec. 1, 1942 and will expire April 30, 1943. We hope by that time all organizations will have gotten together and drafted a constructive bill which will have a balanced equation.

A Happy New Year to everyone.

NYA Girl Trainees Get War Jobs

The increased employment of women in war industries has accelerated the training of Negro girls on NYA war production training projects throughout the country, the National Youth Administration announced here this week.

As a result of steadily rising placements, Negro girls are now being trained by NYA in machine shop practice, aircraft sheet metal, arc welding, gas welding, aircraft welding, foundry, forging, radio, electricity, automotive mechanics, aircraft mechanics, wood working, aircraft woodwork, mechanical drafting, industrial sewing and clerical activities.

NYA Negro girl trainees are entering war production jobs in Chicago, Ill.; Philadelphia, Pa.; New York, N. Y.; Detroit, Mich.; Hartford, Conn.; Seattle, Wash.; Columbus, O., and in various other industrial areas as a result of their recent training on NYA war production training projects.

Placements of Negro girls in the District of Columbia have been increasing monthly. A large number was employed recently in the Washington Navy Yard. During October and November, the majority of the 281 Negro youth placed from the NYA war production project in the District were female Negro trainees.

N.Y. Gets Behind Anti-Poll Tax Bill

NEW YORK, N. Y.—A city wide committee which will coordinate the forces of Labor and Negro and white people's organizations for organized action to fight for passage of a federal Anti-Poll Tax Bill in the 78th Congress, will be set up here at a conference called by the New York People's Committee for January 9 at the Abyssinian Baptist church.

Councilman A. Clayton Powell, jr. and Dr. Channing Tobias are co-chairman of the People's Committee, which includes virtually every civil, labor, social, youth, fraternal, church and educational groups in the City's five boroughs.

The conference will outline a program of action for 1943, in conformity with the Harlem Charter adopted at a huge Pearl Harbor Anniversary meeting held at the Golden Gate Ballroom Dec. 7.

Race Women's Groups Help Put Across OPA's Point-Rationing Program to Housewives

Negro women's organizations are cooperating 100 per cent in explaining the point rationing program of the Office of Price Administration to their membership, according to Mrs. Sunie Steele Warrick of the Group Services Branch, Consumer Division, OPA.

Many of these organizations sent representatives recently to an all-day conference called by Dr. J. P. Leonard of the Group Services Branch, Department of Information, OPA, at which representatives of national organizations with headquarters in the District of Columbia considered problems of point rationing, and made plans for educational programs through which the consumer might be taught how to use War Ration Book Two.

A number of the organizations followed up this conference by sending letters and OPA literature to their local units explaining the program and urging that these units take the lead in their community in helping to put over the OPA program, Mrs. Warrick said.

Attending the conference were Mrs. Thomasina W. Johnson, legislative representative of the National Non-Partisan Council on Public Affairs of the Alpha Kappa Alpha Sorority; Miss Flaxie Pinkett, representing the Delta Sigma Theta Sorority of which Mrs. Elsie Austin, president; and Mrs. Ethel Popel Shaw, corresponding secretary of the National Association of College Women.

Also cooperating in the program are Mrs. Rosina Tucker, national secretary-treasurer representing the Auxiliaries to the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, and Miss Mae Hawes, representing the National Council of Negro Women, who sent a letter to 17 member organizations urging their cooperation. Material has also been sent out to state presidents of the National Congress of Negro Parents-Teachers and to local units of the Housewives League.

The Group Services Branch of the Office of Price Adminitration will supply national, regional and state organizations with program materials to be used in work with local units, upon request.

The War Rationing program of the OPA benefits the masses of the people, assuring them a fair share of those commodities of which there is a shortage. It is therefore important that the Negro housewife be taught how to use War Ration Book Two to her best advantage, Mrs. Warrick concluded.

DON'T WORRY MOTHER —HERE'S HOW TO GET PLENTY OF MILK FOR BABY!

Many mothers have been worrying about whether or not they are going to be able to purchase enough canned milk for their babies. Safeway Stores have just completed arrangements to make certain that all infants can get the necessary amounts of this important food for their formulas. Babies are one group of citizens who would find substitutions in their diet rather difficult to accept, so we are going to be sure that they get what Doctor prescribes.

If you are finding difficulty in buying a sufficient amount of canned milk for your child, do this . . .

Ask your doctor to write a letter to the Safeway Stores Advertising Department (Box 3399 Terminal Annex, Los Angeles), stating that canned milk is needed for your baby. So that you can be sure of getting the brand and size that you favor, ask him to include information about your preference (better mention a second choice too). It is important that the address of the Safeway store near your home be given as well.

As soon as we receive the letter, instructions will be issued that will send a case of milk for your child on the next grocery load that leaves our warehouse for your Safeway store. You can call for it at your convenience, paying the regular retail price.

Southern Youth Speaks

Demanding speedy action by the President Dixie elements which sabotage his victory program and raise the threat of "secession" in the midst of the People's War, a petition to the chief executive from the Southern Negro Youth Congress this week ranks as one of the most heartening documents of recent days.

We quote a portion of the Youth Congress petition :

"It was the hope of many Americans—white and Negro, Northerners and Southerners,—that this exhibition of callous disregard for the essential unity of our nation-at-war was (by Southern Negro-baiters) merely an isolated aberration from the norm of high patriotism which characterizes the vast majority of all our citizens in every walk of life. Events have since shown that such a hope was ill-founded. The expectation that the attacks against the rights of Negro people, the flauting of federal authority, the spreading of the divisive seeds of racial friction, would cease on their own accord, has been dashed to pieces by the intensified and more bold activity of the self-styled white supremacists.

"The occurances which are listed on the reverse side of this petition and which formed the motivation of this appeal to your authorities must now be supplemented by an unnumbered series of incidents of the same character. The lynching of two Negro children and one man in the state of Mississippi ;the intimidation of and attacks upon Negro soldiers in the South, havng their ugly fruition in large-scale rioting; the "solution" of the problems of our over-burdened transportation system through increased discrimination and abuse of Negro passengers; the continued denial of training and skilled employment for Negro men and women in vital defense idustries; the shameful spectacle of an organized filibuster in the United States Senate to prevent the passage of legislation which would enable disfranchised white and Negro southerners to choose their federal representatives—all these things have occured in rapid succession under the stimulus of a campaign conducted by men who place the maintenance of the feudal, undemocratic relations which have for so long characterized the South as the "nation's number one economic problem", above the requirements of victory. These men have found ready access to the public attention through numerous organs of prestige and influence. Protected by our sacred doctrine of freedom of speech, they have used the press and the radio to further an effort whose success will endanger our victory which is a precondition for the maintenance of the four freedoms in America and throughout the world.

"But they have done even more than this. In the name of states' rights they have launched a campaign of "secession" from the policies of the Administration which have won the support of our citizenry as being essential to victory . . . These actions are not localized in Alabama. The conspirators against unity are working zealously to recruit to their ranks from all parts of the South and the nation. The Governor of Louisiana, Samuel Jones, has but recently announced his complicity in the plan of secession.

"This open ,organized revolt is only incidentally a revolt against the leadership of the Democratic Party. As such it would hold only an academic interest for the millions of Negro and white people of the South who are effectively disfranchised by pernicious practices which Southern Democrats, in collaboration with many Northern Republicans, have successfully maintained to date. It is, however, a revolt against the war . . .

"We call upon you, therefore, Mr. President, to crush this conspiracy with firm hand. The signatories to this petition, you may be sure, are only a token sampling of millions of Southerners who stand ready to rally to your leadership in the conduct of the nation's war to a speedy and successful conclusion. These Southerners are white and Negro men and women."

L. A. Railway Blocks Victory

The continued flaunting of President Roseveolt's executive order 8802 by the Los Angele8s Railway Company is our city's prime, current scandal. The policy of refusing to up-grade qualified Negro workers to jobs as motormen and conductors while our entire war-keyed city suffers because of a railway worker "shortage," endangers not only production here but the lives of our citizens.

The shocking increase in transportation accidents on the city's rail lines is partially an outgrowth of the severe over-crowding made necessary by the man-power "shortage" and the undoubted fact that, with rationing, public transportation facilities have been taxed by a fresh army of commuters.

The disgraceful, common sight of Central Avenue "U" cars jam-packed, with war workers hanging to the back and steps of the cars is something that must end--and immediately!

The Fair Employment Practice Committee should receive an avalanche of telegrams from L. A. Railway's customers forced to endure transportation conditions dangerous to life and limb simply because an ante bellum clique of company die-hards refuses to respect the law of the land.

Eight "U" cars have been removed from Central Avenue because there is no "qualified caucasian' to run them.

This is deliberate sabotage of the war effort. It directly wounds war production, health and morale. It has got to go!

And from Tuskegee

From Tuskegee Institute comes this report:

"I send you the following information concerning lynchings for the year 1942. I find according to the information compiled in the Department of Records and Research, there were five persons lynched in 1942. This is one more than the number 4 for the year 1941, the same as the number 5 for the year 1940, 2 more than the number 3 for the year 1939 and 1 less than the number 6 for the year 1938. One of the persons lynched was dragged through the streets behind an automobile and the body burned. Another body was dragged through the streets behind a speeding automobile to the edge of town and hanged from a cotton gin winch. In one case the person was taken from the jail and hanged."

The report continued, "there were 15 reports of instances in which officers of the law prevented lynchings. One of the reported instances was in a western state and 14 of the reported instances were in southern states. In 13 instances, persons were removed or guards augmented or other precautions taken. In one case, a lynching was restrained by wives of the would be lynchers .In another case, the sheriff dissuaded the mob. A total number of 17 persons--4 white men and 13 Negro men--were thus saved from the hands of a mob.

All persons lynched were Negroes. The offenses charged were: Attempted criminal assault, 1; suspected attempted rape, 3; received life sentence when jury failed to agree on punishment on a murder charge, 1.

The states in which the lynchings occurred and the number in each state are as follows: Mississippi, 3; Missouri, 1; Texas, 1."

This report was rendered by F. D. Patterson. President of the Institution.

While we deplore the lynching practice in our nation, and shall do all in our power to erase this blot from the records of our democracy, we must not let news such as this swerve us from our main objective—to stamp out facism and every thing that closely resembles it. We must remember that the Administration of the U. S. is not our enemy, but that our enemies at home, the lynchers, are closely allied with the master of lynchers, Hitler. And that by marching upon the Hitlers and the Hitlerites of this world will put us in better stead to fight for the passage of Anti-Lynch Bill and the Anti-Poll Tax Bill. And that through these two measures, we will be able to enact the proper legislation that will forever end this terrible practice.

Be Clear on India

An important statement by R. Lal Singh, only member of the India National Congress in the United States, was one made last week which struck a mighty blow at those false worshippers of Indian liberation who employ the distressing situation in that nation to spread disunity among members of the United Nations and to confuse people everywhere upon the nature of this People's War.

Those who see in the treatment of India "proof" that the United Nations cause is not a just one render Indian freedom as great a disservice, says Singh, as those Tory die-hards who have reduced the Indian politcal situation to its present dangerous impasse.

It is precisely because this is a Peoples War, precisely because the defeat of Fascism is the basic precondition for all freedom everywhere, precisely because the triumph of the Nazis—and their imperialist friends in every nation—would hurtle the world, India included, into an Age of indescribable barbarism that Indian patriots demand freedom for India now so that she may marshall all her stupendous Nehru has said, India must be free to raise man-power and industrial potential as aa People's Army to join those of her great full partner of the United Nations. As neighbors, Russia and China.

★ LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

December 27, 1942

To Mrs. C. Bass
Editor of the California Eagle:

For the past few weeks I have been reading about your controversy with the Los Angeles Railway. Your argument about discrimination is quite sound, but as another Negro, I think it would help a great deal if through the medium of your paper you would make an appeal to the Negro passengers who ride the busses and streetcars to refrain from such boisterous rowdyism and, quite often, vulgar conversation.

Last but not least, the boys and girls of high school age, going to and from school it is a disgrace to sit and listen to them at times.

It is my opinion that the Los Angeles Railway can use such behavior as an excuse. If a Negro was in charge of such public conveyances and such behavior made it necessary to use his authority, what would be the results? His only alternative would be to call a white policeman, because Negroes have little or no respect for each others authority.

Maybe alongside of your protest for unfair practices you can make an appeal to the Negroes to conduct themselves with a little more propriety and maybe we'll get some where sooner.

Thank you,
C. M.

(Editor's reply)
Dear C. M.

From all outward appearances you seem to be a very intelligent person but why do you base your thesis on that age old subject of Negro behavior in public.

If the Los Angeles Railway would dare to use such a poor excuse for not hiring and upgrading Negroes for the positions which this newspaper is advocating, they would most certainly be the laughing stock of this town.

Dear C. M., all you have to do is to ride any of the street cars which commute in school districts of other races. I think that you would find there is little or no difference between Negro and other youth groups as far as their behavior on public conveyances, especially if there happens to be a crowd.

We concede that the young Negroes are boisterous, but so are other school kids. The L. A. Railway itself will tell you that the acts of vandalism carried on in other parts of this city on street cars and busses are unheard of where young Negroes are concerned.

As to it being a disgrace, I think if the L. A. Railway gave the parents of these children decent jobs, they would have in all probability been different people in environment and attitude. This holds true for any person or group of persons who have been degraded socially as well as economically, who has been denied the chance to upgrade himself. You can't blame the Negro people, but you can blame the L. A. Railway and any other firm, organization or what have you for upholding racial segregation, forcing the Negro people to live in overcrowded ghettos, forcing them to pay higher rents yet giving them lower wages and smothering every natural and youthful emotion of their sons and daughters.

Any good book on psychology will tell you, C. M., what individuals will do when they are a part of a crowd or a gang. This same principle applies to riots and lynchings. The book will tell you that people become brave and bold in a crowd and that they will act or talk much differently than they ordinarily do. Especially young people. This is true of any group of people, white, colored, green or gray.

Now think of the poor unfortunate colored kids who hasn't the recreational facilities of other groups—who cannot go home to a well balanced meal, who has probably just left a school where they could not participate in all of the social activities. Where to find warmth and friendship they must remain together in one band silently voicing their protests to each other. Do you blame these young minds for expressing themselves in the only way they can.

Then consider the tired colored man or woman who is coming home from a hard day's work. He has to stand packed like a Norweigan sardine because there is no seat in the street car. Some of his friends in order to get home must ride on the outside of the conveyance, literally hanging on for dear life. He has to go to drab living quarters because there are restrictions against him in other sections of the city. Probably disgusted with the whole mess he gives vent to his feelings and utters a few lusty cusses. Just as many other people, white alike, are doing.

Now we broach upon the subject of authority. It is my firm conviction that if Negro men and women were motorman or conductors on the street car lines, their colored passengers would bend over backwards cooperating with them. They would be so proud to see some of their own doing a job such as this.

Dear C. M. we thank you for your letter and we hope that if there is something further which we have neglected to notice that you let us know.

The only appeal that we can make to the people is that they cooperate with us in our campaign by sending letters to the L. A. Railway, telling them how they feel regarding this situation and how important it is to the war effort, that all acts of discrimination and unfair practices must be eliminated if we expect to reach the goal the world is seeking.

Because C. M., this is our war and we have just as much say so about it as anyone else and we have just as much to lose as anyone else.

Sincerely,
—THE EDITOR

★ SPREADING JOY

By JOHN FOWLER

This, the next day after Christmas, finds me with a heart filled with gratitude for the many kind expressions of love and friendship I have received from friends during the past week, for the many letters thanking me for my efforts to spread joy during the past twelve months, and the many remembrances in the way of Christmas greeting cards.

Even if I were able to buy the cards and stamps, time and space allotted me would be inadequate to mention all the cards I have received. I want to thank all those who remembered us.

I have picked up a few at random to describe to you.

As is her custom, here is a person touch as expressed by Mme. Mozelle T. Outley, which she titled "Gems of Thought":

Great talkers--little doers.

Sometimes silence gives contempt.

He that has no cross deserves no crown.

Where boasting ends there dignity begins.

Many persons make a living but fail to make a life.

People who live in glass houses should pull down the shades.

To forgive our enemies is the most charming way for revenge.

People look at me six days in a week to see what I was on the seventh.

The beginning of anxiety is the end of faith, the beginning of faith is the end of anxiety.

Another greeting with a distinctly personal touch was the card that Atty Clarence Jones sent written in flaming red ink.

Titus Alexander used a novel purple folder containing a green and white card.

From Washington, D .C., Miss Jessie Parks sent a pretty reproduction of an old Dutch village.

Here is a pretty thing from Jimmie and Gladys Smith. A white Xmas night under a full moon, a farm house aglow, with light in the background.

Mrs. Georgia Miller sent her greeting by a group of merry gentlemen and ladies.

Here is a pretty card from a very dear friend: The Three Wise Men Mounted and crossing the plains to follow the Star, from Mrs. Laura Young.

Another from Dr. and Mrs. Theodore R. Mason Howard (nee Helen Boyd) of Mound Bayou.

The Tymoney's, Georgia and Garnett, brought Xmas right smack up to date with a card combining the Xmas tree with the garden hose, shovel and bucket of sand, suggesting preparedness.

Mr. and Mrs. L. B .Guy of East 115th street sent us a whole train load of Merry Xmas.

Here is a pretty thing in Coco-Brown and gold from the Stovall family, my ideal family.

Mrs. Fannie Robinson held to the traditional tree lighted candles and the words "Sincere Good Wishes," etc.

On the card from Leon Chester Edwards, a group of blue birds with an open window disclosing a bowl of poinsettas and ferns was seen.

To Assemblyman and Mrs. Hawkins goes the honor of glorifying liberty. On their greeting card was a picture of Independence Hall and the Liberty Bell with this inscription: "Proclaim liberty throughout the land to all the inhabitants thereof."

Here is a card that suggests silence, eloquently. Before a window a beautiful vista of snow covered houses, the lone star shining and in the foreground on the open piano a piece of music titled, "Silent Night," the selection of Mrs. A. Noel of East 115th street.

Ivan Johnson and Loren Miller used a trio of bells in Red and Gold to ring out their Xmas greetings.

The card from my sister, Roxa, for the family was a dignified folder of black and red.

I love to read the words of faith and hope chosen by Mrs. B F. Stanciel of San Francisco, "When the Beauty of Understanding into our lives has trod, We often call it Friendship, Though we know that it is God.

Here is a thing of beauty that smacks of culture. A severely plain folder of white and purple with three holly branches in silver, signed, Avis.

Our very dear friend, Mrs. Minnie Tucker sent a very pretty card of apple green with a background of holly and misletoe.

Among the first to arrive was this one from Mr. and Mrs. Wilfred E. Charles. Here in the foreground is an illumined light house in the distant over the deep blue sea is a ship and:

"Thou, too, sail on, O ship of State!

Sail on, O Union, strong and great!

Humanity with all its feats,

With all the hopes of future years

Is hanging breathless on thy fate!

Here is a copy of "Inspired Genius" by Martha Bau. I want to congratulate Martha on these poems and recommend them to anyone who loves the beautiful.

Leading the old sweethearts parade this week is that lovable pair of Sweethearts Mr. and Mrs. Garner V. Grayson. My congratulations!

★ SIDEWALK

oppose these policies oppose winning the war and they oppose a people's peace. The concrete expression of their treachery are centered in the following campaigns:

1—Anti-labor drive, because Labor, true to the common man's interest, supports the war wholeheartedly, i. e., supports Roosevelt.

2—Anti-Negro drive, to smash national unity (speeches of Bilbo, Cox, Rankin) and bring Negroes into the defeatist cause by deception.

3—Anti-Communist drive, Hitler's Secret Weapon again, used to intimidate supporters of the war by Red-baiting them. Example: Dies committee blast at Mary McLeod Bethune.

What it is imperative that we recognize is that a full-blown Copperhead conspiracy against the Negro people exists today. It is headed up by powerful native fascists in the National Association of Manufacturers, the Duponts, for instance, backers of ex-Gov. Eugene Talmadge of Georgia. It spreads from Congress to hoodlum neighborhood fascist bands. It is dominant in the South, resting upon the disfranchisement of 10,000,000 American citizens. It has recently been strengthened in the North by election and re-election of reactionaries to political power.

Among the Negro people, the fascists have their campaign exceptionally well planned. Here is a demonstration of real Fifth Column thoroughness. The conspirators have successfully blocked legislation aimed at fundamental changes in the status of Negro Americans. This legislation, the anti-poll tax bill, was supported in the Senate by the Administration, by Roosevelt's men, Roosevelt's men alone, isolated, beaten and stampeded by a coalition of Dixie Democrats and Northern Republicans.

Now, the Conspirators will tell the Negro people that the war is not worth supporting because the bill was not passed. They will tell Negroes that it is Roosevelt's fault. They will ask, "Why doesn't Roosevelt fix it?"

This propaganda will be spread among Negro people by persons who mouth phrases of extreme militance—militance, mind you, while they play the anti-war game of the NAM!

All this militance of the Negro stooges for reaction will center NOT against the traitors and saboteurs of victory who scuttled the anti-poll tax bill, NOT against Dies, Vandenburg, Taft, Wheeler, Hoover, Dupont, Ford and fellow fascists.

HEAVENS NO! The great Negro militants (of the NAM) will shout their threats and hurl their barbs at Roosevelt!—at the leader of the People's War!

They will make no move to support and strengthen the hand of progressive legislators, Roosevelt, and the other enemies of Messrs. Dupont and Hearst. They will wage no war against the American friends of Hitler. They will ask only, "Why doesn't Roosevelt fix it?"

They will Red-bait, in unctuous imitation of their NAM Masters.

They will tell Negroes that the war can be won in Europe and lost in Dixie.

They will not say that winning the war in Dixie and winning it abroad are one and the same thing, because in either case it is a victory against imperialism. To be definite, everytime the Russians beat Hitler, American fascist investments in the great German die-trust, Farbenindustrie, linked by cartel agreements to Dupont, are defeated. Everytime the Negro people score a victory against Dixie economic or political exploitation, Dupont, who controls politics in several Southern States, is again defeated. The victories are identical. They are victories over the same people. They are victories over the same practices, since German fascist domination of occupied Europe matches, and surpasses, the terrorization of Negroes in the South.

What is this twaddle about winning the war in Europe and losing it in Dixie, then?

It is an effort to divide Negroes from full participation in the war effort.

No clear understanding of the Negro's role in the current war can be had if there is no perception of the difference between this and the last World War. THAT was an imperialist war; an argument between exploiters. It was wholeheartedly supported by the groups now opposing World War II. Throughout that conflict, Southerners held complete sway in the national government. It was a war in their interest.

Today Dixie opposes the war effort, even threatening secession rather than to bow to win-the-war policies, especially those which extend rights to Negroes.

Senator Noris' apprehension is not ill-founded. His voice raises a solemn warning. We have a job to do. It is to kill the Copperhead Conspiracy, 1943 style.

"NATIVE SON" ★

From the book by

RICHARD WRIGHT

"Well, boy, we found her. You hit her with a brick, but she didn't die right away."

Bigger's muscles jerked him to his feet. Bessie alive! But the voice droned on and he sat down.

"She tried to get out of that airshaft, but she couldn't. She froze to death. We got the brick you hit her with. We got the blanket and the quilt and the pillows you took from her room. We got a letter from her purse she had written to you and hadn't mailed, a letter telling you she didn't want to go through with trying to collect the ransom money. You see, boy, we got you. Come o now, tell me all about it."

Bigger said nothing. He buried his face in his hands.

"You raped her, didn't you? Well, if you won't tell about Bessie, then tell me about that woman you raped and choked to death over on University Avenue last fall."

Was the man trying to scare h m, o did he really think he had done other killings?

"Boy, you might just as well tell me. We've got a line on all you ever did. And how about the girl you attacked in Jackson Park last summer? Listen, boy, when you were in your cell sleeping and wouldn't talk, we brought women in to identify you. Two women swore complaints against you. One was the sister of the woman you killed last fall, Mrs. Clinton. The other woman, Miss Ashton, says you attacked her last summer by climbing through the window of her bedroom."

"I ain't bothered no woman last summer or last fall either," Bigger said.

"Miss Ashton identified you. She swears you're the one."

"I don't know nothing about it."

"But Mrs. Clinton, the sister of the woman you killed last fall, came to your cell and pointed you out. Who'll believe you when you say you didn't do it? You killed and raped two women in two days; who'll believe you when you say you didn't rape and kill the others? Come on, boy. You haven't a chance holding out."

"I don't know nothing about other women," Bigger repeated stubbornly.

Bigger wondered how much the man really knew. Was he lying about the other women in order to get him to tell about Mary and Bessie? Or were they really trying to pin other crimes upon him?

"Boy, when the newspapers get hold of what we got on you, you're cooked. I'm not the one who's doing this. The police department is digging up the dirt and bringing it to me. Why don't you talk? Did you kill the other women? Or did somebody make you do it? Was Jan in this business? Were the Reds helping you? You're a fool if Jan was mixed up in this and you won't tell."

Bigger shifted his feet and listened to the faint clang of another street car passing. The man leaned forward, caught hold of Bigger's arm and spoke while shaking him.

"You're hurting nobody but yourself holding out like this, boy! Tell me, were Mary, Bessie, Mrs. Clinton's sister, and Miss Ashton the only women you raped or killed?"

The words burst out of Bigger:

"I never heard of no Miss Clinton or Miss Ashton before!"

"Didn't you attack a girl in Jackson Park last summer?"

"Naw!"

"Didn't you climb through a window out in Englewood last fall and rape a woman?"

"Naw; naw! I tell you I didn't."

"You're not telling the truth, boy. Lying won't get you anywhere."

"I am telling the truth!"

"Whose idea was the kidnap note? Jan's?"

"He didn't have nothing to do with it," said Bigger, feeling a keen desire on the man's part to have him implicate Jan.

"What's the use of your holding out, boy? Make it easy for yourself."

Why not talk and get it over with? They knew he was guilty. They could not prove it. If he did not talk, then they would say he had committed every crime they could think of.

"Boy, why didn't you and your pals rob Blum's store like you'd planned to last Saturday?"

Bigger looked at him in surprise. They had found that out, too!

"You didn't think I knew about that, did you? I know a lot more, boy. I know about that dirty trick you and your friend Jack pulled off in the Regal theatre, too. You wonder how I know it? The manager told us when we were checking up. I know what boys like you do, Bigger. Now, come on. You wrote that kidnap note, didn't you?"

"Yeah," he sighed. "I wrote it."

"Who helped you?'

"Nobody."

"Who was going to help you collect the ransom?"

"Bessie?"

"Yeah."

"Then why did you kill her?"

Nervously, Bigger's finger fumbled with a pack of cigarettes and got one out. The man struck a match and held a light for him, but he struck his own match and ignored the offered flame.

"When I saw I couldn't get the money, I killed her to keep her from talking," he said.

"And you killed Mary, too?"

"I didn't mean to kill her, but it don't matter now," he said.

"Did you lay her?"

"Naw."

"You laid Bessie before you killed her. The doctors said so. And now you expect me to believe you didn't lay Mary."

"I didn't!"

"Did Jan?"

"Naw."

"Didn't Jan lay her first then you? . . ."

"Naw; naw . . ."

"But Jan wrote the kidnap note, didn't he?"

"I never saw Jan before that night."

"But didn't he write the note?"

"Naw; I tell you he didn't."

"You wrote the note?"

"Yeah."

"Didn't Jan tell you to write it?"

"Naw."

"Why did you kill Mary?" He did not answer.

"See here, boy. What you say doesn't make sense. You were never in the Dalton home until Saturday night. Yet, in one night a girl is raped, killed, burnt, and the next night a kidnap note is sent. Come on. Tell me everything that happened and about everybody who helped you."

"There wasn't nobody but me. I don't care what happens to me, but you can't make me say things about other people."

"But you told Mr. Dalton that Jan was in this thing, too."

"I was trying to blame it on him."

"Well, come on. Tell me everything that happened."

Bigger rose and went to the window. His hands caught the cold steel bars in a hard grip. He knew as he stood there that he could never tell why he had killed.

It was not that he really did not want to tell, but the telling of it would have involved an explanation of his entire life. The actual killing of Mary and Bessie was not what concerned him most; it was knowing and feeling that he could never make anybody know what had driven him to it. His crimes were known, but what he had dit before he had committed them would never be known. He would have gladly have admitted his guilt if he had thought that in doing so he could have also given in the same breath a sense of deep, choking hate that had been his life, a hate that he had not wanted to have, but could not help having. How could he do that? The impulse to try to tell was as deep as had been the urge to kill.

He felt a hand touch his shoulder; he did not turn around; his eyes looked downward and saw the man's gleaming black shoes.

"I know how you feel, boy. You're colored and feel that you haven't had a square deal, don't you?" The man's voice came low and soft; and Bigger, listening, hated him for telling him what he knew was true. He rested his tired head against the steel bars and wondered how it was possible for this man to know so much about him and yet be so bitterly against him.

"Maybe you've been brooding about this color question a long time, 'unh, boy?" The man's voice continued, low and soft. "Maybe you think I don't understand? But I do. I know how it feels to wal' along the streets like other people, dressed like them, talking like them, and yet excluded for no reason except that you're black. I know your people. Why, they give me votes out there on the South Side every election. I once talked to a colored boy who raped and killed a woman, just like you raped and killed Mrs. Clinton's sister . . ."

"I didn't do it!" Bigger screamed.

"Why keep saying that? If you talk, maybe the judge'll help you. Confes it all and get it over with. You'll feel better. Say, listen, if you tell me everything, I'll see that you're sent to the hospial for an examination, see? If they say you're not responsible, then maybe you won't have to die . . ."

Bigger's anger rose. He was not crazy and he did not want to be called crazy.

"I don't want to go to no hospital."

"It's a way out for you, boy."

"I don't want no way out."

"Listen, start at the beginning. Who was the first woman you ever killed?"

He said nothing. He wanted to talk, but he did not like the note of intense eagerness in the man's voice. He heard the door behind him open; he turned his head just in time to see another white man look in questioningly.

"I thought you wanted me," the man said.

"Yes; come on in," Buckley said.

The man came in and took a seat, holding a pencil and paper on his knee.

"Here, Bigger," Buckley said, taking Bigger by the arm. "Sit down here and tell me all about it. Get it over with."

Bigger wanted to tell how he had felt when Jan had held his hand; how Mary had made him feel when she asked him about how Negroes lived; the tremendous excitement that had hold of him during the day and night he had been in the Dalton home —but there were no words for him.

"You went to Mr. Dalton's home at five-thirty that Saturday, didn't you?"

"Yessuh," he mumbled.

Listlessly, he talked. He traced his every action. He paused at each question Buckley asked and wondered how he could link up his bare actions with what he had felt; but his words came out flat and dul. White men were looking at him, waiting for his words, and all the feelings of his body vanished, just as they had when he was in the car between Jan and Mary. When he was through he felt more lost and undone than when he was captured. Buckley stood up; the other white men rose and held out the papers for him to sign. He took the pen in hand. Well, why shouldn't he sign? He was guilty. He was lost. They were going to kill him. Nobody could help him. They were standing in front of him bending over him, looking at him, waiting. His hand shook. He signed.

Buckley slowly folded the papers and put them into his pocket. Bigger looked up at the two men, helplessly, wondering. Buckley looked at the other white man and smiled.

"That was not as hard as I thought it would be," Buckley said.

"He came through like a clock," the other man said.

Buckley looked down at Bigger and said, "Just a scared colored boy from Mississippi."

There was a short silence. Bigger felt that they had forgotten him. Then he heard them speaking.

"Anything else, chief?"

"Naw, I'll be at my club. Let me know how the inquest turns out."

"O. K., chief."

"So long."

"I'll be seeing you, chief."

Bigger felt so empty and beaten that he slid to the floor. He heard the feet of men walking away softly. The door opened and shut. He was alone, profoundly, inescapably. He rolled on the floor and sobbed, wondering what it was that had hold of him; why he was there.

He lay on the cold floor sobbing; but really he was standing up strongly with a contrite heart, holding his life in his hands, staring at it with a wondering question. He lay on the cold floor sobbing, but really he was pushing forward with his puny strength against a world to big and to strong for him. He lay on the cold floor sobbing; but really he was groping forward with a fierce zeal into a welter of circumstances which he felt contained a water of mercy for the thirst of his heart and brain. He wept because he had once again trusted his feelings and they had betrayed him. Why should he have felt the need to try to make his feelings known? And why did not he hear resounding echoes of his feelings in the hearts of others? There were times when he did not hear echoes, but always they were couched in tones which, living as a Negro, he could not answer or except without losing face with the world which had first evoked in him the song of manhood. He feared and hated the preacher because the preacher had told him to bow down and ask for mercy he knew he needed; but his pride would never let him do that, not this side of the grave, not while the sun shown. And Jan? And Max? They were telling him to believe in himself. Once before he had accepted completely what his life had made him feel, even unto murder. He had emptied the vessel which life had filled for him and found the emptying meaningless. Yet the vessel was full again, waiting to be poured out. But no! Not blindly this time! He felt that he could not move again unless he swung out from the base of his own feelings; he felt that he would have to have light in order to act now.

Gradually, more from a lessening of strength than from a peace of soul, his sobs ceased and he lay on his back, staring at the ceiling. He had confessed and death loomed now for certain in a public future. How could he go to his death with white faces looking on and saying that only death would cure him for having flung into their faces his feeling of being black? How could death be victory now?

He sighed, pulled up off the floor and lay on the cot, half-awake, half-asleep. The door opened and four policemen came and stood above him; one touched his shoulder.

"Come on, boy."

He rose and looked at them questioningly.

"You're going back to the inquest."

They clicked the hand-cuffs upon his wrist and led him into the hall, to a waiting elevator. The doors closed and he dropped downward through space, standing between four tall, silent men in blue. The elevator stopped; the doors opened: he saw a restless crowd of people and heard a babble of voices. They led him through a narrow aisle.

"That s————!"

"Gee, isn't he black!"

"Kill 'im!"

Crispus Attucks—First Patriot Killed in Boston Massacre, March 6, 1770.

The first act of historical violence in the drama of the American Revolution, referred to as the Boston Massacre, was led by Crispus Attucks, a Negro, shouting "The way to get rid of these soldiers is to attack the main guard; strike at the root; this is the nest!" With more valor than discretion, he and his companions rushed to King Street and were fired upon by Captain Preston's company. Samuel Gray, James Caldwell and Crispus Attucks were killed in the encounter.

Both battalions were on the field at the same time, near Jackson. The British commander Packingham was shot as he raised his hat to hurrah in an effort to rally his troops. Jackson later wrote to Monroe, "I have always believed that he (Packingham) fell from a bullet fired from the gun of a famous rifle shot of the Attakapas District." One or two of Packingham's aides fell at the same time he did, with the result of panic and confusion for the enemy.

Shaw at Fort Wagner—$1200.00

The 54th Massachusetts Regiment composed of Negroes under the leadership of Colonel Shaw, though suffering from great privation, took it place at the head of the assaulting column in the attack upon Fort Wagner, Morris Island, South Carolina, July 18, 1863. General Strong and Colonel Shaw addressed the regiment briefly before the attack and urged the men to valorous conduct. The order was given for the charge by General Strong; the regiment swept across a ditch and gained the parapet. Here the flag of the regiment was planted; there was an appalling list of casualties and from a military point of view the assault was a failure, but it furnished the severest test of valor and soldiership. The mural should depict in addition to the parapets, with Shaw's soldiers massacred, Shaw himself mortally wounded, held in the arms of one of his soldiers. The sergeant, with his arms severely shot, holds the broken staff of the American flag. Says Wife Cruel; Sues for Divorce

Where is my wife, Rose Anna Jones? This was the question being asked by Harold Jones, defense worker residing in the Hacienda Courts, last Monday morning in the Courtroom of Superior Judge Wm. S. Baird. Jones through his attorney, Curtis C. Taylor, was asking Judge Baird for the custody of the minor children of the couple, one of whom is only one year old, on the grounds that his wife had deserted both he and the children on the night of November 29th after she had returned home at a late hour in the morning and admitted that she had been night clubbing at a South Los Angeles club.

He has filed for divorce on the ground of extreme cruelty and his Attorney secured permission to have an investigation in regard to the custody of the children, hearing for which has been set for January 7th in Dept. 8 of the Superior Court.

ORA SCOTT CAUSBY, BUSINESS WOMAN, SCORES AS ACTRESS

Ora Scott Causby, of Washington, D. C. comes to Los Angeles to attend the NAACP convention, turns dramatic.

The California Sunshine, colorful flowers warm friendship, active social life. The kleig lights of Hollywood are among the many inspiring inducements that kept her here.

In the East, Mme. Causby successfully operated a chain of Beauty shops. White and colored, and catered to Washington's diplomatic trade from the "White House" down, having been invited to tea twice by Mrs. Roosevelt. She also maintained a laboratory for the manufacturing of cosmetics there. Then she moved her labratories to 140 W. 42nd St., Times Square, New York. There she sold stock in her $100,000 cooperation, and her line of cosmetics through large distributors. Then comes the war and its priorities on raw materials, metals and shippings, help, small businesses, Ora saw the handwriting on the wall, and like the Arab in the night, silently folds her business and steals away for the duration.

Ever on the alert for new opportunities, Ora was quick to appreciate the possibilities of the Hollywood set up, while completing a story she took dramatics at Gallers work shop, her astute business habits and traits soon made her fellow actors conscious that she was indeed different and she was good.

Mr. Johnstone White, director of the internationally known Max Rhinehardt Theatre, adjacent to the Galler work shop immediately selected Ora, strong character, to play the part of "Addie" in the stage verion of Lillian Hellman's "The Little Foxes", in Hollywood. This was the same role played by Jessie Grayson, in the movie version although, the stage part was not so limited. "Addie", Ora Scott Causby had a real chance to portray intermate and feminine feeling and actions of a housekeeper in the typical southern home at the beginning of the century, often times going so far as to take issue against the wife over handsome oJhn Frederick, movie star, the invalid husband, whom she had reasons to love, who also took issues against his wife for her. There was nothing to wonder about for they played it daringly. A real part as you can well imagine.

She asked to have the word N— which appeared many times, cut from the play, that she would not stake her future on not playing the conventional mammy role with head dress and heavy dialect. After a long time she won out, and was allowed to use her own speaking voice, and inserted her own personality. She knew it was a long shot, but she took it. Her future was in the balance. She was swamped with congratulations, and her press notices said she was pleasing. Ora plans to continue to write and act.

Armstrong, McDaniels Await Gong

Hammer and tongs will be the prevailing note when "Hammering" Henry Armstrong, former world's triple champion, and Jimmy McDaniels, tough Irishman from Watts, tangle Tuesday night, Jan. 5, at the Olympic auditorium to ring up the curtain on the 1943 fight program.

The bout is scheduled for 10 rounds and both fighters have agreed to 147 pounds as the stipulated weight. McDaniels has been fighting middleweights but can easily make 147 pounds.

This will be Armstrong's last local bout before entraining for Philadelphia on Jan. 6 for a bout on Jan. 18 with Al Trubiani.

In his fine comeback, Hank has won 13 out of 14 fights and his last two battles found him gaining an 8-round technical kayo over Lew Jenkins, former world's lightweight champion, and scoring a four-round knockout over Saverio Turiello of New York at San Francisco.

McDaniels recently fought Rudolfo Ramirez at Hollywood Legion stadium.

The prices are scaled from $1 to $3 for the Olympic bout and tickets are already on sale. A sell-out will draw $17,000. In his last Olympic bout against Juan Zurita, Armstrong drew $21,400 and kayoed Zurita in three rounds.

A fine set of preliminaries have been arranged for the card which will include Jimmy Brooks and Terry Gibson, two of Armstrong's sparring mates.

A record-breaking crowd is expected.

Shown above is ATTORNEY CURTIS C. TAYLOR, smiling and shaking hands with Al Bray, California state heavyweight boxing champion, for whom he has just won a contested court action. Attorney Taylor, who is one of the best known lawyers on the Pacific coast, extends the season's greetings to the readers of the California EAGLE and to his many friends and clients thruout the State of California.

Holiday Knifings

Xmas night, resulting in serious injury to Charley Jack Smith, 932 East 31st street, now at General hospital with wounds in the back and abdomen. His assailants, Henry G. Green, 5309 Bandera, and Willie Hodge, 800 Vernon Ave., did not agree on tactics following the incident. Mr. Green has a very fine lawyer, Atty. Walter L. Gordon, and an assault-with-deadly-weapon rap to beat. Mr. Hodge has the attention of the police officers who wonder whereinhell he is at.

Two ladies got to debating the point as to whose boyfriend was being filched by whom in the vicinity of the Dunbar hotel on Central avenue on the occasion of the same festive holiday with the upshot that Miss Fannie Johnson, age 28, wa arrested on charges of assault with a deadly weapon, guess what, and Miss June Brooks, 1405 East 20th street, is a sadder but wiser girl. But not too sad because she is in stitches, fifty of them right across her south paw.

Miss Ludie LeFleur was leaving her boyfriend to go back to her husband Christmas day at 1001½ East Santa Barbara street when her boyfriend, Louis Williams, same address, became difficult and ended up unhappily with knife wounds here and there.

Miss LeFleur was held by the cops, but she maintains it was in elf defense because Louis was on the verge of swatting her good when he got swatted himself. Good.

"ARABIAN NIGHTS" NOW AT UNITED ARTISTS

Exquisite is the word for Walter Wanger's production of "Arabian Nights" now playing at the United Artists Theatre, 933 So. Broadway, downtown Los Angeles. No finer Technicolor has ever been seen on the screen than in this magnificent realization of the extravagant pageantry of the mystic East.

Excelling though it does technically, the picture will also be remembered as the one which made Maria Montez a star in her own right. She plays Sherazade with all the verve and dash the role demands. Jon Hall gives required stature to Haroun-Al-Raschid, the Caliph deposed by his own brother. Leif Erickson is properly villainous a this Kamar, and Sabu actively engaging as the clever Arab waif who sparks the rescue of his ruler and makes Sherazade's dream of being queen come true Gratitude is extended to all for their true spirit of Christian hospitality in every way toward the club.

Mr. Fred Roberts, of the Roberts mortuary, assisted as master of ceremonies for the occasion. Miss Gloria Roberts, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Roberts, presided at the piano during the entire session.

All persons were introduced and permitted brief remarks. All remarks given were very encouraging to the affair and to all concerned. Rev. and Mrs Frederick D. Jordan, the most honorable pastor of the church, were the guests of the general chairman. Both Rev. and Mrs. Jordan expressed season's greetings to the assembly.

Mr. and Mrs. Peoples sponsored an 11-guests-table of friends in behalf of the Emergency club. The hostess of this party was Mrs. Geo. R. Hooper. Rev. Joseph Evans expressed greetings to the club on behalf of the party. Many other ministers and evangelists were present. Remarks were given by all.

The executives of the Red Cross Blood Bank of Western avenue attended the session in behalf of Mrs Louise Cook with a very supporting party. Mr and Mrs. Floyd Covington and their son made a special effort to attend before leaving the city for the holidays.

The outstanding Emergency club of historic 8th and Towne is one of its most alert auxiliaries. The president, Mrs. Emma Surrey, is one of Los Angeles' most cooperative Christian socialites, always ready to assist anyone anywhere at any time. The club in general wishes to thank every one for their kindness in every way. A Happy New Year to all.

San Diego Correspondent Agrees With President

SAN DIEGO, (By E. B. Wesley)—Despite the present global war and the battle torn world, there are inumerable things to be thankful for. In President Roosevelt's broadcast a few nights ago he particularly stressed the necessity of having faith in God; and that the people of this country should not shrink from any task that might aid in the winning of this mighty conflict, no matter how small, for the freedom of mankind.

Will we be apportioned any part of the liberty and justice for which we too are fighting? The American Negro is fighting a two front battle, one abroad against the forces of fascism and the other at home against the would be domestic fascist. Faith in God will help us to win victory on both fronts.

Miss Clarice Hubert, who is attending the University of California at Berkeley, visited her parents Rev. and Mrs. L. H. Owens during the Xmas holidays.

Mr. Sterling Wallace of Los Angeles was a Sunday guest of his relatives in this city.

Mr. and Mrs. A. Clay Entertains

Mr. and Mrs. S. A. Clay, 2078 Julian Ave., entertained Xmas Eve night and Xmas day with an invitational open house party.

The guests arrived at 10:30 p. m. Xmas eve. Gifts were exchanged and a jolly good time was enjoyed throughout the evening.

Those signing the guest book were Mr. and Mrs. James Hopkins, Mmes. Ruth Walker, Carrie Gatewood, Hattie Calvert, Etta Clemons, Mr. James P. Tate.

At 3 p. m. Xmas day the guests began to arrive. The house was tastefully decorated with traditional colors. Covered with a rich damask, a centerpiece of Santa Claus in a sleigh drawn by a reindeer and with ornamental red candles, the table was most attractive. Atop a white glass block in a corner of the living room stood a gorgeous Xmas tree fairly groaning with gifts.

Mrs. Clay, lovely in red and white pajamas kept the table replenished with dainty refreshments, while Mr. Clay, a most genial host presided at the egg nogg bowl, incidentally Mr. Clay is on his vacation.

The guest book was signed by Mr. and Mrs. John Price, Mr. and Mrs. Todd Goodwin, Mr. and Mrs. Iva Ross, Mr. and Mrs. Peter Dickens, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Richardson and Mr. Archie Vernon.

Truth Seekers Sponsor Dinner for Soldiers

The Spiritual Alliance of Truth Seekers Inc., an organization whose motto is "Do good unto others," spoonsored a gala affair given for 250 soldiers of the armed forces at the AWVS canteen, USO branch, 45th and Central avenue, on Saturday, Dec. 19.

The pastors and co-workers of the 8 churches of this organization all cooperated on this one accord singing, praying, speaking, and last but not least, eating and entertaining the young soldiers with great splendor. Much credit for the success of this affair goes to the women of the AWVS.

The guests of honor were Sergeants Fanst, Newman, Lampkins and Glover, respectively, of Cos. C, A and D of the 775th M. P., stationed at Lockheed Airport, Burbank, Calif.; 75th Chemical Div., 76th, Co. B, stationed at Inglewood, Calif., and the 334th M. P., Co. B, stationed at New Rock, Calif. There were many others present who are too numerous to mention

As soon as the men were seated the tables were blessed and the program was rendered. Rev. Leslie Friar sang "My Desire," accompanied by Mrs. Nash on the piano. Many lovely readings were read. Most of them scored a hit with the boys who gave much applause.

Mr. George Smith presided at the piano. A solo and a lecture was given by Rev. DuValle. It was quite a sight to see the soldiers gathered around the piano and singing hymns led by Rev. Jeaneria Jones. One of our sailors did some accompanying on the piano and we enjoyed it very much. The Reverends Washington, Helen Werner and Morgan spoke and prayed and proved to be great inspirations to us all.

The boys were served, olives, parsled potatoes, roast turkey and dressing, creamed peas, cole slaw, jelly, naomi pudding with lemon sauce and coffee. The cigarettes were donated by Rev. Mitchell.

The churches present were: Temple of Divine Truth, Rev. Susie Jackon, pastor; Haven of Rest Nos. 1 and 2, the Reverends D. Wyatt and E. Burke of San Diego; Liberty Spiritual Temple, Rev. H. L. Morgan, pastor; Temple of Nimrod, Rev. Willetta Mickens, pastor; Tremofue Spiritual, Mme. Small, pastor; Star of Bethlehem, Rev. Mitchell, pastor; and the Triangule Spiritual Temple, Rev. Stewart, Dallas, Tex., pastor.

May God bless everyone who participated.

Rev. Wyatt, president; Rev. B. Blakey, secretary.

Uncle Bouqui of Haiti

By Harold Courlander, illustrated by Lucy Crockett. William Morrow and Co., New York, N. Y., $2.00

Reviewed by Augusta Braxton Baker.

High up in the Red Mountains of Haiti lives Uncle Bouqui and Ti Malice. Uncle Bouqui is big and kindly with an almost childish naivite. He was always hungry and his insatiable appetite leads him into all kinds of predicaments. The main cause of his trouble, however, is in his desire to outwit his good friend Ti Malice. The latter is, just as his name implies, shrewd, crafty and at all times malicious. He constantly outwits poor Uncle Bouqui avoiding him, as the other people do, he always thinks that the next time he will be able to get the best of Ti Malice.

Each chapter is an experience of Uncle Bouqui with Ti Malice and there are seven such tales.

Centering his talk from history, he said that tribes in the north, have always been more susceptible to knowledge than tribes in the South. He stated that the highest development of attitudes. In concluding his message, he asked, "What should be our aims?" In answering his own question, he said we should buy Bonds, and War Stamps, and help in every way, in order to win the war.

In order for any race to go forward, two things are absolutely necessary. 1. Race organization, and 2. Race solidarity and race conciousness. LOOKING AHEAD--1943

Take courage, have faith, for 1943 is another glorious year! Let your heart rejoice and permit the baby New Year to hold such pleasant thoughts as the dawn of Peace--no more fighting—husbands, sons and sweethearts home again around the fireside—our loved ones by our side.

When we make our resolutions this year let them contain such thoughts as brotherly love for each and everyone . . . more tolerance . . . less hatred . . . no racial differences or prejudices.

It would help you to have your 1943 Horoscope, to guide you thru the coming year. Important decisions you may have to make, business ventures and other future plans for your happiness and success can be easily worked out, with this wonderful guide to help you.

Don't start the New Year without your 1943 Horoscope, write Prof. Herman, for it today.

L. P.—Dear Prof., I just could not start the New Year, without wishing you a Happy One. I owe so much of the past year's happiness to you. Thru your help I have obtained a good job, and found peace of mind as well. May you be able to continue your good works throughout the coming years, and May God Bless You.

F. H. H.—Will we find a place to move?

Ans.—It appears to me that you wish to find this place before Xmas, however, I do vision your being successful within the next couple weeks. Don't become discouraged, for living conditions and the housing problem is difficult everywhere now.

M. E. N.—Will I get him back?

Ans.—Probing into the matter I find that you separated on a very small matter. And it can easily be cleared up if one of you give in. When you love someone a little sacrificing doesn't count, when the ultimate end is happiness.

H. M. T.—What is the trouble, he doesn't write to me. Does he love me?

Ans.—Since your boy friend is in camp, you shouldn't place his neglect to write recently to the fact that he has stopped loving you. His sister informed you that she hasn't heard from him either, which could account for a lot of things. I suggest you consult the Red Cross in your city for information regarding him.

Dear Prof. Herman: For sometime I have been reading your column in the California Eagle, and enjoy it very much also your great wisdom in answering questions that are sent in to you. I realize that you have a limited amount of space in the paper, and if you are able will you please tell me what happen to the money that was placed in my car?

Ans.—Probing into the matter I find that someone living in the same house with you, knew that you had this money and took it. It would be wise to place it in the bank when you receive it from now on, for safe keeping.

M. L. S.—I have been going with a man for sometime, do you think we will ever marry? Is he true to me? Will I get what I want for a gift? Will I find a good man and marry him?

Ans.—Only one question is answered in the column, will you please write in for a private reply, and I shall be glad to help you.

L. G.—I am deeply in love with a young man in the U. S. Army does he love me?

An.—It appears to me that this young man thinks a great deal of you, and when he returns on his furlough, he is going to ask you a very important question.

Invest in Freedom NOW

"Freedom cannot be given, it must be purchased."
—Booker T. Washington

That statement is just as true today as it was when spoken by the great educator.

When You Invest in
U. S. WAR SAVINGS STAMPS & BONDS
YOU KNOW YOUR MONEY WILL DO FOUR THINGS

1. It will go to work promptly to help win the war.
2. It will give impressive support to your demands for the full benefits of the freedom guaranteed by our democracy.
3. It will aid in overcoming the dangers of inflation today and in the days ahead.
4. As money saved, it will be yours to spend sometime in the future when your need for money may be greater then it is today.

BUY WAR BONDS

N. N. I. A. SPONSORS WAR BONDS CAMPAIGN
During the period, Dec. 18 to Jan. 16, the NATIONAL NEGRO INSURANCE ASSOCIATION is conducting a Four Freedoms Victory Bond Rally, and agents of member companies are devoting one day each week for the solicitation of applications for WAR BONDS and STAMPS instead of applications for Life Insurance. This is a very striking example of how the talents of insurance salesmen are valuable in an emergency.

PERSHING SQUARE THOUSANDS HEAR NEGROES BLAST L.A.R.Y.

RALLY SELLS $62,000 BONDS; HITS RAILWAY

Celebrating both the year's end and Lincoln's great Emancipation Proclamation, Los Angeles Negro citizenry took over the far-famed Pershing Square Victory House last Thursday to climax a bond selling campaign which netted $62,000 for the war effort and to swat the anti-Negro policy of the Los Angeles Railway company, —while more than 1,500 white citizens gathered in the city's dead center cheered their approval.

Symbolic of the Negro's patriotic unity behind America's anti-fascist war were those who carried the rally through to success. Spearhead of the bond campaign, sponsored by the Negro Victory Committee, was the sepia Hollywood colony. First Lady of the Theatre, Ethel Waters, was on hand to still the vast audience with her reverential singing of the National Anthem. Spokesman for the win-the-war forces of Negro business was William Nickerson, jr., president of the Golden State Mutual Life Insurance Company. William Pollard, progressive AFL leader, represented Negro labor,—with cold anti-fascist cash, A militant Negro clergy was heard in the voice of Rev. Clayton D. Russell, chairman of the Negro Victory Committee, and Mrs. Charlotta A. Bass, Eagle editor, brought a sizzling message from what Piggy Pegler calls 'the black press.'

HITLER WOULD'VE BEEN SICK

Herr Hitler, whose book, Mein Kampf, proclaims that Negroes are half-apes and that the Emancipation Proclamation was the greatest mistake in American history, would not have liked the SCENE AT VICTORY HOUSE RALLY . . . last Thursday during which a grand total of $62,000 was garnered for Uncle's war effort. Sponsored by the Negro Victory Committee and the Golden State Mutual Life Insurance Company, the affair was called by Victory House officials "best we've ever had." The big show attracted thousands to Pershing Square.

Mary Lou Rosser, chairman of Victory Committee Ladies' Auxiliary, screen star Ethel Waters, and Mrs. Aunt, Victory House official, have a good laugh over the $62,000 rised. Center, one of the heaviest bond buyers, AFL's militant William Pollard signs on the dotted line. At right, afternoon's most impressive moment: Ethel Waters sings the National Anthem.

Body of Dr. Geo. Carver Lies in State

"What a light of reason has gone out! What a great heart has ceased to beat!"

That might well be the expression of the whole nation today as millions join in mourning the death of one of the greatest — the country has produced, scientists —and human beings George Washington Carver.

Dr. Carver passed at the scene of his life's work, Tuskegee Institute, Ala. He had been in failing health for several months.

Born of slave parents at Diamond Grove, Mo., he was never sure about his birth date, but once estimated that it was "about 1864."

He became a member of the Tuskegee Institute faculty in 1894 and had been attached to that institution ever since.

Carver, the scientist, developed ink, pigments, cosmetics, paper, paint and hundreds of other articles from the South's red clay

He will be buried in Tuskegee Cemetery, where also lies Booker T. Washington, founder and first president of the school. The body will lie in state for a short time before the burial.

While Dr. Carver was best known for his contributions to Southern agriculture, he also was a noted artist whose works have hung in a number of well-known galleries.

PECAN BLIGHT CURED

Associates tell of the time when a pecan blight struck Alabama and Florida trees in the 1920's. A grower came to Dr. Carver with a plea for a cure, offering a large sum of money if he would undertake research. Dr. Carver developed a cure and his price to the grower and all others was merely the postage stamp necessary to mail it.

When quite young he and his mother were kidnaped from the Missouri farm where he was born and taken into Arkansas. His master, Moses Carver, ransomed him with a fine blooded

On the Sidewalk

BY C. A. B.

It is clear that the new Congress now convening intends to cut a wide swath in the liberal legislation of the New Deal and generally to launch an attack upon all progressive measures aimed at winning the war swiftly and decisively.

This reactionary rampage has already set in, as far as Negro people in the nation are concerned. It has been mounting ever since the Nov. 3 elections and was given an all-out signal by the defeat of the Pepper-Geyer Anti Poll Tax Bill in the last session of Congress.

Among Negro writers and leaders there has been a re-birth of pessimism and defeatism and one Negro publication in Los Angeles, fortunately of little circulation or influence, last week advocated negotiated peace with Hitler.

The black outlook is not exclusively the property of Negro liberals. Our dealings with Fascist France, Spain and Finland have prompted such a liberal spokesman as Pearl Buck to state that "this is not a war for freedom anymore," implying that there is little difference between the war aims of either coalition of belligerents.

Adoption of bad war policies and refusal to state, specifically, clear war aims by the British and American governments are at the heart of the whole defeatist wave now engulfing large sections of liberal thought here.

What we must cling to during these perilous days is the sure knowledge that this is still an anti-fascist war, still an anti-imperialist, still a war in the interest of the vast majority of humanity, still a war which will decide freedom or slavery for every human being on earth.

This is still the NEGRO AMERICAN'S WAR.

Despite unreasoning optimism over the military situation, there is no indication that Hitler's defeat is a foregone conclusion and that the threat of Axis dictation for the world is happily over. It is as true today as it ever was that the survival of every nation on earth is at stake, and, moreover, the survival of every progressive movement within every nation is at stake.

With no exception, the Axis has attacked all countries in which democracy has developed, and it is the revolutionary advance of democratic forces in the so-called great nations that will liberate the great colonial empires. Not only is freedom preserved in the defeat of Hitler, but the pre-conditions for fuller freedom all over the world.

No sincere proposal for 'peace,' can be raised unless it is based, first, upon the complete, military destruction of the Axis power. This is the brutal fallacy of the Negotiated Peace adherents. It is not peace they want. It is appeasement.

If, then, this is the Negro's war and it is progressive war which will decide the fate of mankind, we must do all in our power to see that it is won.

The upsurge of reaction in America today, we may trace unerringly to Fascist sources devoted ultimately to the military defeat of United Nations, or, what is the same thing, that negotiated peace with Hitler.

It is classic justice that the Poll Tax South, a national disgrace for seven decades, is now pointed dagger-like at the heart

HOUSING AUTHORITY VOWS 'LIBERALIZATION'

"Liberalization" of the policy of Negro quotas in Los Angeles Housing projects was promised this week in a release from the office of Nicola Giulii, chairman of the city Housing Authority.

Seven percent of the housing units in the projects are today "officially" set aside for Negroes on the basis of their proportion to the whole population.

This system has, in effect, kept hundreds of Negro war workers from available housing units because the Negro quota has long been filled.

The situation came to a head recently when one Negro woman worker at Lockheed aircraft company was ordered out of a rat-infested home on East 50th street by the City Health Department but was refused a home in the Housing project, although there were vacancies, because of her color.

A mass meeting at First AME church called by the Negro Victory Committee and the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People blasted the Housing Authority and its quota system.

Following this, a committee headed by Assemblyman Augustus F. Hawkins appeared before the Los Angeles Housing Authority Commissioners protesting the restrictions against Negro occupancy.

HURTS WAR EFFORT

It was pointed out at this meeting that false race lines between war workers in urgent need of housing react to the detriment of the war effort and the general good. It was further indicated that penning Negroes into areas where they had lived during

Courier Hits Randolph's March Ruse

Newspaper Says Leader Should Make Up Mind

A. Philip Randolph, who was unable to budge the last conference of the American Federation of Labor from its Jim-Crow moorings, took a thumping from the Pittsburgh Courier this week on the subject of his celebrated, now-you-see-it-now-you-don't March On Washington (or somewhere).

Speaking editorially, the Courier said:

"TO MARCH OR NOT TO MARCH

"A. Philip Randolph continues to compound confusion about the frequently-threatened "March on Washington." To our recollection, this 'march' has been called on and off at least three times, and many Negroes are anxious to know whether there is ever to

NAVY STARTS PROBE OF VALLEJO RIOTS

VALLEJO, Calif.—The wounding of two Negro cooks during the riots December 26-27 involving some 275 Negro and white sailors and a few civilians here brought from the NAACP in New York the following telegram to Secretary of Navy Knox:

"Attack by southern whites on Negro sailors and civilians to prevent latter from continuing as in past to use places of public accommodation in Vallejo, California, emphasizes again necessity for stronger policy by Navy dept. in summarily punishing those who attempt to enforce southern racial patterns on northern communities. It is ironic and disheartening to read press statements that the disturbance was quelled when marines turned machine guns on the Negroes. It is also significant that only Negroes were injured, when the evidence seems to establish that white southerners were the aggressors in attacking Negro patrons of a tavern. Court-martial and punishment to full extent of law in this and similar cases will do more than anything else to prevent further outbreak. We respectfully urge such action."

Following the disturbances, 1800 Negro sailors were confined to quarters at Mare Island Navy Yard while authorities investigated the rioting in a town in which before the wartime influx

Marcantonio Bill to End Poll Tax

WASHINGTON, Jan 8—Rep. Vito Marcantonio introduced the new anti-poll tax bill in the House of Representatives today in launching what will become one of the crucial tests of the 78th Congress.

Killed in the last session by a filibuster of Dixie die-hards, anti-poll tax legislation faces this trip even fiercer opposition from a new allignment of anti-Roosevelt Poll Taxers (Democrats) and Hoover Republicans.

Marcantonio, outstanding House progressive, outlined the new anti-poll tax drive.

As with the last bill, the first mighty effort of the American people must be to secure 218 sig-

Judge Tells Him to Leave State, But Relents

Clifford Wallace, formerly of 1387 E. Vernon Ave., but now residing in San Diego, was the recipient of something in the nature of a Christmas gift at the hands of Judge A. A. Scott in Dept. 46 of the Superior Court last Friday morning.

Wallace, who had been convicted of robbery, 2nd degree, after a spirited court trial, was granted probation by Judge Scott on condition that he leave California and return to Chicago, his former home. He then left for San Diego where he secured employment in a defense project and decided he did not want to leave the golden state. Through his attorney, Curtis C. Taylor, he petitioned the court to modify the sentence of probation so that he could remain in the State of California during the rest of his period of probation. Judge Scott granted the request, and Wallace smilingly went back to his job in San Diego.

CIO MOVES TO ORGANIZE WORKERS LIVING IN L. A.'S SOUTHEAST AREA

The CIO Joint Committee to Organize the Unorganized announced this week that its organizational drive is getting under full swing with scores of workers living in the Southeast area, signing up into the CIO.

The drive is being sponsored jointly by 15 CIO Unions who make up the organizations that some 10,000 unorganized workers living in the district are eligible to join.

The Unions sponsoring the drive are the powerful United Automobile Workers of America which has been conducting a whirlwind campaign to organize the giant Douglas Aircraft Company, as well as to secure 100 per cent membership at the North American plant where there are approximately 2500 Negro workers employed.

The Mine, Mill and Smelter workers who have just recently won an election against the A. F. of L. at the Alcoa Aluminum plant at Torrence, and who are now out to organize the Negro and white workers employed there solidly into a fighting union for proper working conditions and for full integration of the Negro workers into every department.

The State, County and Municipal Workers Union has an active committee led by Luther Merriweather, who are out to organize the City, County and State janitors and refuse collectors to the man.

$232,000 in Dividends to Coast Federal Holders

JOE CRAIL

A total of $231,755.71 in semi-annual dividends was distributed December 31st to more than 12,500 Coast Federal Savings Account holders, it was revealed today by Joe Crail, President of the Association.

In addition to this dividend distribution, $179,(360.99 was set aside to increase Reserves and Surplus to 7.5 percent of Total Assets and 9.4 percent of the total public funds placed in Coast Federal Savings Accounts. Coast Federal now has $1,471,360.99 in Reserves and Surplus.

During the past six months, savings have increased $1,853,553.38. The Association's assets are now $19,633,644.96.

$556,036.25 was invested by Coast Federal in United States War Bonds and other Government obligations during the past six months. This represents an increase of over 900 percent of Coast Federal's investment in federal securities since Pearl Harbor.

"In 1943, as during the past year, we will continue to devote our efforts toward two major objectives." Joe Crail said in commenting on Coast Federal's excellent condition. "These are, first, to continue our policy of making Coast Federal as financially strong and sound a savings institution as is posible; and second, to do all we can to help win the war through our purchase of War Bonds for the Association itself, and in serving the public in their purchases."

NAACP Continues Attack on Jim Crow Red Cross

• NEW YORK—Voicing vigorous opposition to the Red Cross plan to continue with the introduction and extension of segregation in England and other places by labeling certain Red Cross clubs as "exclusively for Negroes in the European theatre of operations", The NAACP this week stated in a letter to Mr. Norman H. Davis, President of the American Red Cross; "It is our information that prior to the above action Negro soldiers have eaten, used the recreation rooms, lounges and shower rooms and all other facilities of nonsegregated American Red Cross Clubs without difficulty of any sort with but a very few exceptions. This makes all the more indefensible and inexplicable the attitude of the American Red Cross. Insistence upon it of Jim Crowism not only is a needless irritation to Negro soldiers and officers who are, presumably, in the American Theatre of Operations to fight for democracy but it will inevitably accentuate prejudice or ignorance on the part of some American white soldiers so far as Negroes are concerned. And I need only mention here the widespread and growing resentment of English people at the foisting of terns on Englishmen and English territory. We further understand there are a considerable number of white Red Cross workers who are bitterly opposed to this introduction of segregation which more accurately fits a Hitlerian than a democratic way of life."

★ POST OFFICE FACTS & FIGURES

By PAUL L. HACKETT SR.

When we were in Washington we discussed the wage problem with several Congressmen. They all agreed that Federal employees earning less than $3000, per annum should be given an advance in salary. Just how this would be accomplished and when they seemed to be at loss to say.

Since our return we find that a resolution S. J. R. 170 has been passed by both houses and signed by the President. This bill was intended to adjust the salary inequalities. All it seems to have done was to fool the public and confuse the employees. No one seems to be sure who will receive the ten percent flat raise. There is much apprehension among the custodial employees as to whether this bill will effect them or not. But one thing sure, if this bill doesn't the Victory Tax will. We are going to hazard a guess and say that the custodial employees will be effected by this bill. There are rumors circulating around that this resolution has been a headache to the Comptroller General, himself. Why doesn't Congress come out with a balanced bill or state outright they don't intend to give us a raise. It would at least relieve our minds.

The school kids have had a grand time handling mail and incidentally making a little extra spending change. Although X-mas has come and gone, the railroads are still being taxed to the limit in getting Christmas mail out of Los Angeles. Soldiers contributed their efforts in handling the mail and did a swell job of it.

The P. O. guards have lost a regular guy in the person of Dwight Riddle, who has been transferred to customs guard. Riddle came from the ranks of custodial laborer. This is another instance which proves the fallacy of the idea that all custodial laborers are academically inferior to other post office employees. This may have been true in another generation, but today it is not so. In most cases custodial laborers have been victims of circumstances. As opportunities present themselves this is being proven every day. The time will come when the Custodial Department will have to recognize itself, adjust itself altogether to a new type of man.

Our good friend, Lewis Taylor, has been promoted to fireman while his partner, Roy Cutchlow, has left us for defense work. We wish them both the best in their new jobs.

We trust that in the coming year everyone will find his rightful place in the scheme of things. Let's hope that selfish ambition will not hold back those who are trying so hard to make a place for themselves. We say again, a Happy New Year to all and especially our friends who have been so loyal.

CLAFLIN COLLEGE CHOIR DRAWS PRAISE

ORANGEBURG, S. C.—One of the most appreciative audiences of the season greeted the Claflin College Choir Sunday afternoon in an original vesper service, "Carols and Candles" written and produced by Norton E. Dennis, organist and choirmaster.

Under his able direction the singers gave a good accounting of their interpretative ability in a variety of sixteenth century a cappella works, familiar carols, a spiritual "Go Tell It on the Mountain," climaxed by a spectacular presentation of the Bach-Gounod "Ave Maria."

Prof. Dennis, whose weekly Hammond Organ recitals have been a feature of the school year, played excerpts from Handel's "Messiah" and Guilmant's "Noel Offertoire in C."

Lifers Foiled in Xmas Escape Try at Folsom Prison

Not only did they lose their special Christmas feed and privileges, but two colored long-term prisoners, Henry Nelson, 27, and Benjamin Jones, 26, both considered dangerous felons, were prevented from again becoming a menace to society last week. Instead they spent the holidays in solitary confinement, pending further action for attempt jail break.

Just a day before Christmas, after sawing the bars of their cell door and replacing them with wooden ones they were recapturned just as they reached a ventilator on the roof. The saws had been smuggled in to them by some unknown method. Nelson, who had once before escaped from an Oakland jail was under long sentence for burglary. Jones was serving life for murder, rape, robbery, and hold-up in Los Angeles.

25 Prelates Join Anti-Poll Tax Group

BROOKLYN, N. Y.—Negro and white people's organizations and the trade unions of this city are adding their strength to the national movement to abolish the poll tax during the 78th Congress.

Twenty-five outstanding clergymen of the borough have been sponsors of the Brooklyn and Long Island League to Abolish the Poll Tax. The League maintains offices at 50 Court Street. The League was organized Dec. 2, 1942 at the Holy Trinity Baptist Church here, where a mass rally of 1,000 people under the chairmanship of the Rev. Thomas S. Harten, cheered its formation.

State Senator Louis B. Heller and Assemblyman Robert J. Crews informed the League's Secretary, Bert J. Coffey, of their intention to introduce resolutions early in the session of the State Legislature memorializing the House of Representatives to pass HR 7, a bill to abolish the poll tax in federal elections. Because Councilman John T. Sharkey, Democratic leader, is a sponsor of the anti-poll tax movement in Brooklyn, it is believed that the City Council will also get behind the fight to end the poll tax.

AMERICAN INDIAN IN THERE PITCHING AGAINST AXIS, TOO!

American Indians are making important contributions to the war, even at the cost of creating manpower problems on their reservations, Commissioner of Indian Affairs John Collier today reported to Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes.

"From their small population of 400,000, the Indians have sent more than 11,000 men to war. Even greater numbers of Indians have left the reservations to build bombers and tanks, to keep the railroad cars moving, to work in the mines, and to pick beets and cotton and perform other necessary labor in the fields of victory," Commissioner Collier said.

The result is a shortage of manpower on the reservation, and the job of keeping the tribal stock and farm enterprises in operation, Commissioner Collier said, is falling increasingly to the Indian women and children. In recent months Indian women at a number of jurisdictions have learned to drive tractors and trucks, repair heavy automotive equipment, work in laundries and power plants, and assist in the cattle and sheep round-ups.

"I quote from a report from the Fort Hall Reservation in Idaho an incident which is occurring almost daily on the 200 Indian Reservations in the country," Commissioner Collier said. "An old Indian woman wrapped in a dusty blanket walked into the reservation general store and purchased two War Stamps. She skillfully placed the stamps in a well-worn book, then started over the price of a hoe. When a haggling with the storekeeper bystander asked her what she was going to do with a hoe, she replied, 'My son fights, I work'."

Chief Officer's Steward J. R. Portwig Big Navy Booster

One of the Navy's staunchest boosters is Chief Officer's Steward James R. Portwig, 46, of 1544 W. 35th street. Returning home on furlough after having seen action in many of the Navy's greatest sea encounters within the past year, Portwig said, "I'm anxious to get back and help finish the job."

With 28 years of service with the fleet, the Negro Chief Petty Officer, a husky, affable chap with an accomodating grin, visited former shipmates at the Los Angeles Navy Recruiting Station in the Federal Building yesterday, and was told of the need for hundreds of young Negroes to serve as mess attendants with the Navy.

"If only they knew what opportunities there were for them in Uncle Sam's Navy," Portwig enjoined, "there would be no problem in filling your quotas."

Portwig told recruiting officers that messmen have been given rapid promotions in the naval service and the greater percentage had obtained a petty officer's pay rating after but a few months of duty.

The gallantry and heroism of Negro sailors has been the topic of much talk in the fleet. To this Portwig said," I can name you any number that were decorated and promoted in rank for distinguishing themselves in action."

Although non-combatant duties consist mainly in attending mess, the Negro crewmen are given important battlestations. Portwig found that the majority of messmen were grouped into gun crews while others helped at ammunition hoists and depots.

"My battle station was to take charge of the gun crews comprised of Negro mess attendants," he explained, "and I was always proud of the way these boys responded to action . . . They knew what they were fighting for."

A veteran of the last world war, Portwig enlisted in the Navy in 1915, and served for a number of years aboard the U. S. S. Pennsylvania. He was on continuous duty with the fleet until 1936, when he retired to the fleet reserve on pension. He was called back to active duty, however, in 1940 and since that period has seen plenty of action.

"The Portwigs are out to win the war 100 percent," the Negro Navy veteran disclosed, "the other member of ym family, my wife —Mrs. Emily Brown Portwig, is giving all her available time as a Red Cross Nurse."

Chief Officer's Steward Portwig is pretty proud of the Navy and vice versa . . .

Editors Note: As demonstrated in the above, Negro sailors in the U. S. Navy, even as messmen have established a tradition of gallantry and heroism.

Although we appreciate the feelings of Chief Officer's Steward, James Portwig and understand the great job which he and the U. S. Navy is doing in this people's war, we can't help feeling Negro sailors would do just as well or even better if given a chance to participate in all of the departments of the Navy.

Surely if mere mess attendants can distinguish themselves with such valor in action, it is only logical to believe that if Negroes were given more important posts they would contribute much in the service of their country and to the preservation of our way of life.

TRAFFIC SAFETY RESOLUTIONS:

To add to the long list of New Year's Resolutions which we all make and usually forget to keep, here are three which MUST be kept if we want to help win the war:

I will learn and obey all traffic laws and safety regulations.

I will remain alert at all times when I am behind the wheel, being especially watchful for pedestrians.

I Will Not Drive if I have been drinking!

The quality of mercy these days is like a joke about a worn tire —often a little strained.

Bill Smallwood

As predicted, Rhetta Jean Mitchell (nee Boswell) made that radiant, radiant bride we said she would! Few debs have Rhetta's smile as it is, and when she flashed it all thru her Great Day, it really vibrated. The wedding was quiet, as you know . . . earlier in the day. 'Twas good getting to see her "Mitch" again, the last time we were all together was in Chi way last Spring . . . their gifts were plenty and practical as to variation . . . and Rhetta's chums got together a few days before the wedding and showered her with lingerie . . . and thru all the hubbub of the days leading up to Sunday, "Mitch" moved unwaveringly, only to finally droop along 'bout Sunday eveg. All in all 'twas gala doin's . . . the bride and groom didnt leave immediately for Huachuca, but took a room at the Clark. They shove off later in this wk. . . . Blessin's, you two!!

Marie Joe Browne and Archie Savage have joined the acting clan of folk. Both appear in the current Assistance Theatre production of Noah, in Hollywood . . . A few merrie souls gathered Wedn. nite (6th) to properly accent Leroi Antoine's birthday. Surprise fashion . . . I dunno how true it is but rumor persists Reggie Williams became a benedict in 'Frisco not long ago. Mind you, I say I HEARD . . . Ned Boyd has gone No'th to live. Left last Wedn., we also heard . . . Folk who asked will learn here Porgy and Bess WILL reach Calif., but not before it completes a swing thru the midwest and perhaps back to NY . . . Luther Thompson is an MP at Huachuca. Praise the Lord . . . Is than an engagement ring on Bernice Eblon's finger? . . . ex-Dee Cee folk will learn here that Hi School Tr. Bassett is dead.

The Elijah Coopers celebrated their 51st anniversary on the 27th of December . . . None of the local weeklies got a line on the announcement, back East, of Mercer Ellington's engagement to the Harrison debbie in Dee Cee . . . Impressive service flag: that one flying in the breeze on the Musicians Union porch . . . Edna Deaver McCormick's New Yr's Day open house rang the ole bell, no less. Folk paid mass attention to pots 'n pots of black eye peas 'n rice and hogshead. A houseful, and gay. Edna's the kind of hostess we like, she just welcomes everyone, then turns ya loose to kick up your heels . . . The annual coffee as poured by Allied Arts (its usually centered around some celebrated folk then in town) will take place Sunday at the Garner hilltop manse. Novel touch, each member tells their ten guests admission depends on a phonograph record. The waxes will be presented to service men, of course. Allied Arts coffee never fails to be among the top-drawer listed events of social elegance in our village, you know. It's a signal for mad dash for new headgear, furs, glittering jewelry, an occasional flippant lapel and waves of Tabu, Shalimar, etc., etc. Anything less than Lentheric signifies you're at the wrong address, chum . . . . which should just about put us under the wire, at the rear . . .

DeeCee young set sez Horace Clark's bride-to-be will divide her time betwixt Dee Cee, Calif. and his station . . . By cracky, of course Olivette Miller would be in town! Was thinking of her, when it suddenly occurred to us she's been vocalizing with Sissle's band for seasons. Sooo, gladsome reunion with her the other noon over some pancakes and coffee. She's expecting her Dad (Flournoy Miller) out to write for that Fox cavalcade film. Olivette looks glamorous as ever, and busy as usual dashing to replenish the Miller wardrobe. Last time we met, come to think back further, was at Bernia Austin's house party in NY in August for the Hamilton Martins . . . gosh, time . . . Can't offhand think of anyone who passed so completely from the rah-rah stage to serious grimness than Lt. Cato Robinson, who we just somehow don't see around anymore. Those who do glimpse him hasten to report we wouldnt know him. He gets his DDS within a year . . . AWVS have big plans for '43 . . . They od say, the guests at that recent Modern Priscillas all-femme party are still recalling their gasps at the eye-filling table . . . Annual fashion show for Independent Church (Jan. 17th) still gaining approved momentum. Bids to be their best effort to date . . . Combination of excellent hostwit-goodwill ambassador-dynamo: Jay Loftlin . . . Hooray for that brow-raising radio script (Mond.) of Hal Styles on race prejudice!!

Vastly different from the usual conception of bandman is the average musician in Sissle's band, have you noticed? . . . The Horace Caytons have been in town . . . Neile Adam's son suffered a rather serious accident the other nite. He's coming along nicely now . . . Conservative Westsiders are alarmed over wholesale appearance of the zoot suit set in their section of town . . . The discussed George Farmer exhibit of ceramics at Hatfield Galleries on Wilshire will move to SC, then to the Vernon Library. We had a long chat with young Farmer at Glen Lukens' the other eveg, and will do a story on him--he should be known . . . You'll be intrigued at one of those "announcements" forthcoming from an otherwise smoothly-running Westside household! . . . I like to watch the quiet regal bearing of Mme. Te Outley, always composed.

If you look closely at that current mag photo of La Horne you'll see Fredi Washington in the background, or I'll miss my guess . . .

You knew Ruth Ellington James has a boy? Yes, 6½ pounds.

Ever so often we recall that languid creature, Vivian Baber Johnson, who was here with Ralph Matthews a few wks back. We asked the lady how she liked our country, and she replied without losing a spangle or hitching up her midriff gown, "I LOATHE it!" Since then, we've been sooo glad to hear trains running East havent altogether stopped, and one was able to take her outve here faster than it fetched her . . poor thing . . .

Pass the axe . . . for Billy Rowe . . . Uncle Billy's endorsing that MGM film (Tenn. Johnson) has this dept. yelling, "Throw him out!" . . . if MGM has to pay cash out thusly, and we get the blackeye, then throw 'em ALL out . . . glad we ain't in Rowe's seat . . .

The Eastside USO, 2814 Paloma Street, was the scene of Fun, Hilarity and Laughter, New Year's night. LISTEN IN SATURDAY 4 p. m. over Radio Station KFWB for highlights of the Eastside USO.

26--Eagle 10,000 Service Men Feted By Eastside USO

The United Service Organizations, referred to as USO, is composed of the following agencies: Jewish Welfare Board, the National Catholic Community Service, Salvation Army, Travelers' Aid, Young Men's Christian Association and Young Women's Christian Association. In Los Angeles area there are twenty-one USO clubs, and 2814 Paloma is numbered among these.

In general, a USO club is under the management of one or more of the foregoing agencies which is in its immediate community. The Eastside USO club is the only one of the twenty-one agencies that is located on the Eastside; and citizens are becoming aware of the fact that this Center is becoming firmly entrenched in this community as a haven of rest and morale builder for soldiers who for various reasons are in the city from time to time.

The organizational set up is composed of the Young Women's Christian Association and Young Men's Christian Association, USO Board, as our Center is jointly controlled by these two agencies.

The staff consists of Miss Vye Aldridge, director; Mr. Lloyd Thomas, assistant director and Mrs. Evelyn Warren, secretary.

Volunteer committees are headed by the following ladies: Mrs. Earnestine Davidson, senior hostesses; Mrs. Cornelia A. Roberson, Canteen; Miss Mary Stamps, junior hostesses; Mrs. Cora L. Flood chairman of Canteen publicity. Each of these groups are broken down into smaller units. Well planned activities are carried out each evening.

All the courtesies of the Los Angeles Area office are available to service men who visit Eastside USO; other services extended to men in uniform through this club are free showers, use of the YMCA swimming pool, gymnasium activities (basketball, etc.), housing and home hospitality. The community's debt to the soldiers is to see that these men avail themselves of these opportunities, by directing or escorting them to 2814 Paloma street.

The Army recognizes the USO as the organization that works most directly with them, and this Club usually serves as headquarters to men on leave.

During the period of July 12 to December 31, the USO has serviced over ten thousand men.

The old year ended with Eastside USO expressing its gratitude to all of its many friends, thanking them for their wonderful cooperation, extending its welcome to all friends and soldiers who might attend the club during the New Year and sending thoughfts of help and guidance to the men in uniform who have spent hours here and are now perhaps overseas.

70 AWVS Girls Go All Out in Entertainment of Service Men During Recent Holidays

Satisfied that hundreds of seamen and soldiers perhaps even now on the way to the battlefront, are happier for the memory of their last holidays in the homeland, seventy weary members of the AWVS have earned real tribute for the Christmas cheer they spread as their part of the war effort.

Topping the daily entertainment and refreshment service at the beautiful, well-furnished canteen at 45th and Central avenue was the big turkey dinner served all afternoon and well into the night. Regardless of rank or station, any service man who dropped in was immediately erbed by Capt. Laura Slayton and her able staff of willing workers. Besides the full course dinner of turkey or baked ham, a large variety of soft drinks and coffee was unstintingly offered.

The long-remembered affair, credited as among the best in the area, was supervised by Mrs. Harold Browning, wife of the internationally famous singer. She was assisted by Mmes. Edith Wilson, Theresa Madison, Ida Perry, Lucille Jackson, and Nadine Bell. A number of senior and junior hostesses kept the social atmosphere at its warmest with games and dancing, two of the most faithful seniors being Miss Eula Henderson, former New York socialite, and Miss Bernice Eblon, prominent local school teacher. Among the junior hostesses were the popular Clark sisters, Dorothy, Mattie and Edith; besides the Misses Haroldine Browning, Dorothy Sand, and Bonzelle Fulcher.

A partial list of the donations by organizations and individuals follows: Negro Motion Picture Players Asso., a huge turkey; Women's Civic Luncheon club, a 15 lb. ham and $15 worth of cigarettes. The Penguin club, Dr. Isadore Mitchell, Dr. Sommerville, the My Ladies Social club, the Angel City Lodge of Masons and the Committee for Combined Masonic Installations, the Ladies Doll League, and many others also contributed.

Tennessee Soldier Dies in Fall Here

Casting a pall on the Christmas Eve happiness of his buddies, death came to Arnold N. Howard, 27-year old army private stationed at Inglewood. While on duty a few days before his death he had a bad fall, fracturing his spine. He was rushed to the station hospital, but in spite of the best army physicians, he died on Dec. 24.

Investigation proved that the fall was purely accidental, and not resulting from misconduct on the part of anyone. The body was shipped to Howard's home at Bristol, Tenn., where he is survived by a wife and several relatives. Young Howard was one of the most popular and efficient men of his detachment, which has been stationed here for the past several months.

Mrs. Bertha Miller Is Dinner Party Hostess

VOGUE ART CLUB HOLDS 2 MEETS DURING HOLIDAYS

The Vogue Art Club held its past two meetings on a Sunday and Tuesday, with Helen Trammell and Arthonia Taylor acting as hostesses. Plans were made to have a New Year's party and exchange gifts.

The scene of the festivity was at the beautiful West 31st street home of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Washington where the guests wined, dined and danced to their hearts' content. With squeals of delight the girls unwrapped their gifts, not having known until then who the giver was, (yes, some women can keep secrets) but the prize gift of the evening was Nylon hosiery, and the recipient of said gift squealed longer and harder than anybody else, and who can blame her!

The guests and members included: Dorothy Lucretia Brown, Theodosia Washington, Blum McKinney, Sara Wallace, Arthonia Taylor, Ruth Speights, Zeresh Beaman, Helen Trammell, Louise Clark, Elsie Rakestraw Archer, Eva Guerrero, James Anderson, Edward Speights, LeRoy Beaman, Ed Guerrero, Howard Washington, Norman Archer and Herman Bousley.

A marvelous time was had by all and the men guests remarked that they wished there were at least two New Years a year.

Invitations, issued this week to patrons and friends of the fashionable leaguers, instruct the guests to bring one or more records (of any vintage) to be turned over to the AWVS or USO for men in the armed forces.

Each year the Arts League honors the achievement of some Negro artist. On the forthcoming occasion, it is fortunate in having three noted young musicians here from New York.

While Spencer is a native son, he returned recently from New York to play a feature role in the film version of "Cabin In the Sky." He also makes an appearance as soloist with the Philharmonic orchestra this season.

Lone Wolf Club Hosts Pre-Xmas Dinner Party

The Lone Wolf club stepped out on December 16th at the beautiful Plantation Club, 10718 So. Central Ave., but not alone. They really came on in the old time way, with a pre-Xmas dinner party.

More than 300 guests of the club were entertained at the affair, which proved to be one of the most beautiful of this season. Each member was assigned a table which he layed out to accomodate 16 guests. Much credit is due the members for the novel way in which they decorated their tables.

The tables presented a tableaux of mixed beauty and color. Each one had a centerpiece of red and white candles, different novelties and place cards and set in true 'Emily Post' Style.

The party proceeded in true Lone Wolf fashion. If the guests had any sorrows to drown, they were provided with the necessary equipment by the Wolves (Joke). But all kidding aside, it was really a swell affair.

At 11:30, the party was in full swing and most of the War worries of the day were forgotten by the guests, who were surprised with an outstanding floor show of beautiful girls, song and dance.

Shortly after mid-night the club was introduced at which time the members as well as the guests had another pleasant surprise. The members were standing in line and the president, Mr. Palmer Lampkins who was welcoming the guests, had the song "My Buddy" played for two of the members who are in service. Mr. N. M. Moore and William Aldridge. Following this rendition Mr. Aldridge, who was on leave, walked in and saluted the club and the guests. There were many happy wolves after this surprise.

The guests were served a very delicious turkey dinner with all of the trimmings. While enjoying this splendid repast, they were favored with the second floor show. After the show, a toast was offered to the health of the members of the Lone Wolf Club with champagne.

It was then the president said that this wonderful group of fellows have been held together all of these years by the earnest leaders which they themslves have chosen to lead them.

The guests departed after having a more than joyous time and everyone wished everyone else a Merry Xmas and a Happy New Year.

Mrs. Ivie Williams was assisted by her sister Mrs. Shirley Mack and Mr. William Street.

METRO-GOLDWYN-MAYER'S The LION'S ROAR

Published in this space every week — The greatest star of the screen!

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's latest screen play by Donald Ogden Stewart, based upon I. A. R. Wylie's widely read novel, "Keeper of the Flame" is a perfect picture for Americans.

★ ★ ★ ★

Brought to the screen with the moving conviction and vivid imagination that is second nature to Hollywood, "Keeper of the Flame" is sure to take its place among the best screen fare of this decade.

★ ★ ★ ★

A powerful and dramatically woven TRUTH, it strikes a new height in vivid realism, hitting out with all the artistic force that has given the screen such immortal pictures as "Mrs. Miniver", "Random Harvest" and "Journey for Margaret".

★ ★ ★ ★

So timely, it will make you stop and wonder about what's going on, and about your part in it all. With great depth and quality, "Keeper of the Flame" stresses the importance of every race in this country. In seeing it you will realize the futility of hatred towards any group of people.

★ ★ ★ ★

The story, the plot and the characters are so closely knit together by the deft touch of director George Cukor that they advance to a realistic finis that is as American as the Stars and Stripes and as down to earth in its message to all people as the Declaration of Independence.

As the stars of the piece, Spencer Tracy and Katharine Hepburn achieve the outstanding performances of their brilliant careers. The huge supporting cast wins new laurels in one of MGM's most endearing pictures.

★ ★ ★ ★

See it—and you will give and accept the greetings of a New Year with renewed strength and the happy thought that we are all Americans, standing guard together and are the "keepers of the flame."

Body of Dr. Geo. Carver Lies in State

race horse, but his mother had disappeared by the time a messenger reached the kidnapers.

EARNED TUITION

Carver's cherished goal was a college education and he surmounted many difficulties to attain it. He was graduated from a Minneapolis (Kan.) high school and then entered Simpson College, Iowa where he earned his tuition by working in the college laundry. The future scientist spent the next few years at Iowa State College, accepting a faculty position there after he had attained his master's degree.

In 1894, Dr. Washington asked him to join the Tuskegee Institute staff and Dr. Carver became the school's first director of agriculture. As he grew older, he was released from his faculty duties to become the institute's consulting chemist and director of a United States agricultural experiment station.

RACE MYTH DESTROYED

In Washington, Edgar G. Brown, director of the National Negro Council, said:

"Dr. Carver's life and contribution to science forever destroyed the myth of race inferiority."

It was believed by many of his intimates that Dr. Carver voiced his creed in a poem he recited in his high-pitched voice on his 40th anniversary at Tuskegee. It was titled: "The Things not Done are the Things Worth While."

Dr. Carver passed thousands in worldly gains "to work among the trees and the ferns and the grass of God's good earth," along with the young people of Tuskegee. Many a youth got through college on Carver's salary. He never mentioned his philanthropies, but his threadbare clothes and humble ways, plus stories that mul.iplied through the years, told of them.

FOUGHT ONE-CROP IDEA

In a day when the South prospered on a one-crop output, Dr. Carver was preaching a principle of diversification, experimenting with crops other than cotton.

Besides being chief of research and experiment at Tuskegee Dr. Carver was a director of the Department of Agriculture research; collaborator in the Division of Plant Industry, United States Department of Agriculture; member of the Royal Society of Arts, London; holder of the 1923 Spingarn Medal; and winner in 1939 of the Roosevelt Medal for achievement in science.

CIO MOVES TO ORGANIZE WORKERS LIVING IN L. A.'S SOUTHEAST AREA

lations at the Pacific Sound Company, are conducting an organizational campaign at Cannon Electrical Company, where some 250 Negro workers are hired, and are being discriminated against and mistreated, by the labor hating and Negro hating owners of this Company.

The Packinghouse Workers Organizing Committee are conducting a campaign to organize Wilson's Meat Packing company. The CIO has just won a significant election in this company throughout the entire east, and are now moving in on the largest plant in the west.

Starting simultaneously with the drive each one of the Unions is carrying out a program for the further integration of the Negro workers into industry and for full and enthusiastic participation in the life of the various unions.

A central point in this program is on the question of up-grading, which is considered by the CIO to be the most difficult and main problem facing the Negro workers in industry today. Philip M. Connelly, State President of the CIO stated in addressing an organizational meeting "that this constant discrimination on the part of the employer is holding back thousands of adequately equipped workers in menial capacities, when they could well be advanced and their skills fully utilized in this great industrial effort."

There are many instances where workers are being held as jaintors and who have gone to school and have excellent training in many of the technical phases of industry.

Already steps are being taken by the CIO Unions to put a stop to this practice.

A series of special meetings are to be held for the members of the organizing committee of the various Unions, who live in the Southeast area. These meetings are to help develop this program of organization and up-grading.

The first meeting is to be held by the North American workers Sunday, January 10, at 3 o'clock at 4310 South Central, and all workers working at the North American plant and living in the Southeast area are requested by the President and Secretary of the Union to be present.

The following Wednesday, Jan. 13, at 4310 South Central, at 8 o'clock in the evening, the Alcoa workers are holding a social and rally. They and their friends and others interested in the drive are asked to attend.

HOUSING AUTHORITY VOWS 'LIBERALIZATION'

peace-time could not be regarded as sound policy today, since thousands of Negroes are now employed at suburban factories and need housing near these production centers not only to save time and energy but to reduce an already enormous strain upon Los Angeles' transportation facilities.

APOLOGIZE

Housing officials apologize for the quota system by stating that Negroes, though "officially" allotted only seven percent of housing facilities, occupy 15 percent of the Los Angeles units.

"Each of the 10 regular housing developments operated by the Authority selects its residents by following the previous racial pattern of the neighborhoods in which they are located," chairman Giulli explained to the EAGLE this week.

Labor and progressive spokesfeel that harkening back to prewar neighborhood patterns is hardly the answer to the problems of a city now geared to all-out war.

Guillii's release promised "a liberalization of this policy." Whether this indicated an end to the quota system or simply further expansion of the Negro quota was not indicated.

The Housing chairman further stated:

"There has been an extremely heavy influx of Mexican, Negro and other workers into the city during recent months and they have been handicapped in their war production efficiency because of a lack of adequate and convenient housing," Chairman Giulii declared.

"Records of the Housing Authority show that approximately 50 percent of its homes are rented by persons of various racial minorities. But there are not enough to accommodate all those in need of housing.

"Since May, 1941, more than 15,000 Negro families, alone, have moved into the Los Angeles area from other parts of California and out-of-state. They are badly needed in the shipyards, airplane plants and by scores of other concerns turning out vital war goods.

"Each of the 10 regular housing developments operated by the Authority selects its residents by following the previous racial pattern of the neighborhoods in which they are located," Giulii explained. A liberalization of this policy, however, followed conferences last week with numerous representatives of racial minorities, headed by Assemblyman Augustus F. Hawkins.

Chairman Giulii said that Federal officials have been given complete data on the situation so that they can comprehend the problem and meet it with the allocation of additional housing units.

Witness Is Sought By Police

The Los Angeles Police Department is anxious to contact George Stanford, 4393 Rexland Avenue, who witnessed an accident on Dec. 14, 1942, at 12:35 a. m., on Mission Road near Sichel street, in which two people were killed and four injured.

This man is the only person to witness this accident who was not actually involved in the collison, and he is in possession of vital information of interest to the police. According to his statements, he is 30 years of age and drives a car bearing the license number 06 Y 445.

Police have been unable to locate George Stanford through any of the information given to the investigating officers at the scene of the accident. Information as to the whereabouts of Stanford is requested by the "Court Detail," MIchigan 5211, Station 804.

of workers and marines and white sailors from Texas, Oklahoma and other southern tates, there was no apparent prejudice so far as restaurants and bars were concerned.

The first fight on Saturday night, December 26, which seemed to crop out of a false report that a white marine had been stabbed by a Negro sailor, followed mounting complaints of discrimination against Negroes. Negro sailors had complained that they were being barred from restaurants, bars and other public Leo Shaw, 18, and George Carpenter, 26, were first taken to Vallejo hospital where they told the attendants they were "innocent bystanders" and had nothing to do with the fighting. Later, they were removed to Mare Island hospital.

Even Passengers Can't Drink in Cars on Coast

Effective January 8, a new ordinance passed last week holds that intoxicated guests riding in a car are subject to arrest anywhere in Los Angeles county. The driver is not only subject to arrest, but also the suspension of his white registration certificate.

However, in case the driver is not in favor of the drinking and the passengers are not co-operative, he can save his certificate by getting out of the car and walking off the highway before the officers arrive.

The new law, which is expected to cut down an unusual amount of highway drinking, puts real teeth into an existing law that did not empower the courts to impound certificates.

California Bank Deposits Show Big Increase

Increasing at the rate of a million dollars a week during the year of 1942, deposits of California Bank as shown in the year-end statement of condition are now $206,222,083 as compared with $153,329,032 a year ago. Total resources now exceed $218,000,000.

California Bank holdings of United States government securities, direct or fully guaranteed, likewise increased at the rate of a million dollars a week during the year, moving from $27,726,602 to $81,475,668, while other bonds and securities declined slightly less than $4 million to $10,095,802. Real estate holdings other than the bank's premises were reduced from $2,301,051 to $1,555,656.

hailed. He has pledged introduction of bills to:

(1) Make it unlawful in California for any industrial concern to discriminate on the basis of race, color or creed.

(2) Make it unlawful in California for any public utility (such as the Los Angeles Railway Co.) to discriminate in hiring on the basis of race, color or creed.

(3) Make it unlawful in California for any public Housing project to practice discrimination on the basis of race, creed, or color.

(4) Make it unlawful in California for any Labor Union to practice discrimination on the basis of race, creed or color.

Vigorous support from progressive, labor and Negro voters can force these measures through the present legislature, experts believe, despite its generally conservative composition.

rally one, little bit. He wouldn't have liked the sight of his half-apes purchasing $10,000 worth of bonds at one gulp—as did the the Golden State. He wouldn't have liked the sight of those half-apes signing a bomb destined for his own Berlin.

Herr Dies, Herr Cox, Herr Bilbo, , Hitler's American pals wouldn't have liked it, either.

Neither sight nor sound, would they have liked. The sound, for instance, of 1,500 pure caucasian gullets cheering Rev. Clayton D. Russell's militant attack upon the anti-Negro hiring policy of the Los Angeles Railway Company.

Hitler would have swooned.

RUSSELL HITS HARD

After the Victory House throngs had heard Noble Sissle's internationally known band, had seen the procession of Negro stars and community leaders, had heard the story of Dorie Miller and his comrades, Rev. Russell spoke.

You have heard," he said "about Dorie Miller. You have seen how we feel about this war against barbarians and those who would re-enslave us all over the world. But, I tell you, while we fight Hitler abroad, we had better watch Hitlerism at home, lest we fight in vain!

"Thousands of Los Angeles war workers, white and black, are jammed into inadequate transportation facilities every day,—300 cars are off the lines of the Los Angeles Railway Company because of a so-called "man-power shortage"—yet that firm refuses to employ as conductors and motormen loyal, patriotic Negroes! I think that is Hitlerism at home. What do you think?"

The answer was prompt. It came in a great, sweeping ovation from the Aryan lips of literally hundreds of Angelenos.

"I submit," Rev. Russell continued, "that if Dorie Miller, a Negro who had never before touched fire-arms, could grab a machine gun in the height of battle and down four Jap planes, the contention that Negroes cannot serve their country as motormen and conductors of the Los Angeles Railway Company is pure malarkey!"

There was another outburst of applause from the crowd.

STARS PARTICIPATE

Clarence Muse, Ernest Whitman, Nicodemus, Paul White and Mantan Moreland were among the Hollywood personalities who lent their expensive talents to the rally free-for-nothing.

A surprise was the appearance of the ex-champion of the world, Jack Johnson. He said, "I was proud of my boys before. I am proud of them today."

The program was organized by Mrs. Mary Lou Rosser, or the Negro Victory Committe. Master of ceremonies was Welford Wilson.

BARBIROLLI CONDUCTS TODAY AT PHILHARMONIC

John Barbirolli, distinguished conductor of the New York Philharmonic orchestra, will conduct the Los Angeles Philharmonic today at 3:15 in a program which will feature the undying Fifth Symphony by Tchaikovsky, along with several American works.

It is Barbiroli's theory that the conductor owes his greatest responsibility to the composer whose music he seeks to interpret.

"I do not believe that conductors should try to establish reputations for having this or that style,' he has said, "—it is my opinion that at all times the one consideration is what the composer meant by his music, what he wanted it to say.

Mystery Still Surrounds L. A. Shooting

The mystery tht shrouded the shooting of T. L. McGowan, local sportsman, last August 11, 1941, remained just as deep a puzzle today as it did when it happened as Sidney Thomas Marshall, laborer, was freed by Superior Judge Arthur Crum, sitting without a jury, Tuesday.

McGowan was shot five times by an unknown person in the early hours of the morning while a patron in the Tip Top Cafe, which is located on Central Ave.

Persons who witnessed the shooting told police that none of them knew the man who fired the shots.

According to McGowan he previously met the defendant at a local drug store and the man asked him to drive him and a friend to 51st and Ascot. After he had driven the man home the defendant allegedly made improper advances towards him. When McGowan resented his advances the man allegedly became irked and armed himself with a revolver.

McGowan said the man found him later the same morning in a local cafe and shot him and fled.

Represented by Attorney Walter L. Gordon, jr., Marshall contended that he was not the man involved in the shooting and that he was the victim of mistaken identity.

Marshall was not arrested in connection with the shooting until November, 1942, when McGowan saw the man on the streets and pointed him out to police officers as his assailant.

During the trial several persons present at the scene of the shooting pointed out Marshall as the man who had shot McGowan.

At first General Hospital attendants thought the injuries might prove fatal.

NAACP Questions U. S. Censorship of Race News

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Byron Price, director of the Office of Censorsnip here, was asked this week by the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People if a rule barring the sending out from the U. S. of any news regarding Negro and Negro-white relations in the United States has been established, what categories of news have been barred and what purpose does the Office of Censorship expect such censorship to serve.

The NAACP stated that the existence of such a censorship is evidenced by the fact that newspapers and magazines printed in the United States and containing such items are received in other countries with these items cut out of the issues. THE NATION for example, reports that one of its subscribers in Mexico received an issue of the magazine from which an editorial dealing with the Rome, Ga., attack on Roland Hayes had been cut.

The NAACP also reported that no part of the address made by Wendell Willkie at the annual conference of the NAACP held in Los Angeles, California, July 19, had been permitted to go out of the United States and that other references in speeches to the race question had been similarly barred.

natures of Congressmen in the House of Representatives today the bill out of the House Judiciary Committee.

Marcantonio stated that he will ask for no hearings on the bill, aiming at its speediest presentation to the House.

Each week, he said in a letter to the Eagle, the list of names of those Representatives who have signed the discharge petition will be released nationally. The new Congress will run about two years. Marcantonio plans to force the new bill through the House within six months. It will then go to the Senate.

PROGRESSIVES MUST FIGHT

Faced with a Congress which brazenly announces its intention to battle labor and progressive legislation, progressive forces congealed around all-out support of the war will be driven to a fierce counter-attack, political observers believe. That counter-attack must center about (1) a centralized war economy, with a planned national hiring policies in industry all over the nation, and (2) passage of the anti-poll tax bill and final house-cleaning of the pro-Hitler Poll Taxers now infesting the capital.

Hold Final Rites for Charles H. Dodge, Revered Pioneer

The late Charles H. Dodge, who passed away Dec. 27, 1942, at his home in Inglewood, was laid to rest last Wednesday.

Funeral rites were conducted by Father McCormick at the Hardin Funeral Home and his final resting place is at Holy Cross cemetery.

Before coming to California, Mr. Dodge had made history in the state of Missouri as one of its outstanding businessmen.

More than 30 years ago when he became a citizen of California, he became cashier for what was then called the First National Trust bank of San Diego.

The type of service rendered by Mr. Dodge in this position of honor and trust is most eloquently expressed by the vice president of the same banking firm, which is now a part of the great Bank of America system. A letter from him addressed to Mr. Dodge's widow states:

"My dear Mrs. Dodge:

"I have been out of town for about a week so that your advices of the death of my old friend, your husband, did not reach me until this morning.

"Needless to say, I am very much shocked at his passing away, and I want you to know that in all of the years that Mr. Dodge worked for us we never had a more faithful employe. In those years he handled all of the sums of money going in and out of the bank, running into millions of dollars annually, and never a cent was lost. I hope that he did not suffer at the last, and I know that you are going to find much comfort in the fact that he has proven himself so fine a citizen.

"My deepest sympathy and that of all of the force here that knew your husband so well, goes to you.

"Sincerely,
G. A. DAVIDSON,
Vice President."

Expressive of the esteem in which Mr. and Mrs. Dodge were held by the citizens of the community is a scroll presented them just one week before the pioneer's passing.

Artistically inscribed on elaborate parchment paper, the scroll reads:

"TO THE DODGES

"Friendly scroll bearing a token of friendship and love from friends whose names are inscribed hereon—

"Anna and Thadeus Brown, Caroline and Alfred Rivers, Eva and Harry Skans, Catharine and Jessie Reeves, Elcora and Nelson Jefferson, George and Morgan Robinson, Doris Leon and Harry Shackelford, Tommy and Dr. Claude Hudson, Lillian and Emanuel Harris, Dee Vada and John Sommerville, Edna and Mitchell Robinson, Jennie Bruington, Louise Skans, Esther Bruce, Bessie Burke, and Nella and Louis Blodgett."

Mr. Dodge was born Mar. 28, 1868.

Courier Hits Randolph's March Ruse

be a march, and when.

"Last week's Pittsburgh Courier carried an interview with Mr. Randolph in which he was quoted as again saying: 'We've got to march on Washington,' but when pressed for specific information, he stated vaguely that the movement plans a conference in Chicago in May, at which time 'plans are to be made relative to strategy for the enterprise.'

"We are not authorities on organizing marches to Washington or any other point, but it is difficult to see why it should require all this time to get down to the business of marching.

"Mr. Randolph has frequently cited the evils which exist and no person disputes him. Well-attended mass meetings have been staged in metropolitan centers, indicating that there are many Negroes willing to join in such a march. What, then, is the holdback?

"What strategy is required for a march on Washington other than walking or riding toward that city—assuming the desire to march?

"Mr. Randolph says, 'This is the method by which we can establish our status of equality.' If true, the hesitancy about staging the march is the more incomprehensible. There must be millions of Negroes who would be willing to march to Washington with the assurance that the journey would result in ushering in the interracial millenium.

"If there is to be no march, we think Mr. Randolph should honestly say so and stop alternately arousing and dashing the hopes of his followers.

"Personally, we have never believed such a march would accomplish anything worthwhile, but we shall be glad to see our position disproved. If we believed such a march would 'establish our status of equality,' we would urge that it begin at once, and not 'in May' or some indefinitely future date.

"If there is to be no march on Washington but merely some more mass meetings at infrequent intervals, we suggest that the movement disband and leave the field to the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People—with its 600 branches and 160,000 members—which has demonstrated its ability as a fighting representative of the American colored people since 1909 . . ."

Luther McClain Charged With 3 Counts of Felony

Luther Williams McClain, 19, "Potatoes" to his intimates, was arrested and charged last week with robbery, assault with a deadly weapon and grand auto theft.

The story goes thusly:

"Potatoes," who resides at 1140 S. Washington street, in San Bernardino, borrowed a car from a friend which contained only one gallon of precious fuel (which made matters very complicated for the local police).

W. Baucom, the friend, expected "Potatoes" to return the car when he had finished using it, in which case it would not take long considering that the car only had one gallon of gas to go on. But unfortunately Mr. Baucom left for Los Angeles to visit his father before the car was returned. It seems that Mr. Baucom is the proud owner of two vehicles, a new car and an old one, respectively. ("Potatoes" was loaned the old car.)

We leave Mr. Baucom, who is visiting his father, and return to "Potatoes," who, in leisurely fashion, is driving down the streets of San Bernardino. He gets on the highway and the car stops. Right. He is out of gas.

Enter new developments:

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Strickland are also driving down the highway upon which "Potatoes" and his gasless problem are parked.

Strickland, an automobile mechanic's helper, upon seeing the plight of a fellow motorist, felt that he could be of some assistance. He stopped his car and proceeded to inquire of Mr. McClain (Potatoes) if he could help. McClain said that he could.

Mr. Strickland backed his car up and parked behind that of "Potatoes" and offered to push him so as to get the machine started, but "Potatoes" declined the offer, saying that it would not work, but that Mr. Strickland might take a look and probably ascertain the trouble.

Strickland did and while he was absorbed in his observation of the gas tank with the aid of his flashlight, "Potatoes" whanged him over the head with what the doctors called a blunt instrument, but what Mrs. Strickland called a crank.

In a dazed condition Mr. Strickland fell away, at which time "Potatoes" proceeded to take over the family car of the Stricklands, which contained Mrs. Strickland, who upon counsel from her husband departed the vehicle in question.

She said that "Potatoes" then started for her when Mr. Strickland intercepted him with his flashlight, whereupon Mr. McClain (Potatoes) struck him a glancing blow with the aforesaid blunt instrument on the check. (Neither of Mr. Strickland's wounds needed medical attention, incidentally.)

While Mr. Strickland was recovering from this last encounter and Mrs. Strickland was screaming in the middle of the road, "Potatoes" took advantage of the situation and drove off in the Strickland car.

When the police arrived on the scene they found the abandoned car and upon checking found that it belonged to Mr. Baucom, who was visiting his father and who did not report a stolen car to the police, who did not realize that Mr. Baucom had two cars.

When Mr. Baucom returned he conducted the police to the whereabouts of Luther McClain (Potatoes), who admitted the whole thing except for one little detail. He said that he did not strike Mr. Strickland with a crank but that he did strike him with his fist. He was arrested on the spot.

On Jan. 4, McClain waived the preliminary hearing and pleaded guilty to the robbery charge. The district attorney dropped the other charges, in the interest of justice, or believing that he could make the robbery charge stick on the very elusive "Potatoes."

McClain is to be arraigned in Dept. 43, Superior court, at 9:30 a. m., on the morning of Jan. 20.

Worthy Matron Theresa Bailey Closes Year

The month of December marked the close of the year's work for Sister Theresa Bailey, Worthy Matron of the Queen of Sheba Chapter No. 7, OES. This was one of the best years and she was one of the best matrons which the chapter has experienced during its organization.

The first meeting, Dec. 1, was filled with business and the election of officers. The matron's retiring address was well composed and appreciably accepted. Many comments were heard on the speech.

She presented to each officer, each substitute and to each chairman of the various committees, who worked during the year, a nicely wrapped Xmas token of love and appreciation.

Sister Bailey was presented with 7 Key Switch Electric Signet, purchased from and shipped by the McCoy Masonic Supply Co. in New York. Sister Ida Mae Robertson made the presentation speech. Brother Herbert H. Lampkin, Grand Worthy Patron of the OES dedicated it and then Sister Bailey in turn presented it to the chapter as a gift. This one act will long be remembered and will live forever in the history of the chapter.

The second meeting in the month was an Xmas party for the entire chapter, given by the Worthy Matron, Sister Bailey. Hence the meeting of the chapter was short, as all were much concerned over what was taking place in the dining hall. After we had final remarks by Bro. T. B. Norman, Past Grand Patron, we marched down stairs where we found decorations of beautiful hollies, ferns and poinsettias. There was also a Xmas tree laden with beautiful gifts on it around it and below it.

There were eatables galore on the nicely arranged table which had as its centerpiece five statues of Santa Claus arranged in the form of a star. This attracted much attention, as exclamations of 'ohs' and 'ahs' were heard. Refreshments were served in buffet style. We were just one big happy family gathered around the fireside with our Matron acting as Santa.

Each member and visitor present received Xmas tokens from the Worthy Matron and many exchanged gifts. Everyone enjoyed the party and was glad to be a part of it. Thus ended the harmonious, peaceful and prosperous year 1942.

The seven various chapters of Los Angeles held their Joint Installation at the Masonic Hall on December 18 in the afternoon.

The hall was filled to capacity, with many standing. The officers were lovely to look upon. Special mention of the out-going Matrons (1942) is made here in that each were dressed alike and wore accessories which were alike. They were dressed likewise when they entered in 1941. Baskets of flowers decorated the large hall. They were artistically placed in front of the large dias.

The tables of the secretary and treasurer were laden with gifts for the outgoing officers.

We were very proud of our Matron, Sister Bailey, when she was called upon to lead the "National Negro Anthem". Queenly dressed and wearing a corsage of three beautiful orchids, with dignity and poise, she lifted her melodious voice and all knew that she really sang.

After the installation the gifts needed rest. Hats off to Theresa Bailey.

Netherlands Race Seaman Is Decorated

LONDON—Heroic lifesaving in shark-infested waters in the Caribbean has brought signal honors to colored Able Seaman Cecil Desmond Woods of the Netherlands West Indies. The tanker on which Woods was serving was dogged for four hours by an enemy U-boat in the Caribbean. The ship sought desperately to evade the sea raider, but finally four torpedoes crashed into her hull and she sank in five minutes.

The colored seaman plunged into the water. Despite the darkness of a moonless night, he caught sight of the ship's Second Cook, who could not swim and gave him his own life belt. He then hurried to the assistance of the Third Officer who was on the verge of going down. After hauling the officer aboard a raft, Woods swam to the Chief Engineer, who was swimming about badly injured. He pulled the engineer aboard the raft but the engineer died ten minutes later. The colored seaman, with another crew member, then rowed the raft 15 miles to land.

The fifteen crew members, who were lost, were the first victims of the U-boat campaign in the Caribbean.

Recognition of Woods' courage came last month when the Royal Humane Society of London announced that its decoration, the Ribbon of the Bronze Medal of the Society, had been awarded to Woods. The decoration is in the form of a ribbon because the Society, owing to the scarcity of metals, is not presenting the actual medal until after the war. A check for 25 pounds sterling goes with the decoration.

The Government of Curacao, Netherlands West Indies, and private quarters in Curacao have sent money and flowers to the mother of the seaman to express their admiration for his valor. Woods' mother lives on the Island of Saba, also in the Dutch West Indies.

1943
A NEW Year For ALL Of Us

GONE, beyond recall, is the year we knew as 1942.
WE live now in the NEW year of 1943.
WHAT will 1943 bring to us — to the individuals of this community? None of us may now know the answer to that question.

BUT we DO know that it will bring certain general things that are ever with us: Sickness and health . . . happiness and sadness . . . birth . . . and . . . Death . . .

JUST as you choose your physician for a coming birth, and for sickness, is it not wise to choose now the institution which will serve you in Your Time Of Need? Just as you choose your home, your insurance company, and other IMPORTANT things, you should also choose the Mortician who seems best suited to your needs.

OUR representative, or the members of this firm personally, will be glad to show you and explain fully the advantages which our clients receive. Start the New Year right by attending to this important matter at once. It will save you time, money and worry when such service as ours is needed, whether it be this month, this year . . . or any year.

Race Track GOSSIP

By Jay Gould

The three glamour girls this week are Genevieve Lee, Vivian Washington and Mrs. Jewell Washington.

The best dressed women of the week are Mrs. Bessie Jones, Mrs. Bernice Verrett and Mrs. Fay Batchelor of 'Frisco.

Thanks to the many kind readers of this column for the many beautiful Xmas cards and the season's greetings throughout the country and wishing all a prosperous year for 1943.

After being demoted from playboy top ranks to the shipyards, the many big dough boys seem to take it with a smile. The same goes for the playgirls.

A. Love (I am 50-50 owner of Jack's Tavern) with a six thousand dollar business a month but never bought a Xmas drink for any of his many customers during the holidays.

The lady that blasted this writer to that beauty operator on Webster street, saying she didn't hand her taxi fare ought to know that he didn't know she wanted her dinner or taxi fare. The lady operator seems to get a big kick while broadcasting and knocking in front of an audience who didn't seem to appreciate it.

Eva (I am a beauty operator) Kelly is just about one of the swellest people in town.

Ivy Osborne and Mary Thompson, two local beauticians, are also a hundred percent good with plenty of customers.

Mr. Pleas Scaggs has skipped town, probably for Australia, which leaves Adell Ward, playgirl, with a sad face.

Billy Richmond, Percy Williams, Mr. Hollywood, and Buck Cannon buying scotch. Grand Dad and choice drinks for the bunch day and night which proves they are O. K.

Did you know that Nellie Winslow, manicurist from Los Angeles, skipped to Seattle on an airplane to visit her sister. When she returns she will say the marriage vows to Lester Albert, top notch sport of L. A.

Judson Grant, Mark and Louis King, Jim Roberts and Nat Earl have their fingers crossed rooting for no rations in women.

Tom Schaefer, one time New York badman and gangster: Since you've got money you don't show no more. We are all the same people.

Spotlight girls for 1943 are Miss Olivette Miller, vocalist with Noble Sissle's band, now at the Trianon Ballroom, Los Angeles, Savannah Churchill with Ben Carter's band now playing the Swing Club in Hollywood, Mabel Scott with Jimmie Lunceford, and Hazel Scott, the piano player and song stylist. Some pretties.

Sadie Roby, Minnie Lee, Adell Ward and Jean ex-Green haven't been down to play the big time with Peggy Armstrong and Irene Walton who ringside all events.

Have you spied the lovely ring Pat Patterson has been wearing since Xmastide. A yuletide gift from Harry, boys.

Only fine is Lovey Ford who was one of Rosa Foster's guests Xmas eve night.

Please believe me, the town jumped over the holidays. Folks jammed all the bright spots and there were many more folks out doing 'Frisco than have been seen in many a moon. The Alabam, Jack's Tavern, Town Club, Rendezvous, Golden Slipper, Backstage, Chinese Sky Room, Show Boat, and Mery-Go-Round are only some of the spots we visited to find them jammed.

Loretta Scott seen out dressed in a marvelous tailor made imported English suit and a brand new idea in ladies' hats. You probably don't think she is lovely, but boom-boom.

Thomas Lee Allen is doing alright. You can find him at 1908 Sutter stret.

Vivian Jackson and Clidell doing the town up brown and informing us that they now operate the Jackson Hotel, 1661-63 Post street.

America's women are truly the loveliest in the world. The sight at all the pretties Xmassing around was something to tell the folks off about.

Helen Swan, Robert Jackson, Samuel Washington, Bernice Dennis, A. B. Birdson, Juanita Hayes, all of Los Angeles, came to 'Frisco for the holidays and certainly played hard.

Pretty Zenobia Ashford is really missed around the city. I am certain that special parties will be glad when school is out.

Arthur Davis was sporting to the sky Xmas day.

Miss Mary Terressan and Willie Hood of Dallas, Texas will soon be altar treking and were gathering some pre-atmosphere over the holidays.

Jesse Connor is on the loose. He is playing the field and is marrying nobody.

Catherine Seals, one of the town's loveliest pretties, seen in and out of everywhere it is possible to go.

J. Wiley and L. Mouton were seen playing in all the clubs around town.

Lieut. M. H. Deaner and Ruby M. Barton were a most charming couple.

Some of the ladies who survived the President Coolidge's ill fated trip were visiting the Yuletide celebrations in the gayer spots of town.

Berrie Clinton: Don't be like that. Everybody in the Town Club t'other night was one hundred percent with you and you got tanked to the gills and cursed everybodys out. Boom boom.

Steve Broady: Why did you send me six dollars worth of papers COD when I asked you to send the agent's prices and fifty papers until I increased the order?

Sweetwine, the bartender at Jack's Tavern, and the best Zombie maker on the Pacific Coast, bar none, gave a birthday dinner which cost him only $4.50 per plate and grabbed everybody's check and said to his girl friend "Forget it."

Mrs. Lena Jeffries and James Jeffries Barbecue at 1810 Post St. is where you get the finest meals at the most popular prices and the owners handle you with kid gloves. Such courtesy and service is really the spirit.

George Porter, St. Louis Argus columnist was in town and seeing the city over the Yuletide spell.

Calvin Vincent battling with seven or eight boxers at one time but he managed to entertain them all. Some boxer.

Saw Miss Bunnie Roberts whopin' 'em up in Julius Delifus' Havana Tavern and kissing Leon Alexander. Nice people and good spenders.

See Ida King is now in Denver, Colo. She has sent more men to the canvas than anyone I know or the G men got them. She must be tops.

Little Hicky of the Bay Meadows Smoke Shop: Don't fall so far behind the times. Keep up with the parade as the Chicago Defenders are only a dime all over the world.

The rent control by the Government has saved poor people millions and millions of dollars in all big cities and the landlords have not even squawked with the exception of a few boobs.

Mrs. Johnson, in the beauty parlor from three thirty until eight thirty, which $8, but she looks like a million.

Freddie Reed beat the game at Bay Meadows for $2400 in the last two days.

Buck Cannon, with four girls, sitting at the smoke shop behind a 5G bankroll and saying "Give everybody a paper."

Clarence D. Lewis of Oakland, over in 'Friseo for the Xmas parties.

Warrick Miles, Hope Thornton, and Ponie Taylor seen in the night spots Xmas Day.

Big, tough and hard to handle: Walter Wiggin, Sugar Baby, Bebe Parker, Archie Hamilton and Eva Kelly.

Sonny Montgomery of Oakland is betting them to the sky saying "Come on boys and let your conscience be your limit."

Calvin Vincent is just the same as "Coal Oil" Johnny, a big bettor and a fast handler in any game and will give the boys a headache if he gets lucky.

Bruce Kinley, Chicago, who tossed away ten thousand dollars in two months while in Los Angeles, against the girls, cocktail bars, different games, and the races. Bruce had a handbook which cost him plenty to fit up but the chief asked him please not to open.

Anna L. Lewis, Pontiac, Mich. was a gay visitor around the night clubs during the seasonal goings on.

Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Hush, Dallas, Tex., are new residents of the West Coast. They were honored guests of the charming Mrs. Myrtle Rector. It seems that Texas has lost another of its popular couples.

Mr. Lester Buchanan, Prairie View State College, was the guest of Mrs. Myrtle Rector. He is a friend of the popular Miss Zenobia Ashford.

Will Elta Jean Wooden, better known as Nina Vernon, please drop her pal a line at 720 Ramona street, Palo Alto, Calif.?

Louis Kenner, popular man among the club circles, passed away unexpectedly last Tuesday. His many friends offered beautiful and heartfelt remembrances.

Mrs. Willie M. Hodge of New York and Mr. Tracy of Los Angeles were seen having a swell time in the Town Club.

Emery Haller's divorce becomes final New Year's Eve. Which chick is he going to marry?

Rebecca Roberts out having a grand time at the Club Alabam.

Loretta Scott and Willie Bea McCovey, two of the Bay area's most charming personalities and pretties, seen out Xmas Eve and Xmas Day having a swell time.

Saw Lillian Patterson out around the spots. Oh! what a lovely creature.

Little Willie was in and out of the night clubs Xmas.

Mrs. Olivia Ball and her two very lovely sisters are here from Los Angeles visiting Mrs. Florence Thompson for the holidays. They were all seen taking in the night spots and going over big in Jack's Tavern.

Mr. Carlos and Miss Palmette and Mr. and Mrs. Al Lewis were out having a good time at the clubs. Included in the party were Dickie Boy Lewis and his wife, Gladys, who are entertaining their brother in law, Al, who is just from the East.

Mr. Louis Sperginer, leading guitar player, was seen out with pretty Miss Dorothy Boome, Xmas Day at Jack's Tavern. They were guests of Mrs. Myrtle Rector Xmas morning for her famous egg nog party.

Mrs. Pearl Taylor and Mr. Joe Thompson enjoying life at the Havana Club.

Mr. Clarence Godchaux and his wife, Panchita, were out playing at the Havana on Fillmore with some of the gang. They ringside all fights and big events in 'Frisco.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry C. Williams, Monterey, Calif., knocking themselves out doing the spots.

Nathan Robin of juke box fame and his wife, Ella, had an open house all through the holidays celebrating the visit of Nathan's mother who is here from St. Louis.

We top our hats to Eugene Sorral for his many gifts to children and different people on Xmas.

Mildred (I am a waitress at Jack's) Ivy was married t'other day which left somebody very unhappy.

James Hill and Johnny Cobb still knocking themselves out of the Town Club.

Wonder what happened to Ruth Whitfield at the Savoy dance hall in Oakland?

Did Pat Patterson really run into the door? That's an awfully peculiar looking eye, pretty.

Myrtle (I am a waitress at Jack's) Jones is cute and easy on the eyes.

This writer would like everybody in the world to know I have played the game fair and square and on the up and up since 1885 with all the people I have ever met so if there is anyone in the world who can say I owe them a penny write or wire to 1716 Webster street, c/o Jay Gould.

1942 Public Improvements in L. A. Show Big Increase

Despite war time conditions public improvements completed and accepted in Los Angeles during the past year, ending December 31, totaled $8,284,195, a substantial increase over 1941, according to data filed this week with the Board of Public Works by its bureau of engineering.

WPA funds were used to finance $6,430,852 of the cost of the public works projects completed during 1942 and the city financed the remainder of the improvement program.

Reports to the board show the following improvement work completed: 32 miles of sanitary sewer lines, 23 miles of storm drains; 51 miles sidewalks; five miles streets paved; and 40 miles of streets improved with rock and oil.

Until the war is won by the United Nations the policy of the city and the Federal government calls for construction work to be limited to projects necessary to the war effort, or essential to public safety or health. Four projects under this policy now under way include two units of Alameda street in the harbor area and two sewer contracts at the municipal airport. Cost of these projects will total $379,934.

The amount of public work scheduled for Los Angeles during 1943 will depend upon the approval of all proposed improvements by the War Public Works division of the FWA. Applications have been filed for the construction of Harbor Parkway from C street to Battery street, harbor area, at an estimated cost of $1,198,000, and other work considered necessary to the war effort.

NAACP Counsel to Argue School Equalization Case

LOUISVILLE, Ky.—The motion to dismiss the action taken by the NAACP against the University of Kentucky in behalf of Charles Lamont Eubanks here will be argued January 23, 1943, it was announced this week by Thurgood Marshall and Prentice Thomas, NAACP special counsel.

This case filed in the Federal Court at Lexington is one of the several in which the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People has taken part in an attempt to equalize educational facilities throughout the country.

Eubanks, an honor graduate of Central High School, Louisville, Kentucky, is asking damages of the registrar of the University of Kentucky for refusal to permit him to register for courses leading to a degree in Civil Engineering.

The suit included a prayer for declaratory judgment and permanent injunction against the policies and practices of the University in refusing to permit qualified Negroes to courses not offered to them elsewhere in the state.

Since the filing of the case numerous written pleadings have been entered, one of which was a recent motion for judgment on behalf of the plaintiff. The defendants answer has been continuously delayed pending the adjustment of certain legal technicalities as to proper parties.

McNutt Stand on Capital Transit Wins Approval

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Learning Paul V. McNutt, chairman of War Manpower Commission had peronally addressed a meeting of the Capital Transit workers in an effort to balk any conflicts stemming from feeling against the employment of Negro street car and bus drivers as ordered in the recent FEPC directive the NAACP sent this week the following wire to McNutt:

"Our congratulations on your recent address to members of the Amalgamated Association of Street Railway and Motor Coach Unions. With the president the NAACP takes the stand that all available manpower must be utilized to make real the winning of the peace and toward this accomplishment, discrimination and segregation must be absolutely abolished."

Both W. D. Mahon, president of the AFL Amalgamated Association of street Railway and Motor Coach Unions and J. G. Bigelow, president of the Unions' Washington local appealed to white workers to accept Negroes in their ranks.

Savannah Forms Nation's Largest NAACP Youth Unit

SAVANNAH, Ga.—The NAACP branch here ended its membership drive recently with more than 1,350 new members, 503 of whom were youths, between the ages of 16 and 20. The Savannah Youth Council is now the largest NAACP unit of its kind in the country. Not only did the youth here join the NAACP individually but 13 high school classes, Boy Scout Troops and Youth Clubs took out Crisis memberships for their groups.

The membership drive was directed by Ella J. Baker, Assistant Field Secretary of the NAACP's National Office, who spent an entire month supervising the campaign. Assisting in the drive was a membership committee headed by Dr. J. W. Jamerson, jr., who had already zoned the city and laid the ground work for the campaign. Part of the plan for the drive included the formation of a Century Club which is purely an honorary organization membership which depends upon the recruiting of at least 100 members for the branch during a drive. The first Century Club in Savannah, Georgia, Joseph Green, who reported 285 members; Mrs. Stella Jones Reeves who redorted 175; Dr. Ralph Mark Gilbert, 113; Bostic Williams, 101 and Mrs. Eugenia Diaz who reported 199.

$207,356 Spent for Fighting Infantile Paralysis at 'Skegee

A grand total of $207,356 has been spent for Infantile Paralysis work at the Tuskegee Institute Paralysis Center, Tuskegee, Alabama, it was announced this week by the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis.

A thirty-five bed Infantile Paralysis hospital was officially opened on January 15, 1941. It forms a special unit of the John A. Andrews Memorial Hospital which is located on the beautiful campus of Tuskegee Institute.

It consists of a three story fireproof building equipped with the most up-to-date facilities including a gymnasium with treatment pool, whirl-pool arm and leg baths and electro-theropeutic machines, a chief surgeon's room, plaster brace-fitting and physical therapy treatment rooms, spacious sun deck, patient wards and laboratories.

In addition to serving as a treatment center for Infantile Paralysis the hospital will be a research and training center for Negro doctors and nurses who will become Infantile Paralysis specialists in their various communities. Study at Tuskegee has shown the great need for such specialists as 20 per cent of all the crippling among Negro children has been due to Infantile Paralysis while the facilities for aiding victims of this disease has been woefully lacking in the past.

'Witnesses' in Jersey Face Indictment

BAYONNE, N. J.—Following arraingment on charges of disorderly conduct and prostitution subsequent to their dismissal from Hudson County jail, five of the ten Negro women who had been held in incommunicado for six months as "witnesses" to the operation of local vice establishments were released into the custody of William George, Hudson county prosecuting attorney, who appeared in their defense here and who is responsible for the original Hudson County jailing of the women, Donald Crichton, NAACP counsel announced this week.

Growing out of the Donovan-Hague feud, the Bayonne arrests of the women were based on their own forced testimony given at the Jersey City trial of tavern owners on vice charge, George, the prosecuting attorney, who held the women in the Hudson County jail has been their only adviser since last June and has repeatedly told them they did not need a lawyer, Crichton reported.

If they are indicted on the disorderly conduct and prostitution charges, they will be tried by George, the prosecuting attorney, the same person who "advised" them, kept them in jail six months and into whose custody they have now been released.

Jeff Reports on Xmas Welfare

Although the change in vacation dates necessitated the cancellation of the children's party which Jefferson high school always gives for its adopted families, the Welfare committee made its report on Christmas activities last week. Eighteen families were given bags of clothing and of toys and candy for the children and checks for three or five dollars, according to the size of the family, for the Christmas dinner. The total expenditure of cash was seventy-five dollars.

Of this sum, the P-T A gave fifteen dollars and the faculty gave twenty-seven dollars, ninety-two cents. Miss Hazel Woodruff, a retired teacher, sent in her check for five dollars. The other sums were contributed by the following school organizations: Scientific Explorers, Secretarial Efficiency club, Chinese club, Latin club, Arts and Crafts, Cosmetology club, the Welfare Corps, and the Toastmistress and Gavel club.

The Secretarial Efficiency club also sent boxes to six soldiers; the Girls' Military Victory Corps sent boxes to eight soldiers; the Girls' Welfare Victory corps sent cards to the children at Olive View and Duarte sanitariums; and the girls' dress and welfare committees made and filled the stockings with candy which went to the adopted families.

The bags and the checks were delivered after school on the afternoon of Friday, Dec. 11, by members of the faculty.

November Gasoline Sales Soared

SACRAMENTO—The wave of buying which immediately preceded gasoline rationing in California was reflected in the November sales reported today by Richard E. Collins, Chairman of the State Board of Equalization.

The November gasoline distribution amounted to 177,831,753 gallons on which the Board levied a tax of $5,334,952.61. This represented a reduction of only 1 per cent under the same month of the previous year as compared with an average loss of 15 per cent for the last six months period.

The November total was substantially higher than the $4,660,468.64 assessed on October sales which totaled 155,348,954 gallons.

The total tax for 11 months of 1942 amounts to $53,465,832.98 as compared with $58,231,517.06 for the same period of 1941.

Eisenhower Praises Race Troops

NORTH AFRICA (Via Cable)—Lieutenant General Dwight D. Eisenhower, Commander-in-Chief of the Allied Force in North Africa, has commended the courageous service of the American Negroes in the United States Army during action in North Africa. Among the American units in those operations are several Ordnance ammunition battalions and one Quartermaster Truck Regiment composed of colored troops.

General Eisenhower reports that the Negro soldiers had taken part effectively in the campaign. Americans of the colored race should be proud of the service of their representatives in combat, the General continued. He cited especially the steadfastness and bravery of the Ordnance Company which successfully handled the delivery of high explosive bombs at Arzew, continuing to put the bombs ashore under heavy fire at this little port near Oran.

General Eisenhower said this demonstration of courage was a significant indication of what could be anticipated from American colored troops in the future.

Get the pattern of your life from God, then go about your work and be yourself.

NAACP Elections

Accomplishments of the local branch of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People during the last twelve months represent fresh vindication of that body's support of the militant leadership of its president, Att'y Thomas L. Griffith.

A tremendous organizational task was superbly discharged by "our" branch in entertaining the Thirty-fourth Annual Conference of the national body, an historic gathering which found Negro people speaking in wholehearted support of our country's war against Fascism and demanding vociferously the full extension of Negro rights now as a means of developing the full weight of America's mighty blow against her treacherous enemies.

The Conference further ranged itself in the front rank of win-the-war America by demanding a clamper upon the notorious Poll Tax Dies Committee, urged passage of anti-lynch and anti-poll tax legislation, and--O, sign of the times!--stifled an attempt by Negro reactionaries to whitewash company unions!

Of only slightly less significance was the local branch China Relief Rally at Riverside Breakfast Club, once again calling for extensive preparation. Here the story of the Negro's determination to overcome obstacles barring his full participation in the war effort was taken to a vast white audience, here was heard the great voice of Billie Hollidy intoning "Strange Fruit," magnificent anti-lynch song, before thousands who cheered her and that passionate statement of protest to the rafters.

More than that, the NAACP China Relief Bazaar was unprecedented and its accomplishments remarkable. It represented the thing that is most feared by the oppressors of mankind everywhere. It showed two great oppressed peoples at last realizing their common, anti-fascist struggle. It was a symbol of the KIND OF INTERNATIONAL, INTERRACIAL UNTY which will guarantee to the peoples of the world an enduring peace.

The thousands of dollars which were raised for Chinese relief dwindle in importance alongside the power of the blow dealt at the China Relief Bazaar--a blow against Togo aggression in Yunan province, a blow against Bilbo aggression in the state of Mississippi.

Att'y Griffith, under whose driving leadership the Bazaar realized its great success, may look to this as a real and lasting achievement.

The Association declared war upon housing restrictions which threaten Los Angeles' war effort through barring Negroes from homes near the war industries at which they are employed, as Griffith led the assault in a vital test case, that of the Lofton family in South Los Angeles, through unfriendly, local courts. That battle, one of the great hopes of the Negro people of Southern California, will press on to victory, just as in the bitterly contested Pasadena Swimming Pool Case, which ended in a clean triumph for the Association and its hard-hitting leader.

A limited listing of faithful NAACP workers, rank-and-file members who are always on the job would certainly include Mrs. Hazel Whitaker, Mr. Claude McKinney, Mr. J. H. Shackelford, Mr. Alert Baumann, Mr. George Beavers, Mr. Walter Gordon, sr., Mr. Frederick M. Roberts, Mr. Clarence Muse, and the late Charles Dodge.

1943's election should see a grateful stamp of approval upon the current Administration, along with fresh prodding that it step forward in shaping the destinies of what has become a vast industrial community during next year. The progressive trend of the last year of NAACP work indicates that given full reign and militant support, the body will chalk up its greatest victories during 1943.

New Congress and the Poll Tax

Most welcome dispatch out of Washington in the last month is that from militant Rep. Vito Marcantonio, whose new anti-poll tax bill will be introduced in the House of Representatives by the time you read this.

Unrelenting demand for passage of anti-poll tax legislation in the new session of Congress by an aroused American nation is the key to defeat of a foul coalition of Southern Democrats, Anti-New Deal Democrats and Republican reactionaries against every progressive measure the people of our country have won over the last ten years.

This Copperhead conspiracy in the United States Congress is supported by Fascist sections of the press, Messrs Hearst, McCormick, Patterson, and Howard; by Fascist sections of Big Business, the National Association of Manufacturers, Messrs Dupont and Crawford; by known Fascist politicians, Bilbo, Cox, Rankin, Wheeler, Vandenburg, etc. ad nauseum.

A People's Offensive against the very foundation of Fascist America, the Dixie poll tax South, is an historic demand of the next few months, -- it must drive through to victory! •

Attention Los Angeles Railway!

At the very heart of Los Angeles, from the Pershing Square Victory House, Rev. Clayton D. Russell, chairman of the Negro Victory Committee, blasted the Los Angeles Railway Company last Thursday.

Over 1500 citizens, the vast majority white, gathered in that Square, gave the fighting minister a swelling ovation that has, by now, become a familiar reverberation in the plush carpet offices of our "LARY".

Rev. Russell's denunciation of the firm's hiring policy, the short-sightedness of which denies thousands of Los Angeles war workers, white and black, adequate transportation, came as Negro citizens took over the bond selling house at Pershing Square to express their loyalty and determination to defeat America's enemies. For us, also, the celebration had added meaning, since it fell upon an anniversary of Lincoln's glorious Emancipation Proclamation.

L. A. Railway's refusal to employ Negroes as conductors and motormen is a severe blow to the war effort in Los Angeles. 300 vehicles are off L. A. Railway lines because of what must be termed, in view of the firm's racial policy, an artificial man-power shortage.

The President's Fair Employment Practice Committee has broken the defeatist opposition of transit companies in Washington and Detroit.

Our city is ready--and waiting. Come on, FEPC!

The New Governor

California's new governor, Earl Warren, takes office at a time of great decision, and a number of the greatest decisions affect the welfare and the future of the state's Negro citizenry.

California today is one of the most important industrial,--and agricultural--areas anywhere in the world. The products of this state alone might conceivably tip the scales in favor of a United Nations victory. Our planes and ships, our fields and factories, our men and women,--these are the substance of California's contribution to victory.

As Administrator for this vital war district, Gov. Warren faces great problems, problems of organization, problems of subordniating every other consideration to that of victory for our nation and for the United Nations.

In the past, there have been practices in California industry against Negroes which were damaging to the state economy, to the principle of democracy and, certainly, to the Negro people, themselves. Today, however, the problem of "the Negro in industry" has evaporated and our governmental officials are pledged to but one consideration, "man-power for victory."

Vast industrial areas in California are now facing, or will face, manpower, woman-power shortages. It is vital to the future of America as a free nation that every hand, black or white, be used to fill these shortages, whereever they occur.

But there exists in California powerful entrenched interests opposed to the employment of Negroes because of pre-war prejudice, a limited understanding of our nation's need, or, in some cases, a determination to OBSTRUCT the progress of a People's War. Whatever the reason, those who maintain employment bias today are playing the Axis game.

In fulfillment of his all-out war pledge, Gov. Earl Warren, we trust, will move vigorously against industrial discrimination in California. As he carries out the win-the-war policy of our fighting nation, as he moves aganst practices which operate toward defeating the war, Jim-Crow, discrimination, etc., he may feel assured of the unified support of the Negro population of the Golden State.

"THAT CAR IS A WEAPON TOO—SHARE IT!!"

★ THE WORLD THIS WEEK

NO BLUEPRINT

Vice-President Wallace's plan for a post-war world system included no blueprint, but cast considerable light on the kind of system it would have to be. Among plans for the defeated nations, he proposed not only military but psychological disarmament. This would include "supervision, or at least inspection, of the school system of Germany and Japan." Surely there is no better place to begin a better world for tomorrow than among the school children today. Textbooks in all countries should be based on factual material, rather than on smooth, but semi-truthful pictures, that beget a wrong kind of nationalism. Too many writers of history for children wore pink kid gloves in the writing. Mr. Wallace suggested, as the guiding principle for international organization after the war, "the maximum of home rule that can be maintained along with the minimum of centralized authority, that must come into existence to give the necessary protection." He described four objectives--preservation of the liberty, equality, security and unity of the United Nations.

ROLL OUT THE BARREL

In the U. S. Naval Hospital at Oak Knoll, Calif. are many recuperating sailors injured in the Pacific battles. A barrel has been set up in the administration building lobby of Richmond Shipyard No. 2 for gifts of comfort for the wounded heroes. Cigarettes, candy, cards, hair oil, razors, shaving lotions, vases, mirrors, pencils and, of all things--Cashmere Bouquet soap-are especially desired! The boys also need white cotton socks, sizes 10½ to 12. Contributions within the shipyards have been generous but this doesn't prevent anyone from sending in his token of gratitude to these most honored guests of our state.

NORTHERN SAGA

At the headquarters of the Alaska Defense Command, last week, American and Canadian forces held holiday services and parties where, a year ago, only wilderness existed and where only an occasional Indian, Eskimo or trapper passed through. Winding through the Canadian Rockies, bridged over mountain rivers, passing a frozen lake where deer tracks mark the snow, the Alcan Highway sounds like an ideal vacation trip. But thanks, even if there were gas and tires, we'd wait a while! That's because it's still a military road--and the Army had just one idea--to slug its way through the wilderness from America's war production centers to the strategic bases in Alaska. When the Japs struck at Pearl Harbor, we had available for mobilization in the war effort the world's greatest transportation system. We had a vast system of highways and motor vehicles ready for service in the war, such as no other nation on earth possessed! Desperately needed was the "Northwest Passage on wheels". Through it, we could help Russia and China, aim more potently at the heart of Japan. Now the Army has its route, runs its truck convoys over the 1630 miles of road 24 hours a day. One operator drives a few hours north, turns his truck over to the next man, waits for a convoy going south and drives a truck back over the route. No hamburger stands as yet--but 24-hour kitchens dot the route! Even with thermometers reading "below", the way remains open and the huge trucks rumble steadily north and south--the music for our northern saga of war.

PUBLIC PROTECTOR

Newspapers remain the best protection the public has against wrongdoers, the Massachusetts Judicial Council asserted last week. The State Legislature requested the council to study bills to amend libel laws along with other statutes. The council reported: "Whatever criticism may be made, legitimately, of the press . . . the fearless exposure of evil by the press should not be hampered by the uncertainty which now exists as to the laws." As we watch the evil effects on the public of wrongful press controls in the Axis countries, we are becoming increasingly aware of the value of a free press and desirous of preserving its services to its community.

DINNER BY WIRE

"One focal point of the future home will be the kitchen," said Dr. Charles Allen Thomas, Director of Central Research Laboratories, Monsanto Chemical Company. Dr. Thomas recognizes that during the war years when women work for a salary, they are apt to form habits which will not include a return to the housekeeping of the past decades. He believes that in metropolitan areas, homes may have no kitchens, and food will be sent in by pneumatic delivery tube. Fun, if it works. But what of the way to a man's heart?

★ LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

To the Editor:

As we approach the end of the most successful year in the history of the NAACP I take this means, on behalf of the Association, to express to editors our gratitude for the part which the Negro press played in achieving that record. The support you have given in your editorials, news columns, cartoons and illustrations has been of infinite aid in the fight for unlimited opportunity and equality for the Negro which we have made. Greatly increased financial support has followed which has enabled the NAACP to establish a much needed Washington Bureau; to win many battles for job opportunity; equal education; more intelligent presentation of the Negro in motion pictures, on the stage and in magazines and other publications.

The year ahead promises greater problems but with them greater opportunity in tackling those problems. The new Congress will be dominated by an unholy alliance of anti-labor, anti-liberal, and, of course following these, anti-Negro southern Democrats and northern Republicans. Our work is cut out for us in the fight for anti-lynching, anti-poll tax and other remedial legislations. But we are not alarmed in the least by the difficulties this bloc will create. The continued support we confidently anticipate from you will make the NAACP an even more effective weapon for the Negro and for democracy. With it we shall be able to win even greater victories in fighting brutality against Negro soldiers and civilians, wiping out still more of the inequalities in education and teachers' salaries, carry to the U. S. Supreme Court the Texas case to outlaw Democratic white primaries in the South, obtain justice in the courts for Negroes victimized because of their race, and make the Four Freedoms more of a reality for American Negroes.

May we wish you all success in the new year.

Cordially,
WALTER WHITE, Sec'y

With great fan-fare from the reactionary press, America this week took unto itself a Lady Astor,—author of 'The Women," style queen, and millionaire's wife, Clare Boothe Luce.

An arch-reactionary who looks forward to electing a nice, National Association of Manufacturers, Republican President in 44, Miss Luce had some rough experieences at the hands of the common peepul during her swank campaign.

One factory in the ladies home district invited her in to talk to the men about the charms of republicanism. In the midst of her oration, there peeled forth over the company loudspeaker that popular number, 'Blues In The Night."

★ SPREADING JOY

First, I want to wish for all of my readers a Happy New Year and may I add that I make this with a spirit of optimism, for I know that in spite of all of the death and carnage about us, if we will it so each and all of us can find something to make us happy. So it will be a Happy New Year if you look for happiness and do the thing that you know will bring happiness to others.

I cannot subscribe to the theory that we must learn to hate our enemies in order to win the war or for any reason. The heart cannot contain both love and hate at the same time.

Hate poisons the mind and destroys love and the hater, too.

There has been much talk about the United Nations winning because, as Joe Louis so aptly put it, "We're on God's side." I am sure we will win the war if we have more men and more guns than the Axis, provided we get them first.

I am also sure that we can even win the peace after the war if we remain on God's side.

I do hope the world leaders will diligently search and find out what side is God's side.

To the humble Christian, the unlettered man, it is very easy to determine which is God's side.

When we approach the peace table to write the new world order, we must have with us the spirit of the Prince of Peace and his philosophy, that is, if we are to assume ourselves that we are on the Lord's side.

Remember what the Prince of Peace said: Thou Shall Love The Lord, Thy God, With All Thy Heart, Soul and Mind. This is the first great commandment. The second is like unto it. Thou Shalt Love Thy Neighbor As Thyself. On these two commandments hang all of the law and the prophets.

To be on God's side, we must accept these two laws in theory and practice.

To be on God's side, America must put into practice the provisions of the Constitution in Georgia and Texas as well as in the Northern states.

England will have found out on whose side India is before she can assure the world and herself that she is on God's side.

These and many other changes must take place in the hearts of men and nations before we achieve the peace so much desired by all of the world.

I am fully persuaded that the world is getting better. Coming events cast their shadows before them. Never before in the history of the world were so many people praying for peace.

Never before in the history of the world have men of all nations and classes realized that call it whatever you wish, there is a power drawing the nations together under one banner, the banner that proclaims the Fatherhood of God and the Brotherhood of Man.

No man can be on God's side who refuses to accept the truth thatt all men are of one blood and treat them as equals.

Again, the world is praising the valor of the Negro soldier.

Gen. Eisenhower, in an interview the other day, said that the Negro people of the world should be proud of their soldiers for the brilliant service they are rendering in Africa. Of course, this praise is nothing new to us. We have heard it before,—in every war since Crispus Attucks showed young America how a Negro could die for his country.

I remember what Irvin Cobb, then a war correspondent, said of our boys at Bellow Woods. He said, "From now on when I hear the word, "nigger," to me it will mean an American gentleman."

Throughout the ages,, by our Christ-like humility, by our patience and long-suffering, we have shown ourselves to be on God's side.

Before the war is won and the lights go on again, our white brother must find a place beside us.

This is the first week of the New Year and I wish to do honor to a distinguished pair of old sweethearts. If I can warm their hearts, mine will be warm all the year. They are Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Roberts of Elsinore, who have been married 65 years. Both are hale and hearty and clear of vision and are leading the Parade of Old Sweethearts into 1943. May God Bless Them!

★ W. J. WHEATON

"We must not be so illogical as to try to impose the principles of freedom upon other peoples if we are not practicing the same philosophy ourselves." We quote the words of the venerable Senator George W. Norris of Nebraska. We are wondering if the great Progressive had in mind the hypocritical, pharisaic democracy as demonstrated in this--his and my country.

In all of this post war planning for a world democracy and the freedoms which shall be enjoyed by "All the peoples of the world," is it not an irony that any group, especially in a nation which boasts that it is the cradle; the birthplace of democracy as applied to all, should preach the theory of Freedom and equality when its escutcheon is blackened by the bar--sinister of a racial prejudice so vicious that it seeks, even by murderous deeds, to keep one tenth of its most loyal, submerged in economic slavery? Yet that is so: The Negro has to fight tooth and nail for the right to earn his bread, even by the sweat of his brow. Is the spirit of democracy to enact laws which confine to the ghetto a people because of color?

We ask those questions knowing that they exist and are so flagrant that even he who runs may read. Knowing them the next move is, are we planning to eradicate them? True we are holding mass meetings and passing resolutions, but has there been any meeting among those who represent us to work out a strategy whereby we can educate Mr. and Mrs. Public-Opinion of the justices of our cause.

Our lone legislative representative, Mr. A. G. Hawkins, has a very worthy program to place before the legislative body when it convenes in its January session. Are we going to get behind him and work with him for its success, or are we going to allow selfish and petty personal ambitions stand in the way of a successful presentation. Our legislature meets in bi-session. There is a month's interim. Bills are presented in the first session and come up for enactment in the second.

Why not see that during the interim we will know just how to plan for the final presentation and have a line on who to look for support.

Let us not kid ourselves in the belief that the measure will not have serious opposition. It will; but a valliant fight will work wonders. Who knows but that the success of this legislation will not start the avalanche of public opinion which will be of such compelling force as to smother completely such demagogues as the Talmages, Bilbos and others of that ilk.

This is a grand opportunity for California to tell the rest of this nation that there is one State in the 48 that believes in the democracy as written in the Constitution by the founders of the Republic.

But in the main there is a streak of silver in the cloud. The streak is the impelling fact that we realize that there are other peoples who have felt and still are feeling the iron heel of oppression. With those peoples we have a common bond of sympathy.

We are learning that self centralization is not broadening; that we must fight in the common cause against the prejudice which blinds men to the human right to happiness. We are learning that if we would gain those inherent rights we must join with the other underprivileged to throw off the yoke.

We still place our faith in the women of the underprivileged to lead in the fight. A fight that does not center in California, nor in any one city of the State but is universal.

But lets start with the Hawkins program and push it through and over. When that is done the slide will start the avalanche, and it will be well, not alone for the Negroes of California, nor any of its divisions, but will be for the betterment of every dark hued man, woman, and child on this earth.

Once again we say to our women: Live up to your motto, create a standard for all to follow, and exemplify truly that "Deeds Not Words," is not an idle phrase.

My wish is for a Happy and Prosperous New Year for all.

of America's war effort, threatening the lives and future of every man, woman and child in the nation. For it is in the South that native Fascism is most firmly entrenched. And it is from this lice-infested base that today's powerful reactionary conspiracy against our country is launched.

I wish to be clear. There are men in America who desire to betray America. They are Hitlerites. They are native Fascists. They operat from an organization called the aNtional Association of Manufacturers. (They are, it is true, opposed by a section of patriotic, pro-war capital, but that opposition is weak and unorganized; is, in fact, swept relentlessly into the whirlpool of Fascist treason through old habits of labor-hatred, of Negro-baiting.)

The Poll Tax South is the first line of defense of Fascist America. When combined with Anti-Roosevelt Democrats and Republicans of the North, also corrupted by the beguilements of Big Money, Hoover, Hearst, and all the rest, there is a formidable legislative power ranged solidly against Roosevelt, leader of the People's War.

The President's efforts to nail the Poll Tax in the last session of Congress failed. His spokesman, Alben Barkeley and Claude Pepper, were all but crucified. So fierce was the attack of a reactionary minority, that the Administration retreated. This may proove to have been the most costly retreat in modern American history.

Governor Dixon of Alabama says Roosevelt is determined to destroy the oscial foundations of the South.

Destruction of the political foundations of poll tax corruption in the South must come, and swiftly, if a small band of traitors, controlled by Fascist Money, is not to sabotage our whole war effort.

The materials for victory against traitors ARE AT HAND. This is the second important thing that Negro leadership must remember. First, this is, in truth, a People's War. Second, the materials for victory in the People's War ARE AT HAND.

The great weapon in our hands is the determination of the American people to win this war and to adopt whatever measures are proven necessary for the winning of it.

Despite hell and high water,--and the National Association of Manufacturers, -- the American people have vowed to win.

Even the out-and-out proponents of Fascism must decorate their defeatism in the American flag and loud pronouncements of patriotism. No politician dares offer any plan which does not at least pretend interest in the war effort. Defeat of the poll tax bill was engineered under a phoney slogan of its consideration being harmful to the war effort.

To break the people's war spirit, the reactionaries have planned their coming anti-labor spree,--an open scheme to provoke labor into abandonment of its all-out war support. Increasing provocation will be heaped upon the Negro people, with the same idea.

But an aroused people can and must defeat these clever schemes.

Our enemies. Who are they? The program designers of the National Association of Manufacturers, begging a negotiated peace with Hitler and the reconstruction of an imperialist world. Their political stooges, Vandenburg, Taft, Hoover, Landon, Cox, Bilbo, Dies, Tom Connally, John Rankin.

Our allies. Who are they? The high command of an all-out war against the Axis, determined to use every ounce of American military and industrial manpower against our national enemies. Their mighty spokesmen, Roosevelt, Wallace, Willkie, Pepper, Norris, Tolan, Wagner.

Our job. An immediate People's Offensive rallying the growing victory spirit of our nation against the little band of traitors who would sell-out 130,000,000 of us. Passage of the anti-poll tax bill. Defense of all labor's gains. Demand for a centralized war economy, with a national anti-Jim Crow policy.

Here is the only sane, constructive road for Negro-America. We have no time for defeatism. No conspiracy can smash the will of a free people.

We will get to a city called Heaven faster if we remember a city called,--STALINGRAD!

"NATIVE SON" ★

From the book by

RICHARD WRIGHT

A hard blow came to his temple and he slumped to the floor. The faces and voices left him. Pain throbbed in his head and the right side of his face numbed. He held up an elbow to protect himself; they yanked him back upon his feet. When his sight cleared he saw policemen struggling with a slender white man. Shouts rose in a mighty roar. To the front of him a white man pounded with a hammer-like piece of wood upon a table.

"Quiet! Or the room'll be cleared of everybody except witnesses!"

The clamor ceased. The policemen pushed Bigger into a chair. Stretching to the four walls of the room was a solid sheet of white faces. Standing with squared shoulders all around were policemen with clubs in hand, silver metal on their chests, faces red and stern, grey eyes elert. To the right of the man at the table, in rows of three each, six men sat still and silent, their hats and overcoats on their knees. Bigger looked about and saw the pile of white bones lying atop a table; beside them lay the kidnap note, held in place by a bottle of ink. In the center of the table were white sheets of paper fastened together by a metal clasp; it was his signed confession. And there was Mr. Dalton, white-faced, white-haired; and beside him was Mrs. Dalton, still and straight, her face, tilted trustingly upward, to one side. Then he saw the trunk into which he had stuffed Mary's body, the trunk which he had lugged down the stairs and had carried to the station. And, yes, there was the blackened hatchet blade and a tiny round piece of metal. Bigger felt a tap on his shoulder and looked around; Max was smiling at him.

"Take it easy, Bigger. You won't have to say anything here. It won't be long."

The man at the front table rapped again.

"Is there a member of the deceased's family here, one who can give us the family history?"

A murmer swept the room. A woman rose hurriedly and went to the blind Mrs. Dalton, caught hold of her arm, led her forward to a seat to the extreme right of the man at the table, facing the six men in the rows of chairs. That must be Mrs. Patterson, Bigger thought, remembering the woman Peggy had mentioned as Mrs. Dalton's maid.

"Will you please raise your right hand?"

Mrs. Dalton's frail, waxen hand went up timidly. The man ask rs. Dalton if the testimony she as about to give was the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth, so help you God, and Mrs. Dalton answered,

"Yes, sir; I do."

Bigger sat stolidly, trying not to let the crowd detect any fear in him. His nerves were painfully taut as he hung onto the old woman's words. Under the man's questioning, Mrs. Dalton said that her age was fifty-three, that she lived at 4605 Drexel Boulevard, that she was a retired school teacher, that she was the mother of Mary Dalton and wife of Henry Dalton. When the man began asking questions relating to Mary, the crowd leaned forward in their seats. Mrs. Dalton said that Mary was twenty-three years of age, single; that she carried about thirty thousand dollars' worth of insurance, that she owned realestate amounting to approximately a quarter of a million dollars, and that she was active right up to the date of her death. Mrs. Dalton's voice came tense and faint and Bigger wondered how much more of this he could stand. Would it not have been much better to have stood up in the full glare of those roving knives of light and let them shoot him down? He could have cheated them out of this show, this hunt, this eager sport.

"Mrs. Dalton," the man said, "I'm the Deputy Coroner and it is with considerable anxiety that I ask you these questions. But it is necessary for me to trouble you in order to establish the identity of the deceased . . . "

"Yes, sir," Mrs. Dalton whispered.

Carefully, the coroner lifted from the table at his side a tiny piece of blackened metal; he turned, fronted Mrs. Dalton, then paused. The room was so quiet that Bigger could here the coroner's footsteps on the wooden floor as he walked to Mrs. Dalton's chair. Tenderly, he caught her hand in his and said, "I'm placing in your hand a metal object that the police retrieved from the ashes of the furnace in the basement of your home. Mrs. Dalton, I want you to feel this metal carefully and tell me if you remember having ever felt it before."

Bigger wanted to turn his eyes away, but he could not. He watched Mrs. Dalton's face; he saw the hand tremble that held the blackened bit of metal. Bigger jerked his head around. A wave of murmers rose through the room. The coroner took a quick step back to the table and rapped sharply with his knuckles. The room was instantly quiet, save for the sobbing woman. Bigger looked back to Mrs. Dalton. Both of her hands were now fumbling nervously with the piece of metal; then her shoulders shook. She was crying.

"Do you recognize it?"

"Y-y-yes . . . "

"What is it?"

"A-a-a-nn earing . . . "

"When did you first come in contact with it?"

Mrs. Dalton composed her face, and, with tears on her cheeks, answered,

"When I was a girl, years ago . . . "

"Do you remember precisely when?"

"Thirty-five years ago."

"You once owned it?"

"Yes, it was one of a pair."

"Yes, Mrs. Dalton. No doubt the other earring was destroyed in the fire. This one dropped through the grates into the bin under the furnace. Now, Mrs. Dalton, how long did you own this pair of earrings?"

"For thirty-three years."

"How did they come into your possession?"

"Well, my mother gave them to me when I was of age, and I in turn gave them to my daughter when she was of age . . . "

"What do you mean, of age?"

"At eighteen."

"And when did you give them to your daughter?"

"Obout five years ago."

"She wore them all the time?"

"Yes."

"Are you positive that this is one of your earrings?"

"Yes. There can be no mistake. They were a family heirloom. There are no two others like them. My grandmother had them designed and made to order."

"Mrs. Dalton, when were you last in the company of the deceased?"

"Last Saturday night, or I should say, early Sunday morning."

"At what time?"

"It was nearly two o'clock, I think."

"Where was she?"

"In her room, in bed."

"Were you in the habit of seeing, I mean, in the habit of meeting your daughter at such an hour?"

"No, I knew that she'd planned to go to Detroit Sunday morning. When I heard her come in I wanted to find out why she'd stayed out so late . . . "

"Did you speak with her?"

"No. I called her several times, but she did not answer."

"Did you touch her?"

"Yes, slightly."

"But she did not speak to you?"

"Well, I heard some mumbling . . . "

"Do you know who it was?"

"No."

"Mrs. Dalton, could your daughter by any means, in your judgement, have been dead then, and you not have known or suspected it?"

"I don't know."

"Do you know if your daughter was alive when you spoke to her?"

"I don't know. I assumed she was."

"Was there anyone in the room at the time?"

"I don't know. But I felt strange there."

"I--I don't know. I wasn't satisfied, for some reason. It seemed to me that there was something I should have done or said. But I kept saying to myself, 'she's asleep, that's all'."

"If you felt so dissatisfied, why did you leave the room without trying to awaken her?"

Mrs. Dalton paused before answering; her thin mouth was wide open and her face tilted far to one side.

"I smelt alcohol in the room," she whispered.

"Yes?"

"I thought Mary was intoxicated."

"Had you ever encountered your daughter intoxicated before?"

"Yes, and that was why I thought she was intoxicated then. It was the same odor."

"Mrs. Dalton, if someone had possessed your daughter sexually while she lay on that bed, could you in any way have detected it?"

The room buzzed. The coroner rapped for order.

"I don't know," she whispered.

"Just a few more questions, please, Mrs. Dalton. What aroused your suspicions that something had befallen your daughter?"

"When I went to her room the next morning I felt her bed and found that she had not slept in it. Next I felt in her clothes rack and found that she had not taken the new clothes she had bought."

"Mrs. Dalton, you and your husband have given large sums of money to Negro educational institutions, haven't you?"

"Yes."

"Could you tell us roughly how much?"

"Over five million dollars."

"You bear no ill will toward the Negro people?"

"No, none whatever."

"Mrs. Dalton, please, tell us what was the last thing you did when you stood above your daughter's bed that Sunday morning?"

"I--I . . . " She paused, lowered her head and daubed at her eyes. "I knelt at the bedside and prayed . . . " she said, her words coming in a short breath of despair.

"That is all. Thank you, Mrs. Dalton."

The room heaved a sigh. Bigger saw the woman lead Mrs. Dalton back to her seat. Many eyes in the room were fastened upon Bigger now, cold grey and blue eyes, eyes whose tense hate was worse than a shout or a curse. To get rid of that concentrate gaze, he stopped looking, even though his eyes remained open.

The coroner turned to the men sitting in rows to his right and said,

"You gentlemen, the jurors, are any of you acquainted with the deceased or any of you members of the family?"

One of the men rose and said, "No, sir."

"Would there be any reason why you could not render a fair and impartial verdict in this?"

"No, sir."

"Is there any objections to these men serving as jurors in this case?" the corner asked of the entire room.

There was no answer.

"In the name of the coroner, I will ask the jurors to rise, pass by this table, and view the remains of the deceased, one Mary Dalton."

In silence the six men rose and filed past the table, each looking at the pile of white bones. When they were seated again, the coroner called,

"We will now hear Mr. Jan Erlone!"

Jan rose, and came forward briskly, and was asked to swear to tell the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth, so help him God. Bigger wondered if Jan would turn on him now. He wondered if he could really trust any white man, even this white man who had come and offered him his friendship. He leaned forward to hear. Jan was asked several times if he was a foreigner and Jan said no. The coroner walked close to Jan's chair and leaned the upper part of his body forward and asked in a loud voice,

"Do you believe in social equality for Negroes?"

The room stirred.

"I believe all races are equal . . . " Jan began.

"Answer yes or no, Mr. Erlone! You're not on a soap box. Do you believe in social equality for Negroes?"

"Yes."

"Are you a member of the Communist Party?"

"Yes."

"In what condition was Miss Dalton when you left her last Sunday morning?"

"What do you mean?"

"Was she drunk?"

"I would not say she was drunk. She had a few drinks."

"What time did you leave her?"

"It was about one-thirty, I think."

"Was she in the front seat of the car?"

"Yes, she was in the front seat."

"Had she been in the front seat all along?"

"No."

"Did you put her in the front seat when you left the car?"

"No, she said she wanted to sit up front."

"You didn't ask her to?"

"No."

"When you left her, was she able to get out of the car alone?"

"I think so."

"Had you any relations with her in the back seat that would tended to make her, let us say, stunned, too weak to have gotten out alone?"

"No."

"Is it not true, Mr. Erlone, that Miss Dalton was in no condition to protect herself and you lifted her into the front seat?"

Jan's voice sounded throughout the room. There was a quick buzzing of conversation.

"Why did you leave an unprotected white girl alone in a car with a drunken Negro?"

"I was not aware that Bigger was drunk and I did not consider Mary as being unprotected."

"Had you at anytime in the past left Miss Dalton alone in the company of Negroes?"

"No."

"You had never used Miss Dalton as bait before, had you?"

Bigger was startled by a noise behind him. He turned his head; Max was on his feet.

Mr. Coroner, I realize that this is not a trial. But the questions being asked now have no earthly relation to the cause and manner of the death of the deceased."

"Mr. Max, we are allowing plenty of latitude here. The Grand Jury will determine whether the testimony offered here has any relation or not."

"But questions of this sort inflame the public mind . . . "

"Now, listen, Mr. Max. No question asked in this room will inflame the public mind any more than has the death of Mary Dalton, and you know it. You have the right to question any of these witnesses, but I will not tolerate any publicity-seeking by your kind here!"

"But Mr. Erlone is not on trial here, Mr. Coroner!"

"He is suspected of being implicated in this murder! And we're after the one who killed this girl and the reasons for it! If you think these questions have the wrong construction, you may question the witness when we're through. But you cannot regulate the questions asked here!"

Max sat down. The room was quiet. The coroner paced to and fro a few seconds before he spoke again; his face was red and his lips were pressed tight.

"Mr. Erlone, didn't you give that Negro material relating to the Communist Party?"

"Yes."

"What was the nature of the material?"

"I gave him some pamphlets on the Negro question."

"Material advocating the equality of whites and blacks?"

"It was material which explained . . . "

"Did that material contain a plea for 'unity of whites and blacks'?"

"IF THAT BOY DIES,— IT MAY BE YOUR FAULT!!"

CIO LEADER, 2000 FILM WORKERS HIT SHOWING OF 'TENNESSEE JOHNSON'

NEW YORK, N.Y.—In a sharply worded protest against the forthcoming Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picture, "Tennessee Johnson," Saul Mills, secretary of the New York State CIO Industrial Union Council, characterized the film as a "subtle form of appeasement of the poll taxers and defeatists," who would establish national unity by uniting with the white supremacy forces of the South.

The New York State CIO official voiced his protest today in a letter to Lowell Mellett, chief of the Office of War Information's bureau of motion pictures, which urged the OWI to take steps to stop the showing of the picture.

"Today, more than ever," he said, "we need the cleansing influence of heroic lives like that of Thaddeous Stevens, John Brown, Frederick Douglass, to further strengthen the unity between labor and the American people, between Negro and white people." . . . the film "Tennessee Johnson," spreads a false idea of national unity. Johnson favored appeasing the poll taxers and defeatists of his day."

Mills' statement represents the view of scores of leading trade unionists who have begun to flood the office of Elmer Davis, director of the OWI, with protests, urging that steps be taken to ban the film as a menace to national unity.

The statement followed close upon the action taken last week by the executive board of the New York Screen Office and Professional Employees Guild, CNO, representing nearly 2,000 organized film workers in the film industry of New York, urging that the film be scrapped.

The board passed a resolution which declared that "The release of this film would be destructive of national unity and we therefore urge Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer to scrap the film and make more patriotic use of both raw film stock and finished film product."

Meantime, Howard Dietz, publicity director of MGM, advised Dr. Lawrence Reddick, curator of the New York Schomburg library, that the company intended to go ahead and show the film despite the nation-wide protests, because he believed the picture would not "damage national unity." Dietz also said his company would not answer the protests letter sent him by representatives of nineteen Negro and white organizations and newspapers, after seeing a special preview on Dec. 14. The letter was signed by Dr. Reddick and George B. Murphy, Jr., administrative secretary of the National Negro Congress, on behalf of the organizations.

Dr. Reddick urged trade unions and people's organizations to send protests at once to MGM, 1540 Broadway, New York City; Elmer Davis, Director of OWI, Washington, D. C.; and to Lowell Mellett, Hollywood, Calif.

Public Housing Course Starts at USC

Pointing to new employment opportunities in public housing, an announcement is made this week of a course in Public Housing Management offered at the Civic Center Division, School of Government, of USC.

The course starts January 6 and will be under the direct supervision of Raymond E. Nelson, director of the Division on Management Standards of the City Housing Authority.

Dr. John M. Pfiffner, acting dean of the Civic Center division, explained today that interest in public housing has gained intense interest throughout the nation and it is expected to become one of the major concerns of post-war planning.

"Consequently, Public Housing Management offers a new field of service both now and in the future," he stated "In presenting this course on Public Housing Management, we have organized the lectures, round-table discussions and field work especially for those who wish to prepare themselves for positions in housing and, certainly, to give the maximum of practical experience with housing problems."

All sessions for the winter and spring quarters will be held on Wednesdays, from 4 to 6 p. m., in Room 203 of the Wilson building at First and Spring streets. Two full semester credits will be given at the end of each quarter for completion of the course.

ARTIFICIAL CLOUDS TOO MUCH FOR HATTIE

Spoiling her holidays by confining her to bed, one of those unusual mishaps, possible only in Hollywood motion picture production, befell Hattie McDaniel, noted motion picture and radio star, on Christmas Eve. She had been called back to Warner's First National for retakes in the elaborate musical, "Thank Your Lucky Stars", starring Eddie Cantor and one of the largest casts of the season. Hattie as star of the big tuneful all-Negro sequence, is to appear high above the clouds attired in a fanciful costume.

It so happens that artificial clouds or fog for pictures are customarily made by electrically vaporizing Nujol or other mineral oil. But because of the curtailment of all oils, along with many other screen properties, the technical department had to substitute dry ice. This when placed in luke-warm water, immediately gives off a white vapor. Anxious to have the effect as realistic as possible, the anxious efforts of the directors to get perfect 'takes' ran into three days instear of one.

But the continued breathing of the frosty vapor exuding from the dry ice, gave Miss McDaniel a severe chest cold. She reported the day after Christmas but could not remain, so had to return home under care of her physician. She is now recovering but declares a few more sessions of those fake clouds would send her beyond some celestial ones, for keeps.

★ BEHIND THE SCENES With Harry

By Harry Lavette

Bulletin: Watch this column next issue for the first installment of news from local musicians in the armed forces. According to E. Bailey, president of Local 767, there are now more than 100 doing their bit to help win the war on many fronts.)

Happy New Year, this 1943, spoken by you or me, has a deeper feeling of hope than ever before. For we all are breathing a silent prayer, no matter how sinful we may be otherwise, that before another twelve months, the guns will all be silenced, and the arduous process of swinging civilization back into its stride will be under way. Personally last New Year found me in Cedars of Lebanon Hospital suffering from a serious accident, but you will remember the Crozier twins, pinch-hitted for me, and you got the Ol' Kolym just the same until I got out several weeks later. Here's hoping nothing happens to you or to me this year.

Questioned MGM About "Tennessee Johnson"

I just returned from MGM studio where for the past two hours, I have been interviewing studio officials about the very controversial picture, "Tennessee Johnson," which the majority of race leaders feel should be shelved for the sake of better race relations at this war time. While there, visited the "Bataan Patrol" set where Kenneth Spencer, glant and talented Negro singer is playing a soldier in support of star Robert Taylor. While there, met Phil Carter, unit publicity man for "Cabin in the Sky", accompanied by Lt. Irene Cayton of the WAAC's stationed at Ft. Huachuca. Her husband, Horace Cayton, of Good Shephard centre, Chicago, and Herman Hill of the Pittsburg Courier. Also watched Butterfly McQueen on the "I Dood It" set, a few stages away. Will tell you in full next issue what studio officials said about the protests of "Tennessee Johnson."

Wish had time to tell all about the big pre-Christmas turkey dinner given by the Gay Caballeros Club, with presents for everybody, both guest and members, with a quart of old Scotch for the 14 members, including Yours Truly, an honorary member, also would like to tell you about the big turkey and ham feed by the AWVS girls at the 45th and Central canteen on Christmas night and about the impromptu housewarming at Sid Dones new fifteen room mansion on Hobart, in the heart of "Mulberry Hill", where most all the other movie celebrities live. But if I never get to describe it in detail, take it for granted folks here in L. A. forgot all about the war and really celebrated the Yuletide. Why at 9 p. m. Christmas night, Curtis Mosby had to close the doors of his Club Alabam—Too crowded. And now to hurry along.

Noble Sissle's band is packing them in at the Trianon. Whoever said that popular night spot was not going to book any more colored bands, didn't know what they were talking about. . . . Twentieth Century Fox nearly ready to start shooting on 'Thanks Pal', with big all-colored cast. . . Hattie McDaniel, sick in bed during the holidays with severe cold, caught it making retakes at Warner Bros. in "Thank Your Lucky Stars." . . . "Dixie", starring Bing Crosby, still shooting at Paramount . . . Report that a lot of colored players had been substituted by whites with their faces blacked up, proved false. It is only a minstrel sequence from away back in the early days when white players under burnt cork were a common thing on the stage.

What Some of The Bands are Doing

Few visiting bands from the east have attracted as much publicity in the metropolitan dailies as has Benny Carter's, now in the final two weeks at Billy Berg's Swing Club, on Las Palmas, in Hollywood. Vocalist Savannah Churchill is very popular with the nite lifers.

Les Hite at the Louisiana, and on the radio nightly, does not excuse me from writing that story I promised you when he first returned from discovering New York, and being discovered by the whole country.

"Big Six" Reeves, formerly my protege away back in the 30s, is right on the way into big time. Now at "Streets of Paris", Hollywood, which features Art Tatum, piano wizard.

Seelle Burke, like the old mill stream, goes on and on at the Bal Taboran, with Broomfield and Greeley's floor show.

CALEB PETERSON JR. CAPTURES OUTSTANDING MOVIE ROLE

Caleb Peterson, Jr., young Negro actor and singer, protege of Eddie (Rochester) Anderson, who in 1936 made headlines when he became the first Negro ever to win a National Dramatic and Oratorical Contest, held in Oklahoma City, has again scored a triumph by being chosen to portray an outstanding movie role at the RKO Radio Studios in Hollywood. This is his second picture, since arriving in Hollywood, the first one being "Happy Go Lucky", with Mary Martin and Dick Powell, which is yet to be released.

CALEB PETERSON, JR.

The name of the picture in which Peterson will play a featured role is "Stage Door Canteen," the story being laid around the famous Stage Door Canteen in New York. The story "Stage Door Canteen" has in its cast some of the biggest names in motion pictures, among them being Bette Davis, Katherine Cornell, Katherine Hepburn, Helen Hayes, Jack Benny and Ned Sparks.

In the picture he will play the part of a young Negro soldier, Johnny Jones by name, who has just returned from the battlefronts of Egypt and Africa for a furlough in the United States. Incidentally, he has been awarded the Distinguished Service Cross for heroism which he is wearing over his heart. Johnny Jones (Caleb Peterson) is seen talking with a group of soldiers in the Stage Door Canteen. They have just finished listening to Gypsy Rose Lee sing when an Australian soldier spots Johnny Jones and comes over to talk with him. The soldier is so amazed at the many adventures through which Johnny Jones has passed that he calls his friend, Dakota by name (who, incidentally has one of the lead roles in the picture) and introduces him to Johnny. Dakota, noticing the medal for heroism which Johnny Jones wears modestly on his breast, starts questioning him about it. As Johnny is a very unassuming Negro lad who just feels that he has done nothing more than his duty to his country, and he takes their praise with a deal of embarrassment and prefers not to be praised at all for the part he has played in the war.

Although there have been larger screen roles given to Negro actors, there has never been a finer one written from the standpoint of reflecting credit upon the race, and it is a part that will give to young Peterson an opportunity to show the fine acting ability which he definitely does possess.

From the standpoint of building morale, this motion picture will come as a grand surprise to the more than 130,000,000 people in the United States and will, doubtless, leave the 13,000,000 Negroes with a much higher regard for the motion picture industry in Hollywood for giving Negro actors and actresses more dignified parts in pictures.

Last year, Rochester of Jack Benny fame featured the young abritone on a nation-wide theater tour. The young singer is now studying for the concert stage with Homer Samuels in Beverly Hills, Calif. Mr. Samuels is the husband of Galli Curci, famous former soprano prima donna.

EX-APOLLO MANAGER ON LINCOLN STAFF

Added to the staff of the Lincoln theatre this week as manager was Jimmy Marshall, for 14 years manager of the famed Apollo theatre in New York.

Marshall will have complete charge of the Eastside's largest motion picture house, working with John Maloney, former manager, who has been promoted to a supervisorial capacity.

Friend of the great of the music and entertainment world, Marshall will bring many features of the Apollo to the Lincoln, in line with the theatre's aim to present the best in both stage and screen entertainment.

"APOLLO OF COAST"

"I'd like to make an Apollo of the West Coast out of the Lincoln", Marshall declared this week. "With so many of the big name bands and artists moving Westward, that should not be too difficult. I am certain we will receive their cooperation as they, too, must see the need for an outlet for their talents, such as the Lincoln. No matter how many movies performers may make, they still need the contact with live and appreciative audiences, such as we have at the Lincoln."

In Marshall's 14 years at the Apollo, every big name band or entertainer of the race has appeared there. The Apollo, it has been pointed out, is regarded as a proving ground for an act's wares. If it's good enough for the "toughest audience in the world," it'll "send" everyone else, performers have often been heard to remark.

COUNCILMAN RASMUSSEN TO BROADCAST

The quality of mercy these days is like a joke about a worn tire —often a little strained.

DON'T
Delay if the victim has been burned!

(This is the sixth of a series on "What Not to Do Until the Doctor Comes." Approved by the American Red Cross, we are printing them in the belief that untrained aid can be terribly dangerous. For standard courses in First Aid apply to your Red Cross chapter.—Ed.)

Serious burns, like bleeding and stopped breathing, cannot wait 'til the doctor comes.

Don't let the burning continue. If the victim's clothes are on fire, don't let him run. Put out the flames with water or by wrapping him in a rug, a coat, or by rolling him on the ground.

If the burn is being produced by a chemical—an industrial chemical in a factory or a wargas like mustard gas—wash off the chemical immediately. Use water, and use it by the gallon. A hose is excellent. Since the chemical is probably soaked into the clothes, get them off at once.

Don't however, remove clothes that stick to the burn. Cut around them. Don't pull off pieces of burning materials—chemicals or pieces of exploding incendiary bombs—that stick, but use water

Don't apply oils or greasy ointments to a burn. Don't ever apply iodine to a burn. Don't put cotton on a burn.

The best and most common First Aid care for burns is the application of a solution of baking soda and water. Keep compress or dressing moist. Use of greasy medicines only delays the doctor.

You may find where First Aid classes are being conducted in your neighborhood by contacting Stephen O'Donnell, American Red Cross, 1200 S. Vermont Ave., FI-5261. If no class is in session, an adequate supply of instructors is available to teach new classes.

AMATEURS IN FINALS TONITE AT LINCOLN

Persons advanced to the finals of the Lincoln Theatre's Amateur Contest, were reminded this week to be on hand for that event Friday at 8 o'clock.

With big cash prizes to go to the winners, Friday night's Lincoln audiences will judge the best performers in the grand finale climaxing several weeks' conduct of the contest.

Singers, dancers, instrumental soloists and comedians will insure patrons of the show an evening of sensational entertainment, Manager Jimmy Marshall declared this week.

Joe Louises Expect Heir

CHICAGO, Jan. 8.—Sgt. and Mrs. Joe Louis are expecting to become proud parents late this month, Mrs. Louis' sister, Gladys Trotter, told newsmen this week.

Louis, the world heavyweight champion, is stationed at Fort Riley, Kan. He spent Christmas with his wife, the former Marva Trotter, and then went to Detroit to visit his mother, ill in a hospital.

"RANDOM HARVEST" NOW AT UNITED ARTISTS HERE

In any history of Hollywood, Ronald Colman and Greer Garson would stand out among the great romantic stars of the screen. Now they are together for the first time as the hero and heroine of James Hilton's best-selling novel, "Random Harvest" now playing at the United Artists Theatre, 933 S. Broadway, downtown Los Angeles.

Both Colman and Miss Garson have difficult and exciting characterizations, playing virtually dual roles in a story that spans the years from 1918 to 1935. Colman plays a war victim of amnesia as Smithy, who is restored to normal life by the love and devotion of Paula, a gay and vivacious show girl who finds him ill and bewildered after escaping from an insane asylum on Armistice night.

BOOMING ALONG the comeback trail in high g[illegible] Henry Armstrong (above), former wearer of the featherweight, lightweight and welterweight diadems simultaneously. Hank, who decisioned tough Jimmy McDaniels Tuesday night, has been momentarily detoured, however, by a tonsilectomy. He is slated to box Al Tribuani in Philadelphia late this month, followed by an argument with New York lightweight champion Beau Jack on Feb. 19. And then, Ray Robinson!

★DOWN IN FRONT

With J. CULLEN FENTRESS

Hank Will Do O. K.

The column got his second look at Henry Armstrong since he began his comeback 7 months ago at the Olympic auditorium here Tuesday night. Hank went up against a real toughie in Irishman Jimmy McDaniels and came through with flying colors. Outweighed, shorter, and lacking the reach of his adversary, the former champion appears too good for any of the boys out of the service he might meet on his way back to the top — with but one exception.

McDaniels was Hank's 14th victim in 15 jousts, and regarded by Armstrong as his toughest. He didn't win by a great margin. Another highly regarded victim was Juan Zurita, the Mexican who enjoys national rating. The column saw that one, and Zurita, a stand-off, slow-moving boxer-puncher, was duck soup for the ex-triple champ. McDaniels met Armstrong at his own game, often exchanging blow for blow with his opponent. The bout was mostly in-fighting all the way. A bruising battle, it pleased the supporters of both boys.

Hank is still the old never-say-die, relentless attacker he has always been, still takes one or two blows to land four or five, still sports puffed eyes, nose and mouth after a particularly gruelling setto. Those two latter tendencies make up the reason we think Hank will do all right, with but one exception. That exception is welterweight Ray Robinson, reputedly one of the greatest boxer-punchers to come along in years. He's fast afoot, and throws dynamite-laden gloves. Against such an adversary, as much as we are rooting for him, we think Hank, slower than he used to be, would come out second best.

Notes Picked Up Here and There:

UCLA's Bruins lost a close, hard-fought, but clean, Rose Bowl thriller to Georgia New Year's Day, as everyone knows by now. But those Bruins, holding the Bulldogs scoreless for three quarters of the way, SHOULD have won. With a break here and there they might have turned the trick. They didn't DESERVE to win, though, because Georgia had the better all-around club, substitutes and all. It became apparent as the game wore along that the first team to score would have a distinct psychological advantage. And when UCLA quarterback Bob Waterfield threw a pass too high for end Burr Baldwin in the end zone — well, UCLA's big moment went up in Rose-scent. Georgia scored the safety, and disheartened before, they began to take on new life. UCLA's stouthearted line attempted to stop that last long march, but finally wilted with All-American Frankie Sinkwich bucking the pigskin over. Not one fresh UCLA sub lineman came on the field during that Georgia touchdown drive. It was a great game, the Bruins making the highly regarded invaders fight for everything they got . . .

Speaking of the Rose Bowl, the tournament committee should make it easier and quicker for cars to make use of the parking facilities. There's one way to get in, and one to get out. After bucking traffic before the game, most drivers had a hard time finding their cars afterwards. It was quite a mess, all in all . . . The column hated to see square-shooting Jerry Giesler quit as chairman of the State Athletic commission. He was one of the BIG reasons why Negro fighters now appear on Hollywood Legion stadium boxing cards. But since he has, the column's nomination for the chairmanship is long-time commissioner Everett Sanders . . . James O'Neal, former Jefferson High-UCLA athletic luminary, and now a member of the police force, left the city recently, going to Tuskegee and Washington, D. C., on a short visit. The column saw the beaming O'Neal the other nightfall, and James allowed as how he had married Louise Washington, granddaughter of Booker T. and private secretary in the Department of Agriculture, Washington. She's too join him here soon . . . That Max Hutchins-Jimmy Garrison tiff at Hollywood tonight figures to be a classic, with the outcome very much in doubt. It could go either way. Our nod goes to Max . . . Tonight and tomorrow night local basketball fans can see one of the few Negro eage stars wearing the colors of a major coast university when Joe Oliver jr. and his California Bears get down to serious business with USC and UCLA . . .

Hank Nods McDaniels

A near-capacity house of 10,000 fans Tuesday night saw "Hurricane" Henry Armstrong, the Comeback Kid, travel 10 fast and furious rounds to garner the verdict over tough Jimmy McDaniels, Watts Irishman, at Olympic auditorium.

Outweighed six and one-quarter pounds, Armstrong, who formerly held the featherweight, lightweight and welterweight titles simultaneously, was just as relentless in his attack as he has always been, wearing down the durable McDaniels, to gain a clean-cut decision.

Hank was given an 8-2 edge in the round-count, winning his 14th bout in 15 starts since beginning his comeback try 7 months ago.

The comeback hero of 1942 appeared to have a kayo victory in the 7th and 9th heats as he forced McDaniels to give ground from a vicious head and body assault.

McDaniels, fighting what may be termed his best local fight, gave Armstrong a fight of it, though, there being no more than 10 points separating the two at the end of the final heat, according to the Australian system of judging rounds as used by referee Mushy Callahan and judges Benny Whitman and Herb Green.

Both showed battle wounds. Armstrong's nose was bleeding, and his eyes and mouth puffed, while McDaniels' left eye was closed.

BROOKS, COLLINS DRAW

Armstrong weighed 140¾; McDaniels, 147.

The gross gate was $14,744, from a $3 top house.

Jimmy Brooks, 152, and Willie Collins, 154, were moved up into the semi-windup spot, when one of the principals failed to show because he is in the Army. The five-rounder was called a draw.

In the preliminaries Ceferino Robleto, 118, TKOed Chester Ellis in one; Allen Arnett, 170, TKOed Howard Morgan, 171; and Johnny Armando, 136, drew with Benny Black, 136.

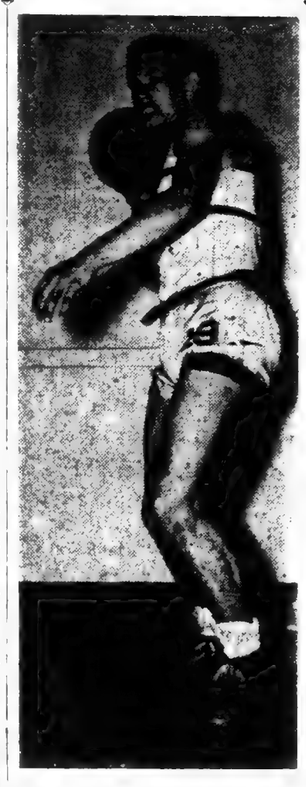
Twin Bill at Olympic Tuesday Nite

The Olympic stages a double eight round main event next Tuesday night.

In one half of the twin bill, Al Medrano of the Coast Guard faces Chuck Garcia, Mexican star of the Art Martell stable. They are featherweights.

Genero Rojo, stable mate of Richie Lemos, encounters Eddie Halligan, Negro lightweight of San Francisco, in the second eight round fight. The weight is 135 pounds.



Medrano is fresh from a sensational ten round main event with Carlos Chavez last Friday night at Hollywood Legion Stadium. Chavez won the nod in a furious battle by virtue of a last round rally. Medrano staggered Chavez several times. It was one of the best fights staged at the film city plant in months.

Garcia knocked out Domingo Diaz two weeks ago at the Olympic. Last Monday night Chuckie beat Al Sanchez in a six round thriller at Ocean Park Arena.

HALLIGAN CLUB FIGHTER

Art Martell, a veteran fight man, has taken Garcia along slowly. He is 18 years of age, and won several amateur coast titles before turning pro. He is a combination boxer-puncher.

Halligan is said to be a good club fighter. He is managed by Johnny Munroe of San Francisco and has met the best featherweights in Oakland, San Francisco and Sacramento. He takes on a formidable opponent in Rojo, who twice decisioned the classy Mat Oglesby at the Olympic. Rojo is one of the best prospects among the younger fighters in this section.

BEAR ACE—Joe Oliver jr., 20-year old University of California at Berkeley senior and son of Mr. and Mrs. Joe Oliver of this city comes to town with the Bear basketballers this weekend. Tonight the UC cagers face USC, and tomorrow night, UCLA. Several years ago, Joe was an all-city nominee from Hollywood.

Matchmaker Babe McCoy will sign four prelim bouts to back up the double feature.

Harlem Globetrotters Five to Play in L. A. Soon

Basketball's famed Harlem Globetrotters, the great colored team that won the world's championship tournament in Chicago in 1940 and for sixteen years has been touring North America with marked success, will make their first Los Angeles appearance later this month. Negotiations are now underway to bring this great team here to headline a gala card.

Several teams of the area have expressed the desire to take on the mighty Negro quintet. One will be selected in a few days after the date for the game, and the site, are set.

The fame of the Globetrotters has been spread by feature articles in leading magazines, by newsreels and the newspapers and radios of the nation. Besides winning the world tournament in 1940, they played in November of that year at the Chicago Stadium in the first game against the nation's picked college all-stars, the attraction drawing basketballs world record crowd of 22,000.

The Globetrotters have won 2,163 games and lost only 162 games the past fifteen seasons, despite the fact that they play day in and day out against the greatest teams and always on the opponents' courts with plenty of traveling to be done between games. They are known as the outstanding showmen of the sport with a number of stunts that keep the fans roaring.

BUY WAR BONDS EVERY PAY DAY

on the turf

By GEORGE RAMSEY

SAN DIEGO, Calif—Happy New Years to all, and may this time next year when I write Happy New Years, may it be one real and lasting one with all our boys back home and celebrating only in the way that the good old United States know how. And see Adolf Hitler, Emperor Hirohito and Benito Mussolini paying for their crimes. Well we say that it will be a real Happy New Years with all the lights on, all over the world again, no more rationing of any kind, and freedom for all the people of all classes and races in the world worshipping the same good God. Won't that be a mighty day folks?

Just keep on buying U. S. war stamps and bonds, save all that your Uncle has told you to, and don't hoard on anything, and you may see this mighty day before the year of 1943 ends. So beit.

Well now for the turf, some facts I would like to inform you about in case you didn't know: Shut Out, belonging to Mrs. Payne Whitney, was the leading money winner of the year with $238,972. He won some of the biggest stakes in the world, including the Kentucky Derby, Belmone Stakes, Arlington Classic and the Travers. He has now been retired until next year, and if he is sound he will try and break Whirlaway's record.

Of course the horse of the year was Whirlaway and also the leading handicap horse.

The leading three year old was Alsab, the bargain colt that sold for a mere $700. He won the Preakness and the Withers.

The leading two year old was Count Fleet, great son of Reigh Count. His main event was the Pimlico Futurity.

Occupation was another horse that made turf's hall of fame by winning the Belmont Futurity and the Arlington Futurity.

Whirlaway's three great races were the Massachusetts Handicap, Narraganset Special and the Pimlico Special.

In England the Derby which was run despite the war was won by Walting Street.

The leading jockey of the year was again the little mite, Johnny Adams.

YOUNGSTER MEETS TRIAL HORSE IN LEGION MAIN

Menacing Max Hutchins, the dynamic punching welter-middleweight, headlines matchmaker Charley MacDonald's boxing card at Hollywood Legion stadium tonight when he clashes with veteran Jimmy Garrison over the 10-round route.

In his last three starts, Hutchins, who is managed by Jack Davidow, flattened Joe Ybarra, Sebastian Gonzales and Amado Rodriguez. The latter kayo is particularly significant because Rodriguez previously went 10 heats with Jack Chase, the Denver standout.

Garrison, who seldom fails to put on a wow of a show, whipped Ramon Alvarez in his last start at the film city club.

Red Barker and Paul Guerrero mix in tonight's six-round semi-final, a rematch from a former draw.

Four-round preliminaries will show Tino Ascasio vs. Ceferino Robleto, Chester Ellis vs. Buddy Spencer, Harold Dade vs. Orville Young and Willie Collins vs. Frankie Valdez.

Judge Jingle Sez:

"Private Hearn made a turn in a dim-out.
When they lifted the jeep to pull him-out,
With a look rather sheepish,
Or should I say jeepish,
He confessed he had not put his limb-out."

Neighborhood Church Moves to New Church Home

The Neighborhood Church, organized two years ago by the Rev. H. Mansfield Collins, moved into its new church home at 47th Place and San Pedro street last Sunday. The church, which is one of the most modern, is located in the fashionable residential districts of the city.

At an early hour Sunday a large congregation of worshippers gathered at the church to take part in the pre-service which was to begin at ten-thirty from the steps of the beautiful church. Music from within the building started the day with Miss Juanita Lemmons at the organ, Miss Sarah Elizabeth Collins at the grand, Atwell H. Rose the violinist and Jesse Smith the saxaphonist, playing, "The Church's One Foundation." From across the spacious lawn came the voice of Miss Margaret Davis, the soloist, standing among the palms as she sang "Open The Gates Of The Temple." The keys of the church were presented in behalf of The First Reformed Christian Church received by Mr. H. K. Knowles, the oldest member of the church. The ribbon was cut by the Mother of the church, Mrs. Julia Spencer, after which the doors were thrown open and the Usher Board led by the president E. Preston Greene entered to prepare the auditorium for worshippers and service. The vast congregation thronged the building after which the ministers, three choirs (with directors Mrs. Belle Riley and Chas. C. Grose), officers and president led by the altar boys, Albert Elliott and Lemuel Phillips, bearing the church and Nation's flags, marched into the church in a stately procession. Amid much hallelujah the Senior Choir sang "Lift Up Your Heads O Ye Gates." Then followed one of the most impressive services in the history of the church. Miss Bertha Powell, guest soloist, sang most timely "Grateful Am I." Pastor Collins gave a brief history of the church counting the er Than That Of The Former." At the conclusion of the sermon 24-persons, six of whom were converts, connected themselves with blessings and then delivered the opening sermon, "The Glory Of The Latter House Shall Be Great-the fast growing church. The day closed with an increased membership of twenty-six.

Never were members and friends more eager to give an offering for the church. When the appeal was made, Blaine C. Venerable, one of the trustees, led the offering with fifty dollars ($50) followed by members and friends with fives and tens until $696.85 was received as the morning offering, the evening offering of $104. brought the days offering to $800 which broke all records for Neighborhood. The church had just closed a most successful $5000 drive two weeks previous.

Dr. Jos. M. Evans, pastor of Metropolitan Community Church of Chicago, one of the largest churches of the race, delivered the evening message using as his theme, "The Ten Virgins." His masterful eloquence gave a most fitting close of a great day. Hundreds were turned away from the morning service.

The Cookie Floral Co., one of the race's outstanding businesses presented the church with its first contribution and flowers among which was a large beautiful creation of Birds of Paradise.

Neighborhood plans for a large community program in the near future. The public is invited to the services of the church where a hearty welcome awaits all.

Revival Meet Slated at Second AME

Sunday last will long be remembered at Second Church. The pastor, Rev. J. B. Isaacs spoke to a capacity audience from the subject "A New Heart for a New Start". There were many seen in tears as he pleaded for a new way of life, there were two accessions for the day. The communion was administered to over three hundred persons; at the close of which a marriage ceremony was performed uniting in marriage Lt. Joseph H. Mitchell of Fort Huachuca, Ariz. and Miss Rhetta Jean Boswell.

Among the visitors seen were: Mrs. Maudo Tucker of Kansas City, Kans.; Sonny Berry of Oakland, Calif.; James Glenn of Indianapolis, Ind.; Edw. Kimble of Houston, Texas; Mrs. George Gibbons, Marysville, Calif.; Mrs. Orena Blanton, T. H. Bishop, Miss Beverly Wright, Miss Eva Jefferson, Miss Esther Henderson, Mr. McKnight, Irene Hall, Thelma Pryce of Venice, Calif.

Old Fashion Revival Meeting will start on Sunday next with Rev. W. J. Davis, the Gospel Tornado of Arkansas conducting the meetings for ten days. The pastor and a volunteer gospel choir will support him in the services. The public is invited.

The Buddie Club is presenting Lt. Harriett White on Sunday afternoon at 4:30 o'clock in a specially arranged program under the direction of Mrs. Pearl Heard. Lt. White is a Commissioned Officer in the WAAC. You are urged to be present and on time.

Our Sunday School under the superintendency of Joseph Buckner and his staff of teachers is making splendid progress; a large number of new scholars are now enrolled and new ones are presented at each session of the Sunday School.

Hatch Baha'i Faith Speaker

"Under the auspices of the Baha'i Faith, Mr. Willard P. Hatch will speak Sunday, January 10, at 3 p. m., 1709 West 8th Street, on "Oneness of Science and Religion." "The Baha'i Faith," says Mr. Hatch, "proclaims that religion must be in harmony with science and reason. If it does not conform to science and reconcile with reason, it is superstition. Down to the present day," continues Mr. Hatch, "it has been customary for man to accept a religion teaching, even though it were not in accord with human reason and judgement. The harmony of religious belief with reason is a new vista which Baha'u'llah, over seventy years ago, opened for the soul of man today."

Baptist Temple Plans Revival

The Baptist Temple, 620 East 48th street, had another great day Sunday. Pastor Sweeney preached a wonderful sermon. We had one addition. Sunday, Jan. 10th, Pastor Sweeney is preaching a special sermon at 11 a. m. and at 8 p. m. Rev. Moten will bring the evening message.

January 12, Rev. N. Hail and his gospel singers will begin a ten day revival meeting. We invite our friends and members to attend these meetings.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE CHURCHES

The Lesson-Sermon subject in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday, will be "Sacrament." These verses from the Psalms constitute the Golden Text: "I will take the cup of salvation, and call upon the name of the Lord. I will pay my vows unto the Lord now in the presence of all his people."

The Lesson-Sermon includes the following Scriptural citations from Matthew: "Then the eleven disciples went away into Galilee, into a mountain where Jesus had appointed them. . . . And Jesus came and spake unto them, saying, All power is given unto me in heaven and in earth. Go ye therefore, and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost: Teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you: and, lo, I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world."

In "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" Mary Baker Eddy writes: "When will Jesus' professed followers learn to emulate him in all his ways and to imitate his mighty works? . . . Christians claim to be his followers, but do they follow him in the way that he commanded? Hear these imperative commands: 'Be ye therefore perfect, even as your Father which is in heaven is perfect!' 'Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature!' 'Heal the sick!' "

Rev. F. D. Jordan Announces Church Confab

A Church Conference was announced this week by Rev. Frederick D. Jordan, pastor at First AME Church, 801 Towne Ave., for Monday night, Jan. 11 at 9 o'clock. Among major items of business for this session will be the election of the Church Treasurer, and the Annual election of Church Trustees.

The church treasureship which for the past two years has been held by Mr. William H. Gamble is one of the most important offices of the church. The treasurer, who is bonded for $5.000.00, is the custodian of all funds of the church.

In commenting upon the work of the Trustees the past year, the pastor called attention to the fact that the mortgage debts of the church had been paid, more than $3000.00 worth of improvements completed and paid for, adequate War Insurance purchased for all the property, and a sinking fund of more than $2000 provided for the future expansion of the church program.

Hold Community Watch Nite Meet

On December 31st, a community Watch night meeting was held at the beautiful home of Mr and Mrs. John Humes. Many neighbors responded to the invitation. Three outstanding personages brought encouraging messages. They were Rev. E. C. Bondenhausen, white evangelist; Rev. L. L. Humes, retired minister, and Mr. John Cole, president of West Temple Community club. After the meeting a New Year's breakfast was served to all.

Dorie Miller Hero Club Meets

The Dorie Miller Hero club held its initial monthly meeting in the New Year, Sunday, Jan. 3rd. The discussions and business procedure were particularly interesting and the meeting was well attended.

Mrs. M. E. Goins, president; Mrs. Jean A. Smith, reporter.

Obituary

Tabitha Mash, was born Feb. 11, 1878 in the State of Iowa, Polk County. She was a graduate from the West Des Moines High school. Four years later she graduated from the Douglas Hospital in Kansas City as a trained nurse. She practiced her profession until she became ill, with a nervous breakdown, from which she never recovered.

She has resided in Los Angeles, for the past twenty years, and was a faithful member of the First AME church. The Woman's Mite Missionary Society of which she was a member claimed her greatest interest, and she will be greatly missed by all of its members. She was a member of the American Woodmen, and the Iowa Club. She passed Wednesday, December 30, at the General hospital. Funeral services were held Saturday at 1 p. m. from Angelus Funeral Home, Rev. F. D. Jordan officiating.

She leaves to mourn her passing four sisters, Susie Hodges, Hattie Mash, Marie Leighton of Los Angeles, Nellie Hubbard of St. Paul, Minn., a brother, Will Mash, of Des Moines, Iowa. Two nephews, Melvin and Don Leighton of Los Angeles, three neices, Myrtle B. Mouton, Estella Powell, Catherine Wesley of Fontana, many other relatives and a host of friends.

Card of Thanks

I wish to take this opportunity to thank my many friends, coworkers and well wishers for their many, many kindnesses to me during the Xmas season; and for the many lovely and useful gifts, greeting cards, telephone calls and telegrams, which brought joy and happiness to my heart.

I extend my best wishes to each of you for a Happy and Prosperous New Year, and may God's richest blessings rest upon you all.

Lovingly yours,
Rev. Susie A. Jackson
Pastor, Temple of Divine Truth.

Card of Thanks

We also wish to express our thanks to Revs. G. W. Reed, Grant Harris and D. Wyatt, also the Poinsettia Club, who spoke words of consolation; and to the Angelus Funeral Home for services rendered.

Signed:
William Bell, husband and family.

Card of Thanks

We wish to express our thanks and appreciation to our many friends and neighbors, for their kindnesses, expressions of sympathy, the beautiful florals, cards and telegrams during our recent bereavement in the passing of our dear one, Tabitha Mash.

GARDEN OF MEMORIES

All through life we are constantly being reminded of old Loves and Friends that have endeared themselves to us, and, keep comparing the new ones with the old. It seems to us that our memories grow richer with the years, and as the age of recollection matures, these memories glow vividly recalling instances and spectacles of beauty that once thrilled and warmed our very existence.

We think seriously upon the great transformation taking place in the world, yet we realize that war and "Father Time" bring a lot of changes into our lives. Conditions are always changing--but the human heart remains the same. Love and friendship grow mellow and gather the moss of loveliness like silver threads among the gold. Pleasant memories become a train of thought that we cherish and hold near and dear forsaking all others.

Dear Prof. Herman: I greatly appreciate the very thorough 1943 Horoscope I received from you a few days ago. My friends are very enthusiastic over it also and some have expressed the desire to have you perform the same valuable service for them. Thanking you again for everything I am sincerely yours, M. F.

L. M. F.—Will I find someone who will be interested in marriage?

Ans.—A careful analysis of your question indicates the fact that you will find true love and happiness during the coming year. Marriage will result from this.

Ans.—Only one quetion is answered in the column. I suggest that you write in for a private reply. I am sure I can help you.

S. L. H.—Will I marry a rich girl or a poor girl? When will I marry? Will I ever marry? if you will do so.

J. W.—Will my luck improve in the coming year?

Ans.—Your lucky stars and guiding planet indicate your luck changing for the better and your being successful in your business as well. I specialist and follow his instructions carefully. Don't delay, your health should always come first.

R. J.—Dear Sir I read your column every week, and am wondering if you will help me. I have been worried for sometime, is what I have in mind true?

Ans.—It appears to me that you are worrying unnecessarily. I find no grounds for your feelings and suggest that you try to overcome them. If you write in for a private reply, I shall be more than glad to help you.

J. B. C.—Will I get the money I am looking for?

Ans.—Concentrating upon your question, it comes to me that you will receive this money, within the next couple months. It just takes a little time to get matters straightened out, but you will be successful.

Mrs. P. W.—Is my husband coming back home?

Ans.—According to your Zodiacal sign, you are destined to hear some good news in the near future. This news will concern your husband and his returning to see you.

E. E.—Who is responsible for the first gasoline motor plane?

Ans.—The Wright Brothers, born in Dayton, Ohio, were American machinists and airplane inventors. On Dec. 17, 1903, they equipped their biplane with a gasoline motor and propeller, made four flights, 12 to 59 seconds in duration, the first in which man had been lifted from the ground and carried through the air by power.

Card of Thanks

We sincerely thank our many friends for the kindness shown and for the warm expressions of sympathy during the illness and death of our beloved mother, Mrs. Martha Whiting. Especially do we thank Rev. Clayton Russell, Rev. J. E. Pius, Rev. Roy Davis, and the Angelus Funeral Home.

Dr. Eva W. Young and Mrs. Irene Bartlett, daughters. Mr. Frank Whiting, son.

To the Rev. Frederick D. Jordan, for his remarks, and Mr. Wm. Gellispie for the solo, The Angelus Funeral Home and to all who assisted in anyway, we are indeed grateful.

LOS ANGELES ROLLS UP SLEEVES TO FIGHT

Los Angeles was fighting mad today as word reached here that apparent Dixie power in Congress had virtually forced the Fair Employment Practice Committee out of business.

The scheduled Jan. 25-27 hearings into Southern railroad discrimination, a meeting which would have also reviewed briefs concerning the Los Angeles Railroad Company, were preemptorily cancelled by War Manpower Commissioner Paul V. McNutt this week.

After consultation with Wendell Willkie yesterday morning, a committee composed of Ferdinand Smith, of the National Maritime Union; Dr. Max Yergan of the Council on African Affairs; Dr. Warren Banner of the National Urban League; Joseph Ford of the Peoples Committee; and Rev. Clayton Powell of the Abyssinian Baptist church and New York war, and progressives all over the nation have exploded with indignation.

Strong action will be taken in Los Angeles during the next 48 hours.

Sunday afternoon the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People meets for its annual election, and will probably move into high gear against the scuttling of FEPC.

SUNDAY MASS MEET

Sunday night at 8 p. m. the Negro Victory Committee will stage the biggest mass meeting in its tumultuous, one-year history at People's Independent Church of Christ, Rev. Clayton D. Russell, chairman, announced today.

"The nations enemies are on the run everywhere except in Washington," Rev. Russell stated, "If ever there were a moment for Negro-America to rise to the defense, not only of its own liberties, but those of the whole nation and the nation's war effort, it is now. This damnable reaction must be smashed!"

Individuals, especially war industry workers, who were largely protected by FEPC in their jobs, are urged to wire Paul V. McNutt and President Roosevelt denouncing cancellation of FEPC's hearings on railroad bias and demanding a new date to be set for them.

Political observers interpreted FEPC's virtual elimination as the result of Republican and

"IN FACT"—Have you seen or read it?

Well, if you are interested in cutting a straight path through the maze of distortions, omissions and prejudices which comprise metropolitan newspapers, I advise that you subscribe for this "littlest newspaper."

As far as I know, "In Fact" is the smallest newspaper published in the United States today, but it is potentially the most powerful in the country, since it deals exclusively with the dynamite which Big Business papers daren't touch.

Edited by George Seldes, one of America's great newspapermen, "In Fact" fights the age-old pamphleteer's battle, struggles to maintain the dignity and the truth of the press.

Let us draw a contrast, one between George Seldes and that venomous propagandist, Westbrook Pegler. Daily Pegler's vile column is pumped into millions of American homes, bit by bit sowing the seeds, dissension and prejudice which may well destroy our whole war effort.

NAACP ELECTIONS SUNDAY

Annual election of officers of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People Sunday at Hamilton Methodist church, 18th and Naomi streets at 3 p. m., will attract a record turn-out, it was predicted today.

Att'y Thomas L. Griffith, jr., president, urged that all NAACP members, from all walks of life, be on hand for the balloting.

Focusing special attention upon the gathering was the volcanic action of War Manpower Commission Paul V. McNutt in Washington this week in virtually destroying the Fair Employment Practice Committee through the ban upon its hearings into discrimination in railroads and transportation firms throughout the nation.

McNutt's decision has drawn condemnation throughout America.

It neatly nips Los Angeles' plans for action against the Los Angeles Railway Company and its anti-Negro hiring policy.

VITO MARCANTONIO TELLS HOW TO LICK DIXIE POLL TAX MOB

(Rep. Vito Marcantonio, 20th district, New York, introduced the Anti-Poll Tax bill in the 78th session of congress last week. It is behind this measure that Negro America must marshal its forces for the liberation of the Negroes and poor whites of the South so that they may fully contribute to the nation's victory.—Ed.)

By CONGRESSMAN VITO MARCANTONIO

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 15. (Special to The California EAGLE)—The people of America are concerned today with one proposition: to win the war and achieve the purposes for which the war is being fought.

The people of America at all times bear in mind that this war is being fought for an extension of democracy all over the world, and to wipe out the last vestiges of fascist barbarism. Only when this is done will Victory have been won in this war.

That is the high purpose which unites the peoples of the United Nations in this war. Only that unity can win the war. Every defection from that unity is aid to the enemy. That unity must be internal in the United Nations. It must spread to every person fighting on our side, to every potential ally that we have. And that means the extension of democracy to the furthest limits that we can reach.

One of the most flagrant restrictions on democracy within our own country is the poll-tax. In eight states people are required to pay for the privilege of voting—in some a lower and others a higher price. It also so happens that these eight states are those which have the lowest living standards in the country. In every one of these states, the payment of even a dollar for the privilege of voting means payment out of a budget already dangerously close to the starvation line, for millions of people.

ICKES ACCEPTS MARIAN ANDERSON MURAL

Declaring that future generations will regard Easter Sunday, 1939, as a significant date in the fight to achieve a real democracy in this country, Interior Secretary Harold Ickes this week accepted for the government a mural commemorating the free public concert given by Marian Anderson from the steps of the Lincoln Memorial on that date.

The mural, executed by Mitchell Jamieson in a corridor of the Department of Interior building, was dedicated in the Interior auditorium Wednesday night, Jan. 6, before a distinguished audience, including prominent government officials and representatives of the diplomatic corps.

Permission for Miss Anderson to sing on the steps of the Lincoln Memorial in 1939 was granted by Secretary Ickes after the Daughters of the American Revolution had refused to permit the noted contralto to give a concert in Constitution Hall. The mural commemorating the event was dedicated Wednesday night just 24 hours before Miss Anderson appeared in Constitution Hall in the first of a series of benefit concerts for the United China Relief. Speaking of this, Secretary Ickes said:

"Tomorrow night in Constitution Hall our guest is to appear in a concert under the auspices of the Daughters of the American Revolution for the benefit of China Relief. I honor that great organization for offering its platform to Miss Anderson while saying to her people that they will be welcomed on the same basis as others.

"It takes more strength of character to admit a change of conviction than to adhere tenaciously to it, and so I say that nothing that the Daughters of the American Revolution could do would give them greater credit or be in more seemly keeping with their tradition than to open this series of concerts with Marian Anderson as the guest of honor."

The secretary concluded by saying of Miss Anderson:

"Her voice and personality have come to be a symbol—a symbol of the willing acceptance of the immortal truth that all men are created free and equal."

Dressed simply in a black gown trimmed with a white lace bolero-type jacket, Miss Anderson graciously responded to the words of Secretary Ickes and thanked him and the citizens of Washington for giving her the opportunity to sing at the Lincoln Memorial. She said that that occasion had been significant to her and would ever remain a real inspiration.

She then sang three Negro spirituals and responded to the tremendous ovation of the audience—half of them members of her own race—by singing two encores.

Following the opening of the program by Assistant Secretary of the Interior Oscar L. Chapman, a double quartet of Negro seamen from the Great Lakes Naval Training station rendered a selection. The mural was then officially presented to Secretary Ickes by Charles Houston, acting dean of the Howard University Law school, representing the Marian Anderson Mural committee and the Citizens committee. Houston said that individual contributions had purposely been kept small so that as many people as possible could contribute. Many of the contributions came from school children, especially those in the three Negro high schools of Washington, he said.

The program ended with Miss Anderson singing "The Star

PACIFIC BATTLE VETS HERE

Three survivors of the heavy cruiser North Hampton, dispatched to Davy Jones' locker on the night of Nov. 31, 1942, by a Jap torpedo, were in Los Angeles this week.

The men, Alfred Edwards, 24, of New Orleans; George Moon, 28, of Atlanta, Ga.; and L. Lightfoot of Bowling Green, Ky., calmly admitted to having seen action in "almost every" major Pacific engagement of the war.

HOLLYWOOD MAID'S DEATH MYSTIFIES CITY

The strange case of Hollywood maid who was arrested for pilfering her boss' belongings and died under mysterious circumstances in jail the following day came to light this week.

Tuesday night Walter Kane, wealthy Hollywood business man, called police to his swank home at 9245 Doheny Rd., Beverly Hills.

He took officers to his back porch, showing them groceries and silverware packed in boxes. He accused his maid of attempting to smuggle the belongings out of his house.

The officers proceeded to the maid's room. She was sprawled across her bed, fully clothed, apparently drunk. In her closet were found three fur coats, later verified as her own property.

Enjoying several aliases, Mrs. Ethel Williams or Ethel Bell, or Ethel Allen, was arrested. She complained immediately of being ill and upon arrival at Hollywood police station she was examined by police doctor Tainter and found in good health.

Twenty-four hours later the woman was dead in her cell. She was gasping for breath. Dr. Tainter was sent for. He examined her again, finding her severely ill. She died within minutes.

Eagle reporters tracking down the woman's history found that she has a daughter in Wichita, Kans., named Peg-

'WHAT-YA KICKIN' FOR?' -- 'JOHNSON' PRODUCERS

Last week when Harry Levette, EAGLE theatre ed, interviewed MGM executives concerning issue of their reactionary film, "Tennessee Johnson," the movie moguls couldn't understand what the objection might be.

This, of course, in the face of hundreds of telegrams, articles, wires to studio and government saying the picture glorified Negro-baiter Andrew Johnson, Lincoln's successor, man who felt Negroes, by nature, are incapable of self-government.

OBJECTION: Picture would wound, not aid, war morale, build up of which is filmdom's avowed goal.

INDIAN LEADER TELLS REAL PICTURE OF CRISIS IN THE EAST

(Exclusive publication in the nation's Negro press of a series of four articles on India by R. Lal Singh, only member of the India National Congress in America today is an EAGLE scoop. In the opinion of the editors, this is the finest statement on the India crisis yet published in America.—Ed.)

By R. LAL SINGH

Editor, India News, and Member Indian National Congress

In approaching the India deadlock, one has to, from the outset, realize the key problem concerning the question. And I for one, a member of the All-India National Congress, having worked and fought and struggled for India's freedom during eighteen years, am most keenly aware of this.

We are fighting a people's war for national liberation. Upon the outcome of this war depends the future of civilization. THE AXIS MUST BE DEFEATED AT ANY COST, because the aim of the Axis is to enslave all mankind, India included.

Freedom for India, I am convinced, is a key problem in the United Nations' battle for Victory. Victory over the Axis and freedom for India, my friends, are not two separate problems. THEY ARE ONE! Keeping India in subjugation robs the United Nations of an enormous reserve of manpower, of a tremendous storehouse of vital resources that India can provide to aid our common struggle against the sinister and monstrous enemy of all free men.

The continuous holding of India in abeyance provides the Axis with a destructive weapon of propaganda. This weapon is used with especially destructive effect among the conquered peoples. The Axis falsely claims that "the United Nations are not sincere when they speak of 'national liberation,' for look,"—they say—"England still holds 400,000,000 people in subjugation."

Despondent Man Kills Self

"I am sick. I can't sleep and am so tired. Good-bye. Thanks for your kindness. Signed: Joseph Young."

This was the tragic note found on the body of 72 year old Joseph Young, who died at his own hand, when he shot himself in front of his home at 1216 East 25th St. on last Thursday.

Young a retired real estate man had been noticeably despondent for several weeks over the death of his wife and his own ill health. Mrs. Sarah Parker, sister-in-law of the deceased confirmed this when she told officers that her brotherin-law had grieved very deeply since the death of his wife, Mrs. Mary Wade Young some six weeks ago.

The shooting occurred at 7:25 a. m. shortly after Young's departure from the house. Officers found him dead on their arrival. One bullet had entered the right temple causing almost instantaneous death. The gun which lay near his body contained four shells, one chamber was empty.

Recently Young gave $500 to the NAACP in memory of his wife's death, thereby purchasing for himself a life membership in the organization. Mrs. Young also a member of the NAACP was, at the time of her death, in charge of the Sojourner Truth Club for Women on East Adams Blvd.

generally conservative results of the last election.

All joined in holding that the Administration must not retreat before the storm of pro-fascist Negro-baiting to be released openly soon in Congress. Retreat cannot realize victory in the people's war was the general feeling.

The action was probably forced behind the scenes by a coalition of Dixie Democrats of Northern Republicans opposed to Roosevelt and a full prosecution of the war effort. The Administration retreat in the face of this opposition, stemming not from the people but from special interests, was heartily condemned all around.

The compromise with Dixie does not strengthen the war effort by "avoiding force", as McNutt put it, but immeasurably weakens the whole Administration position in pushing vital war legislation, for not only have millions of Americans been affronted but the very pro-fascist elements of defeatism and "business with Hitler" are put in the position or be able to control basic Administration policy.

A popular tempest can reinstate FEPC with greater authority than it previously held, however.

A Washington dispatch covering the whole FEPC debacle states:

WASHINGTON, Jan. 12—A showdown over the future of the Fair Employment Practice Committee (FEPC) appeared imminent today as Manpower Commissioner Paul V. McNutt officially announced that the Committee's hearings on anti-Negro discrimination in the railroad industry had been "indefinitely postponed."

With its most important exposure sidetracked by McNutt's lastminute intervention, the FEPS was reported headed for oblivion and the whole drive against Jim Crow in war industry reached a sudden crisis.

While members of the FEPC refused to discuss the issue publicly, pending a formal meeting, they were understood to be virtually unanimous in regarding McNutt's move as a challenge to the Committee's existence. Efforts to arrange a session of the FEPC to weigh joint steps were being made. At least one member said privately that he favored a direct appeal to President Roosevelt, while others talked of prompt resignations unless the order was rescinded.

VAGUE ON REASONS

McNutt confirmed PM's disclosure, that the hearings had been called off, at his press conference yesterday. Asked whether it was true that the projected attack on the "lily white" union-management coalition on the railroads had been called off, he picked up a prepared statement and read it off. The statement said:

"The Manpower Commission felt that postponement of these hearings would permit more intensive activity by the Commission to insure full utilization of manpower on the railroads."

A reporter asked whether McNutt could explain the reasons for the sudden pigeon-holing of the Committee's findings. He replied:

"We felt that if we could take care of the situation this way it would be better. If we can accomplish our purpose in other ways, that's better than by force."

Pressed to explain what "other ways" were being contemplated, the Manpower Chief declined to elaborate. He conceded that the FEPC had not "recommended" abandonment of the hearings, but denied that members of the Committee had opposed the move. A Committee member said later this was technically accurate, because the FEPC had not been given a formal chance to vote on the "postponement."

After McNutt had emphasized the Manpower Commission's belief that railroad discrimination could be dealt with through other methods, a reporter suggested that the same argument could be used to cancel all FEPC investigations. McNutt said:

"Not necessarily."

When another correspondent pointed out that the Commission's action was "belated" in view of the fact that the railroad case had been fully documented and witnesses prepared, McNutt said he didn't think so.

McNutt's comments shattered any doubt that the "postponement" was—in effect—the end of the case which Negro groups and other anti-discrimination organizations had hailed as the "key test" of the FEPC's power. The FEPC is a unit of the War Manpower Commission.

The hearings were slated to get under way on Jan. 26, with Henry Epstein, former Solicitor General of New York State, presiding. Jubilant over the impending drive against one of the major citadels of Jim Crow in American industry, liberal and Negro groups had arranged a mass meeting here for Jan. 24 to mark the event.

al Halsey, the men were in the thick of battle during Uncle's Midway triumph.

Asked whether there was hysteria aboard ship when struck by death dealing bombs, the boys said "No, of course not." In fact, they pointed, though all sailors knew North Hampton was done for, none left the ship until the order to abandon her was given. Even the wounded, they said, were calmly talking while they awaited life rafts.

HOW DO YOU FEEL ABOUT THE WAR?

That was the clincher question. The answer, from seaman Edwards:

"I can't talk for the boys on the other ships, but the guys on ours have a pretty sound faith that things will come out allright for our people.

"Our own effort, we think, helps."

Seaman Moon cut in:

"Listen, if we're defeated, it'll be one hell of a world to live in."

That about says it, we reckon.

7 Chapters Hold Joint Installation

The seven various chapters of Los Angeles held their Joint Installation at the Masonic Hall on December 18 in the afternoon.

The hall was filled to capacity, with many standing. The officers were lovely to look upon. Special mention of the out-going Matrons (1942) is made here in that each were dressed alike and wore accessories which were alike. They were dressed likewise when they entered in 1941. Baskets of flowers decorated the large hall. They were artistically placed in front of the large dias.

The tables of the secretary and treasurer were laden with gifts for the outgoing officers.

We were very proud of our Matron, Sister Bailey, when she was called upon to lead the "National Negro Anthem". Queenly dressed and wearing a corsage of three beautiful orchids, with dignity and poise, she lifted her melodious voice and all knew that she really sang.

After the installation the gifts were presented. Each Past Matron, received a Sash from her chapter, and numerous gifts. Sister Bailey received twenty-one gifts, and a huge basket of flowers, including six Birds of Paradise.

We desire Sister Bailey to know that she put over a full well planned program with our cooperation. She was entitled to be happy at the close of her year as when she entered it. She was nominated for 1943, but graciously declined, to take a much needed rest. Hats off to Theresa Bailey.

papers to get the news. Unwittingly, they absorb the skillfully plotted propaganda of the major American fascist elements through an astonishing majority of our country's newspapers.

Pegler performs the precise function of a Nazi agent provocateur in the United States. His Great Lie about the labor movement, like Hitler's Great Lie about the Jewish people, is hammered home by ceaseless, unutterably nasty repetition.

Despite, however, anything that Mr. Pegler could write or say, and he has written and said just about everything, the labor movement has grown in our country, in numbers and in wisdom. It is in the midst of a great transition, and in the very act of wining the war against fascism may well cleanse itself of the prejudices and short-comings of less trying times.

Pegler's latest stunt, as exposed in "In Fact," was the puolication in a recent column of an "unprompted" letter from another Nazi agent, who, perhaps, is not as carefully guarded by his masters as is Westbrook himself. The letter was the usual Peglerian smear on the laboring people of our country, with fancy licks thrown in against our war-time government.

Well, it turns out that the letter writer, a man named Andrew Hercha, was fired from the Pennsylvania railroad for activities as a Nazi agent. Hercha is further exposed by fellow workers in the Baldwin Army tank company, where a full file of information on Hercha's traitorous activities has been kept by his union.

Another unfortunate foray was Pegler's joust with the Negro press. Here he poked all manner of ridicule at the "unprofessional" aspect of Negro journalism. He never added that the fat purses which feed him and his ilk are never opened, via advertising channels, to the despised Negro press.

Pegler is a foul foretaste of the fascist world we would inhabit under Hitler.

Far from accomplishing his objective, the destruction of the Negro's determination to save himself from that fascist world, at home and abroad, Pegler has become a symbol of the things we struggle against and will continue to struggle against, on every battlefield in the world, until the last banner of the fascist cause is drenched in the blood of its authors.

State Capital Gets Anti-Discrimination Measures

EXCLUSIVE!

VITO MARCANTONIO TELLS HOW TO LICK DIXIE POLL TAX MOB

The poll-tax disfranchises ten million people. Six million of these are white. Four million are Negro.

It seems to me that the greatest unity that can be achieved is by making the people of the world, and of America particularly, realize that we are not discriminating against any one of our fellow countrymen. And one of the important forms of discrimination is that which forbids to any man or woman, black or white, the right to vote. The surest guarantee for unity is the extension of equality to everyone, irrespective of race, color or creed.

That is the kind of democracy for which men are fighting and dying. That is the kind of democracy which must be practiced in order to achieve the unity which is so vital to the winning of the war.

The poll-tax restricts and destroys democracy in those states where it exists. Its abolition extends democracy to the disfranchised Negroes and whites and helps to restore democracy in those states. The continuance of the poll-tax is discrimination and makes for disunity, therefore endangering the chances of winning the war. Abolition of the poll tax abolishes this form of discrimination and makes for unity which is vital to Victory.

There is also a very practical consideration for every union member in the abolition of the poll tax. Eight states are represented in Congress by Representatives and Senators who, because of the poll tax are elected by only a tiny fraction of the people of their states. Yet, not only do they have an equal vote in the House and Senate with Congressmen elected by free franchise in the other states, but because of the seniority system in Congressional Committees, and because these Senators and Representatives can perpetuate themselves in office with the help of the clique that elects them, they also practically control the most important committees.

Before a bill can be voted on by the House of Representatives in the ordinary way, it must be reported out by the appropriate committee. In the case of the anti-poll tax bill, there is the Judiciary Committee, which was controlled by representatives opposed to the anti-poll tax legislation. So naturally they refused to report the bill. This is the reason that the other, difficult method of obtaining the signatures of a majority of the members of the House to a petition to discharge the committee from further consideration of the bill and bring it to a vote, has to be resorted to in this case.

One of the important reasons for the bad tax bills which we get, for the failure of much progressive legislation to pass, is the fact that so many committees are controlled by poll taxers. It isn't possible to discharge petitions for the many bills which are killed in committee. In the case of the tax bills, it would be completely impractical.

It should be remembered, too, that the main fountainheads of reaction in Congress are the Poll Taxers. Howard W. Smith of Virginia is the main spokesman for anti-labor, anti-war-production forces. Martin Dies everyone knows. John E. Rankin of Mississippi is the main disseminator of open race hatred. And so on down the line. These reactionary Democrats are now lining up with reactionary Republicans to form an anti-administration bloc in the House.

In my opinion, the abolition of the poll tax, enfranchisement of the ten million disfranchised Negroes and whites of the South, would improve the whole patriotic complexion of Congress immeasurably.

For all these reasons, on the first day of the Seventy-Eighth Congress, I introduced H. R. 7, a bill to eliminate the poll tax as a prerequisite for voting in primary and other elections of federal officers. The announcement I made at that time indicates the strategy necessary to win enactment of anti-poll tax legislation. I will do everything in my power to implement this strategy.

To insure against a Senate filibuster such as killed a similar bill in 1942, my plan is, with the help of the aroused people of the country, to secure passage of this bill in the first half of 1943. A year and a half will be a long time for poll tax Senators to carry on a filibuster.

At the end of 30 legislative days, I shall place a discharge petition on the Speaker's desk, and the campaign to secure the requisite 218 signatures of members of the House of Representatives to force a vote in the House will begin. Hearings in committee on the bill would be superfluous. The bill has been fully debated. Hearings would merely delay passage.

Every week, the people of the country will be informed which Congressmen have signed the discharge petition, and which have not. I am sure the people will see to it, under these circumstances, that the necessary 218 signatures are obtained in short order.

It is to be expected that every parliamentary trick will be used by the Poll Taxers to prevent or to delay passage of H. R. 7.

I want to assure the people who want this bill passed that every parliamentary manoeuver will also be used to see that it is passed.

Quick passage in the House is essential to the eventual enactment of the anti-poll tax bill into law. I am confident that with the whole-hearted support of the tremendous majority of the people of the country who recognize the necessity of passage of this law as a win-the-war measure, this quick action will be obtained and H. R. 7 will become law.

ANTI-BIAS MEASURES SLATED FOR STATE LEGISLATIVE SESSION

Hawkins and Tenney Propose Measures to Insure Rights for Minority Groups

SACRAMENTO, Jan. 15—Need for solidification of Negro, labor and progressive forces behind an anti-discrimination, win-the-war legislative program was seen here today as a fundamental "must" for the new session of the State legislature.

Already wary of efforts in the new legislature to knock down the post-war minority rights of California's former Japanese citizenry, many of them loyal, cooperative citizens, and a general tendency to enact measures designed to wound labor and the development of full production in the war effort, observers here feel that utmost effort must be expended by the State's huge Negro industrial working population to secure both its rights as labor and as a minority group.

HAWKINS HAS PROGRAM

The hard-hitting legislative program of Los Angeles' Assemblyman Augustus Hawkins has been hailed throughout California as the blue-print for struggle to maintain and extend minority rights, thus insuring their full contribution to the nation's victory.

Hawkins has proposed State laws to banish discrimination in:

1—All California defense industry, (and set up of State Fair Employment Practice Committee.)

2—All State public utilities, (smashing such defeatist activity as the anti-Negro hiring policy of the Los Angeles Railway Co.)

3—All housing projects in the State, (Thus ending the unfair 'quota system' for Negroes and Mexicans in housing units.)

4—All labor unions in the State.

Enactment into law of these four bills would represent virtually a Bill of Economic Rights for the State minorities. The Negro people, powerful today thru their employment by the thousands in basic industry and their mushroom growth in the labor movement, possess the power to spear-head the movement of progressive forces of California behind Hawkins' measures.

CIVIL RIGHTS BILL

Spokesman for State Senator Jack Tenny in Los Angeles stated today that the man who ran California's "Little Dies Committee" has also lined up a program for expansion of civil rights and creation of anti-bias laws for State industry.

Though Tenny has no reputation as a friend of the Negro people or labor, his proposals for Senate action were hailed. Tenny aims to change sections 51 and 52 of the Civil Code to strengthen penalties against denials of service on account of race in public places. According to statements he further wishes to change the State Labor Code "to prevent discrimination and provide a penalty."

Tenny's program is outlined locally by the Negro Chamber of Commerce, Leon Giles, president.

SOUNDS DANGER SIGNAL

Militant Carey McWilliams, dismissed from his post as director of the state division of housing and immigration by the new Governor, issued a sharp warning to the State's minorities this week.

McWilliams, who fought the Southern Pacific railroad to a fare-thee-well when that firm set about the mass transportation of Negro workers from the South to California, leaving most of them stranded and wandering the streets, warns California reaction will launch its attack upon Mexican agricultural labor by mid-summer, attempting to throw off the "last vestiges" of government control and resurrect the days of World War 1 Mexican labor exploitation.

MUST FIGHT

Key to the Negro's legislative fight during this crucial session will be the steadfast support of all win-the-war measures and special organization and demand for guarantees of minority rights as vital links in the chain of fundamental war necessity.

NAACP Body Outlines '43 Program

NEW YORK—At the annual meeting of the NAACP Jan. 4, at 69 Fifth Avenue at which a statement was made to NAACP delegates the association declared that it will ask the 78th Congress to enact federal legislation to abolish the poll tax and lynching, to give desperately-needed federal aid to education and health services, and to reduce representation in the House of Representatives, as provided in Section 2 of the 14th Amendment, from those states where the right to vote is denied to qualified voters. This will give filibustering Southern Senators and Congressmen the choice between abolition of the poll tax, the Democratic "white" primary, and other unconstitutional and improper abridgements to the right to vote on one hand, or drastic reduction in the number of Representatives from these states on the other hand.

In addition to these specific measures, the NAACP's Washington Bureau, national office, and 600 branches, will ask increased authority and funds for the President's Committee on Fair Employment Practice, and for the abolition of discrimination based on race in the armed services, federal government, and war industries.

The year 1942 marked the most phenomenal growth of the Association in its history. Against an estimated budget of $85,600, the Association received from memberships, contributions, and other sources, a total of $117,415.93.

The total paid membership is 160,000 in 600 branches and youth councils in 40 states and the District of Columbia.

COUNCIL ACTS TO PREVENT

Serious Epidemics In Central Ave. Area

Recognition that workers' health is the foundation of victory on the production front, which President Roosevelt says will win the war, was seen this week in the action of the City Council in purchasing the 55th and Central Avenue Health Center as a permanent fixture in Los Angeles' disease fighting machinery.

Costing City Fathers $27,000, the fully equipped and spacious two-story building at 55th and Central Avenue will stand as a buttress protecting a huge war-working community from the dangers of ill-health.

EPIDEMICS THREATEN

Startling, though not wholly unexpected in medical circles, was the announcement that the inmigration of thousands of men and women to the Eastside area raised the possibility of serious epidemics.

Councilman Carl Rasmussen, to whom the fight for the purchase of the building is credited, stated in a special release today:

"Health is directly related to progress and is always desirable, but in war time, the health of citizens and soldiers is absolutely necessary to victory."

CARL RASMUSSEN
... worked for purchase of health center.

According to statements, Rasmussen has worked for over a year to bring the 55th St. center into city ownership. He has brought citizens, fellow Councilmen and other officials to see the over crowded conditions at the clinic. He held meetings with the real estate department of the city, with the owner of the building; he has organized and repeatedly submitted to Councilmen material dealing with Eastside health needs.

Rasmussen himself, however, stresses that purchase of the 55th problem, now one vital to the nation's victory.

But, he points out, purchase of the building makes it possible for the city to apply for Federal funds to develop health facilities street center does not begin to solve the community's health sorely needed.

Under the able guidance of Dr. Ruth Temple, Assistant Health Officer, the clinic has become a proud achievement of the Eastside. According to Dr. Temple, full cooperation has been extended by the City Health Officer, Dr. George Uhl, to expand this area's health program and fully meet its war needs.

Councilman 'Cap' Allen has also been credited with leading the City Council fight for purchase of the center. The Council measure, debated over a year, finally passed last week with a vote of 13 to 2.

"When Federal funds are secured," states Dr. Temple, "we are assured that the City Health Department will develop in the Southeast are a District Health Center and complete cooperative health program which will be a model to the nation as it reduces disease, controls epidemics, and builds strong, victorious men, women and children."

Address Mail to Service Men Properly

Improperly addressed letters to soldiers and sailors are causing needless confusion and inconvenience to our fighting men on the battle fronts. Known as "Nixies," these straying letters delay the mails and fail to reach their destination when most needed, Eleventh Naval District mail authorities said today.

Not only is the fighting man deprived of a letter from home by "Nixies," but they also occupy valuable cargo and storage space, hold up the dispatch of correctly addressed mail, and immobilize men needed more urgently on the fighting fronts.

With operations of the Army and Navy on far-flung fronts, improperly addressed mail literally may follow a man around the world without ever being delivered to him.

Correct addressing of mail necessary to eliminate "Nixie" mail must include: (1) the legible and correct spelling of the man's name, including middle name, (2) his rang rating, 3) serial number (for enlisted men only), and (4) the full name or number of his ship, unit, or shore station

JEFFERSON PROGRAM

STUDENTS IN WARM TRIBUTE TO CARVER

"When Carver landed at Tuskegee Institute forty-six years ago, he picked up the sandy dirt of that part of the country, held it in his hands, and dedicated his life toward saving it.

In these words, young Edward Pryce, former assistant to the late, beloved scientist, George Washington Carver, keynoted his address to the students of Thomas Jefferson high school at a Carver Memorial program last Friday afternoon.

CARVER WOULD HAVE ENJOYED IT

Jefferson students gave a program in Carver's memory which the strange genius would have enjoyed.

Beginning with instructor Sam Brown's organ arrangement of "Swing Low, Sweet Chariot," an atmosphere of beauty and reverence, genuinely felt by the student body, prevailed.

The Jefferson A Capella chorus, followed with "No More Wailin' and Weepin'." The performance was of professional calibre, warm, gently shaded, gathering toward its end the passionate emotion of all the Negro American's great protest songs.

There was no polite appreciation on the part of Jefferson's 'teen-age 'moderns.' The tribute to Carver, sung magnificently, found reverential acceptance among the hundreds of hushed students.

PRYCE SPEAKS

Himself a 1932 graduate of the Eastside high school, Edward Pryce told again the epic story of the Negro slave, sold for an old horse, who became the one-man savior of vast reaches of American farm land.

"Though motherless," Pryce said, "Carver found a new mother, Nature. He knew her intimately."

Carver, generally pictured as humility personified, was revealed as a courageous scientist who refused to see defeat even when confronted with the 300-year old tradition of one-crop cotton planting in the South, an agricultural policy fast bringing Southern soil to disaster.

Since, however, cotton was the Dixie land's only cash crop, scientific lectures on the fallacy of single-cropping could scarcely reform the farmers.

Carver set out to discover new ways to enrich the soil,—and the farmer.

His success is measured in millions of dollars, not one penny of which he would touch, saying simply that his work "is for the brotherhood of mankind."

Out of the peanut, Carver produced over a hundred industries. Salt-peanuts, peanut-oil, oleomargarine, many cooking fats,—all of these are Carver discoveries. With the sweet potato, he developed inks, stains, glues; with the sugar cane husk, until his time considered useless, he created cattle-feed. He grew alfalfa in the South for the first time.

Not long before his death, Carver's genius was applied to the great war-time problem of our whole nation, synthetic rubber.

ARTIST, PAINTER

Pryce told Jefferson students also of Carver's superb painting, examples of which have hung in the world's greatest galleries; he told them of Carver's art as a violinist, a poet, a master of intricate lace-work.

Best of all, he told them Carver's selfless philosophy, the struggle for the betterment of mankind through the brotherhood of mankind. Pryce recalled a favorite saying of the scientist: "The only way we can find peace is to think less of our stomachs and more of our hearts."

YOUTH ON MARCH

NAACP JUNIORS ON WARPATH AGAINST LARY'S DEFEATIST POLICY

"Fighting mad," at the anti-Negro, defeatist policy of the Los Angeles Railway Company, which bars qualified Negroes from jobs as motormen and conductors, Los Angeles Negro youth determined to tell the rest of the city about it Tuesday night at an executive committee meeting of the Junior Council of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, as plans were formulated for a mammoth youth hand-bill drive scheduled to cover the city's downtown area "like a blanket."

The Council, soliciting aid and cooperation from all the city's youth bodies, civic, social and otherwise will hold a meeting to masses of Los Angeles young people Sunday afternoon at 5 p. m. on the second floor of the 28th Street branch YMCA.

Already pledging participation were the hard-working Junior Elks body, the Social Steppers, a youth section of the militant section of L. A. youth activity. Second Baptist church and students of Thomas Jefferson high school.

YOUTH DECIDES APPROACH

Although all recommendations of the Junior Council executive committee will be submitted for action to Sunday's community wide meet and are not in any sense final, the members, representing also several outside organizations, suggested that a day be selected for mass distribution of handbills in the downtown area by Negro youth to passengers of the Los Angeles Railway Company, the citizens of our city.

It was felt that thousands of white people in Los Angeles are not aware of the LARY policy and would aid in protesting it. Committee members also urged that the question be raised on the hand-bills as vital to winning the war, solving the city's transportation problem, rather than exclusively urging Negro rights, as such.

WOUNDS WAR EFFORT

That 300 street cars and busses have been removed from service because of a "man-power shortage," inflicting severe inconvenience, delay and several injuries upon Los Angeles war working thousands, was held as ample proof that the un-American LARY policy wreaks havoc upon the city's war effort.

Especially denounced were the swollen U-cars into which Negro war workers are jammed. Eight U-cars have been removed from the Central Avenue line, according to an official of the AFL Street Car workers union, which is battling for the employment of Negroes.

Refusal to employ qualified Negroes is also a direct violation of the President's executive order 8802 ,the youth pointed out. John Kinloch, Junior Council president, has asked that all youth groups turn out Sunday afternoon to "show Los Angeles that this is our war on the home front, too, and that we know how to fight it."

Council Advisor Clarence O. English joined in asking a full Sunday turn-out. At Tuesday's meeting were Doris Winston, Charlesetta Strange, Lillian Lomax, Vera Rieras, Margaret Haney, John Oscar Haves, Herbert Simmons, Sam Marlowe, Robert Brooks, and Kinloch. Supporting the move but unable to be present were Jeanie Mingleton and Lois Williams. The group represents a cross-

MEDAL FOR ONE-ARMED WELDER

OBIE BARTLETT, young one-armed Negro welder at the California Shipbuilding Corporation yard, this week received a silver medal from the War Production Board. "For Distinguished Service On America's Home Front," the medal was received by Bartlett at his San Pedro home. After five months in a hospital recovering from the loss of his left arm—ripped off by a Jap bomb at Pearl Harbor—Bartlett studied welding and has been at Calship more than five months.

LOST ARM AT PEARL HARBOR -- FINE WELDER

The United States Government this week awarded a silver medal to one its bravest soldiers, honored enemy sniper on the production front, one-armed Obie Bartlett of Calship yards at San Pedro.

Bartlett lost his arm at Pearl Harbor.

Undaunted and determined to do his share in evening scores with the Japanese invaders and Uncle's other enemies, Obie registered in a welding class and studiously applied himself until he had mastered the art of stitching together hot steel.

He was employed, at first with skeptic doubts, by the Calship yards at San Pedro.

The doubts were soon evaporated.

Obie Bartlett, one-armed welder with a personal as well as a patriotic score against the nation's enemies was making a record for himself that few others could top.

Awarding of the silver medal for "production achievement" to Bartlett was quite a ceremony. It was broadcast locally and news of Obie's accomplishment has circled the nation.

3 NEW YORK WAR INDUSTRIES FALL IN LINE WITH FEPC

Three war industries in the New York area, each holding government contracts, have agreed to delete references to race and religion from their application blanks the President's Committee on Fair Employment Practice made known today.

The three firms are executing contracts for both the Navy Department and the War Department. At the request of the committee, the Navy and War Departments issued directions to the companies to modify their application forms in keeping with the national policy of fair employment as stated in Executive Order 8802.

The Pollak Manufacturing Company, 541 Devon Street, Arlington, N. J., dropped the reference to race on its application forms; it had no reference to religion.

The Tung-Sol Radio Tubes Division, 95 Eighth Avenue, Newark, N. J., agreed to drop its question on religion; it had no reference to race on its forms.

The Thomas A. Edison, Inc., West Orange, N. J., deleted references to both race and religion.

In carrying out its duties to correct grievances growing out of discrimination against war workers because of their race, creed, color, national origin, or alienage, the Committee on Fair Employment Practice has sought to eliminate references to race and religion on application forms as one step in overcoming arbitrary rejection of workers of certain racial and religious affiliations solely because of their race and creed.

Gross Cruelty Charged in Divorce Suit

Mrs. Bessie Miller of 947 East 55th street has filed a suit for divorce against her husband, Curtis Miller, well known chef now employed on the private car of the General Manager of the Santa Fe Railway, charging gross cruelty. Mrs. Miller complains that her husband, after a course of studied cruelty over a period of years, climaxed his cruel conduct on January 10th, by assaulting her in a most vicious manner at a time when her leg was in a plaster cast from a broken ankle.

She asked a restraining order in joining her husband from further attacks upon her and from disposing of the community property, including bank deposits and the family auto. She also asked for all the community real estate property located at her address.

The couple have been married for sixteen years having come here from Chicago about five years ago. Mr. Miller has been sited to appear in Judge Wm. S. Baird's court to show cause why he should not provide support for his wife pending the trial of the action.

Geo. Carver Memorial at Trinity

A tribute will be paid to the late George Washington Carver, world renowned agricultural scientist, at the Trinity Baptist Church, 3600 So. Normandie Ave. this Sunday night at 7:45 p. m. Mr. Edward Pryce, graduate and former assistant of the "wizard of Tuskegee" and employed in the horticultural department of city at Lincoln Park, a member of the church, will deliver the principal address based on his personal associations with Dr. Carver. Mr. Pryce, a local boy, who graduated from Jefferson High here and then graduated from Tuskegee, has recently delivered his address at the memorial services conducted at Jefferson for two student assemblies. The address was hailed as noteworthy and the Trinity church, ever alert to provide only the foremost in its contribution to the community life of Los Angeles has given over its entire evening service to this most worthy service.

The music for the occasion will be presented by the Women's Ensemble of the church consisting of forty voices under the direction of Madam Virdes Shortridge and will include a special octette arrangements of "My Task" arranged by Mrs. Shortridge. At the organ will be Mrs. Pryce, the wife of the speaker and assistant organist of the church.

Dr. Carver, whose death is mourned by millions and whose loss to the field of agricultural science will be felt more and more as the need for new products in the world to be, was for many years listed in "Who's Who" in the science due to his painstaking research work at Tuskegee. He was awarded the Spingarn medal by the NAACP in 1923, the Roosevelt medal in 1939 and numerous other rare awards and citations. Los Angeles citizens are urged to make this memorial truly representative by taxing the capacity of this fine Westside church. Dr. J. L. Caston is pastor of the church.

CIO BODY TO REGISTER WORKING MOTHERS WHO WANT CHILD CARE

CIO's Social Service Employees Union Workers Volunteer to Aid Mothers Over 5-Day Period; Open Meeting Closes Registration

For five full days starting Saturday morning, Jan. 16, at 10 o'clock, there will be a staff at work in the headquarters of the C. I. O. Joint Organizing Committee at 4310 S. Central avenue to register working mothers who are want child care in city nurseries for their children. C. I. O. social workers the Social Service Employees' Union are volunteering their services so that large numbers of women may be registered in record time.

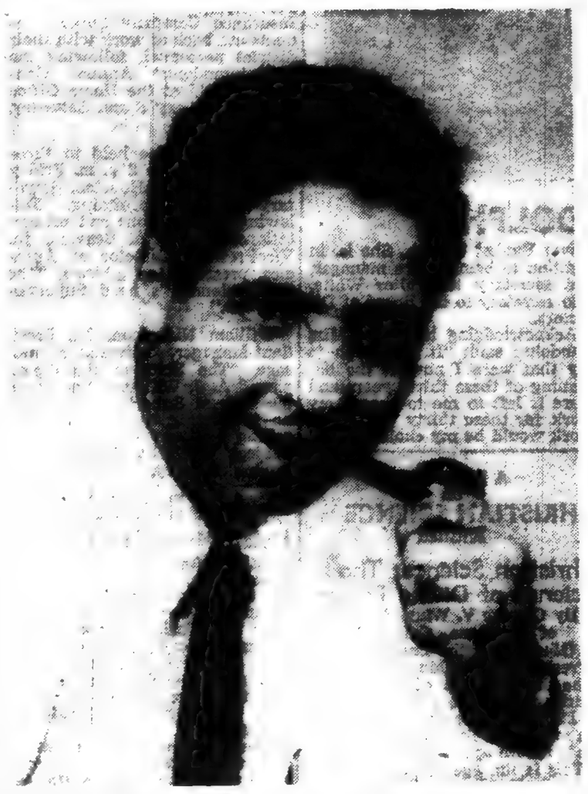
This registration is taking place because of the labor body's awareness of the severe problems that face many working mothers.

A release from the C. I. O. office said today:

"Thousands of women now in industry, in domestic service and other important occupations have children who lack supervision and other care while their mothers must be away from home. This creates health problems, exposes the children to danger, often increases juvenile delinquency and in many ways worries the parents to the extent of seriously interfering with their efficiency in our war effort. For instance aircraft companies estimate that although there are still six times as many men as women in aircraft production, absenteeism among women is numerically twice as great. Industry needs women in increasing numbers all the time. Unless women are assured of decent care for their children, absenteeism will continue to increase, resulting in ever more serious interference with war production."

Continuing the C. I. O. statement holds:

"The C. I. O. believes that one of the answers to this problem is more and more government supported projects for children from infancy to the ages of fifteen and even older. The Federal government is prepared to provide the funds for such projects under the Lanham Act. It is the responsibility of the Board of Education to request the funds, and to put the projects actually into operation. In order to make sure that the Los Angeles Board of Education establishes these child care projects, it is essential that information be compiled to prove that they are actually necessary. It is for that reason that the CIO is taking steps to give all working mothers a chance to register their need for child care. The first registration is taking place for the women of the South-east Area of Los Angeles because this community has an especially high quota of working mothers. The CIO is prepared to do everything possible to see that the evidence is compiled and forcefully presented to the Board of Education at the proper time. Only a strong case will help us bring the necessary facilities to southeast Los Angeles. Therefore all working women with children are urged to come to the headquarters of the CIO. Joint Committee on one of the following dates and get their applications file:



4310 South Central Avenue. Telephone ADams 3321 or Adams 15942. Saturday, Sunday, Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, January 16, 17, 18, 19, 20. From ten o'clock in the morning until ten o'clock in the evening.

On Wednesday evening, January 20th, at eight o'clock, the CIO Joint Committee will climax the registration with an open meeting, featuring Faye Allen of the Board of Education speaking on "Bringing Child Care Facilities to Our Community."

Sincerely,

Revels Cayton, chairman; Rose Segure, secretary.

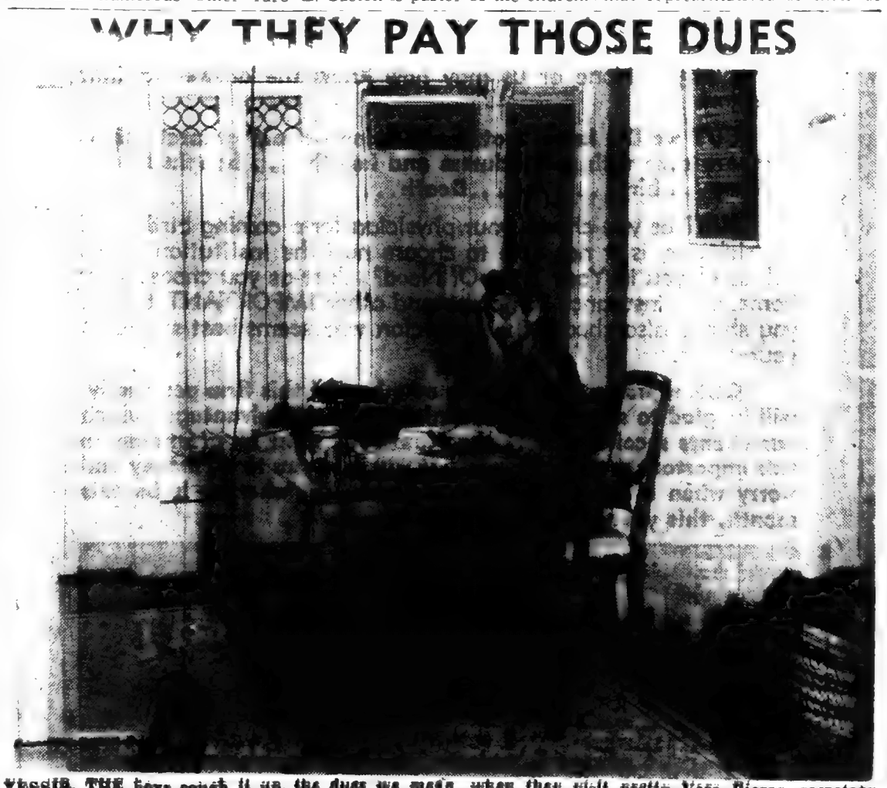
DINING CAR COOKS, WAITERS GROWING

Progressive labor policies have made Local 582, Dining Car Cooks and Waiters Union not only a vital part of the lives of working men but of the community as a whole.

Rounding out two years of its current administration, the union has grown to over double its former numerical strength, has negotiated wage increases of $24 per man per month for the membership, has influenced better relations between the carriers and the men, and has asserted itself as a responsible section of community leadership.

The union's new headquarters at 40th and Central Avenue, where a model community center is operated, provides full facilities for guiding the destinies of hundreds of working men.



Rank-and-file participation has been a cornerstone of union policy and has rallied about the body a membership loyal and interested.

Aside from its phenomenal growth, the Local's proudest accomplishment is its position in the city's body politic. The Dining Car Cooks and Waiters boast that representatives of their organization have participated in virtually every progressive movement in the State during the last year, had has legitimately gained a state-wide respect for its forthright, laboring man's position on the issues of the day.

The union has determined to fight not only for the economic rights of its membership, but for the rank-and-filers civil rights and his political destiny.

The organization is headed by Thomas Rowlett, president; William E. Pollard, secretary-treasurer; and James H. Anderson, grievance representative.

WHY THEY PAY THOSE DUES

YESSIR, THE boys cough it up, the dues we mean, when they visit pretty Vera Rieras, secretary in the office of the fast-expanding Dining Car Cooks and Waiters Union, Local 582, at 40th and Central avenue. They're making labor history!

UP Employee to Fight Drunk Driving Charge

Milburn Norwood, well known man about town and veteran employee of the Union Pacific Railway, has been arrested by officers of the Newton St. Radio Detail and charged with drunk driving, while he was en route home from his employment last Thursday night.

Norwood stoutly denies his guilt and through his attorney, Curtis C. Taylor entered a plea of not guilty and requested a jury trial. The accused man, claims that radio officers stopped him at the corner of 30th and Central and accused him of being drunk. At the time of his arrest he had just discharged two passengers who were riding home with him.

Norwood claims that he pleaded with the officers to either give him a sobriety test or to take him before a physician, all of which they refused to do. His case has been set for trial before Municipal Judge Ben Rosenthal in Division 7 of the Municipal Court on February 5th.

WALLACE PAYS TRIBUTE TO LATE DR. CARVER

Vice President Henry A. Wallace, a native of Iowa where the late Dr. George Washington Carver attended school, has sent a message of condolence to Tuskegee Institute on the death of the noted scientist January 5, 1943.

The Vice President wired Dr. Frederick D. Patterson, president of Tuskegee Institute:

"When Dr. Carver died, the United States lost one of her finest Christian gentlemen. He was a good friend of my father and mother and I had known him for forty-seven years. To the world he was known as a scientist. Those who knew him best, however, realized that his outstanding characteristic was a strong feeling of the immanence of God. Everything he was and did found its origin in that strong and continuous feeling."

Information's time is a wartime scarcity, too!

The trained eyes and fingers of telephone operators are needed, these days, at the switchboards that are heavily loaded with war calls. Telephone equipment of every kind is deep in the war task. Will you help us to make every bit of equipment count? Here is one way:

Please look in the Directory for any number you are not sure of. Please look there first, before you call "Information."

Thousands of calls daily, in which "Information" is asked to help, are for numbers that are IN the Directory.

Our foremost job is the war job. It just is not feasible to do all the things for our customers that we were able to do in peace time.

We appreciate your understanding and your friendly cooperation.

Over 200,000 Pennies Go to LARY Every Day

According to L. A. Reeves, director of public service for the Los Angeles Railway, riders on the street cars and coaches place nearly a quarter of a million pennies in the fare boxes each day. That's about 1500 pounds or three quarters of a ton.

Reeves further points out that it takes about five days for these pennies to go from the fare boxes, through the counting machines, to the banks and back into the fare boxes, so, allowing for the number which must be kept on hand to make change, it seems that it takes about a million and a half of pennies to keep the Los Angeles Railway in operation and that's nearly five tons of copper which now could well be used in industrial channels.

If this five tons of copper which is needed for transportation use in Los Angeles was added to the amounts needed in other cities the tonnage of copper so used would be of great help to Uncle Sam in shortening the period of the war.

Most of this copper could easily be saved for other uses if riders would buy tokens and use them instead of cash fares. Token riding would also save a great deal of time for the riders and, at the same time, would make for greater comfort in riding.

Buying tokens does not include good on all streetcar lines and all buses are sold by the operators on 7c bus lines at any time. There the cars at 10 for 70c and are crease the cost of living. Tokens no limit as to the time when the tokens may be used. They may be purchased in any quantity at the rate of 7c each. By buying a supply at one time the rider saves the inconvenience of stopping for change, depositing three coins in the fare box and, at the same time, helps make the scheduled time through the time saved when entering the car and finding his seat. Token riding would solve many of the wartime problems of public transportation.

A woman is chosen for a term of three years and is eligible for re-election to a second term of three years. No women serve longer than six successive years. She then goes off the Committee of Management, but is eligible for re-election after one year has expired. This is called rotation in office which is a device of democracy in action a number by which different women have the opportunity to share in leadership rather than to serve many, many years without charge.

A LECTURE on CHRISTIAN SCIENCE Entitled

Christian Science: The Science of Divine Power

By Charles V. Winn, C. S. B. of Pasadena, California

(Member of the Board of Lectureship of The Mother Church, The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, Mass.)

If one were to describe the age in which we live, he could do so in no more apt words than these: "This is the age of power." Said Charles V. Winn, C. S. B. of Pasadena at the Twenty-ninth Church of Christ Scientist (Colored), Sunday, Jan. 10, 3 p. m. in auditorium at 1316 E. 46th street.

Through invention, discovery, and research, many forces and forms of power are now available to mankind to make living more harmonious and laborious. So rapidly have these discoveries come that we only have to look back a few years to realize how great our progress has been. When we realize that we can send a message around the world in a few seconds, that we can cross a continent in less than a day, that a beautiful program can be radio cast over the entire country, thus giving pleasure to millions of listeners, we begin to comprehend how far we have come and how limitation has been annulled.

While we are grateful for this advancement, yet we must face the fact squarely that something more than material progress is necessary to bring us true happiness, abiding joy, and permanent health. As we look out on the world today and see its sorrow, its suffering, its strife and tumult, surely we must admit that humanity is still far from the coveted goal of true happiness and lasting peace. The outlook, however, is most cheering. Mortal throes of suffering often presage a great spiritual awakening and so, in the midst of our darkness and unrest, Christian Science has come to this age to reveal the Science of divine power, which will insure tranquility, strengthen courage, promote success, destroy sin, exterminate disease, and reveal life eternal.

A NEW Year For ALL Of Us

GONE, beyond recall, is the year we knew as 1942.

WE live now in the NEW year of 1943.

WHAT will 1943 bring to us — to the individuals of this community? None of us may now know the answer to that question.

BUT we DO know that it will bring certain general things that are ever with us: Sickness and health . . . happiness and sadness . . . birth . . . and . . . Death . . .

JUST as you choose your physician for a coming birth, and for sickness, is it not wise to choose now the institution which will serve you in Your Time Of Need? Just as you choose your home, your insurance company, and other IMPORTANT things, you should also choose the Mortician who seems best suited to your needs.

OUR representative, or the members of this firm personally, will be glad to show you and explain fully the advantages which our clients receive. Start the New Year right by attending to this important matter at once. It will save you time, money and worry when such service as ours is needed, whether it be this month, this year . . . or any year.

MULZAC SAYS SHIP IS SYMBOL OF UNITY; SEES VICTORY IN 1943

Negro Americans, West Indians and Africans are fighting so that their women and children may enjoy more of that freedom which exists under democracy, Captain Hugh Mulzac, master of the Liberty Ship, Booker T. Washington, declared last week in a series of OWI broadcasts beamed to the peoples of the Caribbean area and the British Isles.

Interviewed by Claude McKay, noted poet and author, Captain Mulzac told his Caribbean radio audience.

"Last April when I visited Trinidad, I was chief steward of an American ship. And today I am happy to tell you that I am master of the American ship, the Booker T. Washington. Some of you know that this ship is named for the noble American Negro educator and builder of the all-Negro school of Tuskegee Institute. For 35 years I have sailed the seas and I regard my present position as the greatest honor that has come to me, because it was something that was difficult to achieve. I hope that it will inspire other members of my race to strive hard to win more of these difficult things . . .

"There have been other Negro captains, such as Captain Cockburn, Captain O'Neil and Captain Webster, all West Indians, who like himself previously sailed under the Union Jack. We West Indians in our homes are surrounded by deep water and so we naturally make good seamen. In my voyages to every part of the world, North and South America, Europe and Africa, China and India, I have met West Indian seamen everywhere, in almost every category of seamanship. But as the first American Negro captain I feel that I have a big responsibility to Negroes of the Americas and of Africa.

"We West Indians and Negro Americans and Africans can prove today that for us Democracy is not merely an empty rotten name as the Nazis and Fascists have said. We are braving dangers and fighting so that we may not lose such things as we possess under the democratic system. We are fighting so that our women and our children may enjoy more of that freedom which exists under democracy. We are fighting so that our men will stand more firmly on their feet and lift up their heads as other men."

The American Labor Hour broadcast, sponsored by the AFL, CIO and Railroad Brotherhoods, originated in New York and was rebroadcast to the British Isles. It included interviews with several members of the crew of the Booker T. Washington, who praised the leadership of Captain Mulzac on their first trip.

Harry Alexander, white deck engineer, told how Captain Mulzac had been teaching his men navigation. Alexander said he had been sailing for twenty-two years in the engine department of various ships. When asked how the Booker T. Washington compares with other ships he declared:

"Listen. I've been on ship where the captains sat up nights thinking of things to do to irritate the crew. Our old man spends his time teaching us navagation . . . . In fine weather, we have two or three classes a week, or the afterdeck. One man in our navagation class is going to take his examination for a mate's license, and there will be others like him, soon."

Speaking on this broadcast, Captain Mulzac said in part:

"I am captain of a ship with a mixed crew of white men and Negroes from eighteen different nations. Our chief officer and second officer, chief engineer and radio operator are from the West Indies. Our first, second and third engineers and carpenter are white. And so my crew stand together as a symbol of that democratic way of life for which we are all fighting.

"I know how important it is for me to get my ship through. Every ounce of strength I have, every thought I have is concentrated on that job. If we cannot get through to the men on the fighting fronts, we are ready to die in the attempt. And my crew is with me all the way.

"I have said I was proud of my men. My feelings go further than that. I feel that our crew is a fine example of democracy in action. And the more action we see the more opportunities we are given to fight for what we believe in, and the better we'll take it.

I am proud to say that the men and officers of the Booker T. Washington are as fine an example as there is in the world of black men and white men united for a quick and smashing victory over the Hitlerites, the Fascists and the Japanese--in 1943!"

Negroes: Fight Like Hell!

"Our forward progress in this war has depended upon our progress on the production front."--President Franklin D. Roosevelt in his State of the Union address to the 78th Congress.

. . . . And progress on the production front has depended upon the full mobilization of man-power in every war area, upon the effort of labor and management to compromise differences and adopt every policy necessary for full production.

Prominent among the vital-to-production policies has been that of cracking racial bars to employ Negroes and other racial minorities. Obedience to the President's executive order 8802, barring defense industry discrimination on the basis of race, creed or color, has been extremely ragged. Generally, it has been enforced in those areas where the Negro people and the labor movement are well organized, i. e., where poor people, of both races, have the right to vote, the collective strength to demand adequate wage and working conditions.

Los Angeles Negroes, have, in the last year, contributed tremendously to the "forward progress in this war dependent upon the progress on the production front."

Last year the number of Negro industrial workers numbered a skimpy few hundred. Today they are 30,000.

Sixty thousand hands to build the weapons to wipe Hitler off the face of the earth! How could we translate this into numbers of planes, of ships, of guns? Hundreds of them! Hundreds of planes and guns and ships to hit Hitler because race restrictions in Los Angeles industry were broken, and decisively, in 1942.

That contribution to the war effort by sixty thousand black hands was not made without struggle.

There was bitter opposition. It isn't all gone, by a long shot.

Americans demanding simply the right to join in the battle of production,--where victory will determine the outcome of this war,--fought like demons to achieve that right, to achieve it over the combined opposition of business-as-usual stupidity, prejudice and open pro-fascism.

In other sections of America, Negroes have not won this battle, and to the extent of their failure, production has been wound, the war prolonged, America's security threatened.

Still, the accomplishments of '42 in smashing old racial taboos have been vast.

But, what of the future?

Are our victories secure?

NO! NO! NO! We are faced today with a well-organized conspiracy to defeat American production aimed at beating the Hitler Axis. It belches forth from the lips of defeatists, appeasers, pro-fascists, anti-Negrophiles all over America.

It hides behind a false patriotism. In combatting the contribution to production of Negro workers these Hitlerites claim that "toying with the race question at this time will hurt the war effort, cause disuniy . . . etc." Remember, they will never say that they are attempting to hurt production because they despise the people's war and seek to negotiated peace with Hitler. They will wallow in the sound of their own rhetoric, denouncing our enemies,--but, all the while, they faithfully perform our enemies' job. They disunite America. They prattle against labor. They tell us in the interest of the American war effort to dispense with the services of 13,000,000 vital war workers!

Once they can get Negroes to present their case as a simple plea for justice, for abstract democracy, the defeatists' purpose is half fulfilled. Certainly, it is just that our people should be employed on an equal basis with others. But what makes their employment today imperative for the security of every man, woman and child in the nation, is our country's total war and its life-and-death need for every man to do the job he's fitted to perform. Do it every day, without hindrance of any kind, to the best of his ability and for the future of America.

That section of the New Congress attempting to divide "domestic" issues from the war effort so that its members may still rage against Hitler while they sabotage the production without which we cannot defeat him, should challenge every Negro.

If production were the key to progress in 1942, it may be the key to victory in '43. Anti-labor legislation, helter-skelter organization of the war effort, discrimination against minorities are designed to create discord, dissension, strikes, lockouts,--defeat!

The defeat which would bring to full power over America those fascists at home who have long yearned to extend the terspiracy lying down. We will fight in '43 like we never fought before.

We know how to break-up the defeatist conspiracy against America. Here's how:

1. Pass the anti-poll tax bill, driving from Congress the misrepresentatives of the South, ridding it of such traitors as Dies, Cox, Bilbo and Rankin.

2. Pass the Tolan-Kilgore-Pepper bill, to centralize economic authority and set up a single industrial hiring policy for the whole nation, rigidly enforced.

3. Investigate and prosecute every fascist phoney in the nation, beginning, for once, at the top. Say, for instance, with William Randolph Hearst.

That's our program—We must FIGHT for it!
ror of Meridian, Miss., to every corner of the nation.

We Negro people know about that. Nothing will convince us to take such a con-

No Retreat for FEPC!

If, as first reports indicate, cancellation of the Fair Employment Practice Committee's Jan. 25-27 hearings on railroad and transportation discrimination were cancelled becuse of pressure from the Dixie defeatist bloc in Congress, a tragic and mistaken retreat has been taken by the Administration.

Retreat is no answer to the bold challenge to America's war effort which the Bourbons and the anti-war big shots of the National Association of Manufacturers have flung before the President.

The whole line of Federal policy covering the war period has increasingly indicated that discrimination aganst Negroes is a shameful squandering of the nation's manpower and downright sagotage of our country's victory program. This is true. It is the very heart of pro-fascist America which raises the anti-Negro cry in the midst of ou rwar for survival. Weak-kneed bending before the howls of Messrs. Bilbo and Rankin by the Administration cannot be too severely codemned.

Roosevelt and his advisors must understand that no compromise can be struck with the Copperheads. They are out to sabotage the war effort. Throwing Negro-America to the lions won't stop them. It will simply encourage that gang to increasingly bold action against all the President's commendable legislation plans for full prosecution of the war effort.

As Negroes, we art outraged if the FEPC has been shut up by the machinations of the Dixie die-hards.

As Americans, we proclaim that this is a direct attack upon the war, that war whose total victory holds with it the future of us all, 130,000,000 of us.

Neither the President, Mr. McNutt, nor anyone else can make unity with the Hitlerites of the disfranchised South. They jump to the pulled strings of the NAM and the Hearst press. Rather than compromise, our government must strike boldly at the heart of this conspiracy of traitors. It must srengthen the FEPC, thus mobilizing millions of workers enthusiastically behind the war effort. It must fight for passage of the anti-poll tax bill, and break the shackles which bind millions of Americans from fighting Hitler.

Lincoln tried to do business with Copperheads. He failed. It can't be done.

That this is a People's War is more than a phase. Only the people can fight and win it.

The ponderous special interest that is the Poll Tax South is pressing its venomous fingers about the neck of American war production.

American doesn't retreat before traitors. It attacks.

Lincoln found that out.

Roosevelt will, too. HE MUST!

CIO Takes a Real Step Forward

A real step forward in bringing the services of trade unionism to the Negro community is the action of the CIO. Joint Committee this week in rallying the whole section to a demand for adequate nursery facilities for mothers working in defense industries and in domestic services.

Funds, already appropriated, are held by the Los Angeles Board of Education for the setting up of nurseries in all areas where there is a need for them. Communities, however, must prove their need of nurseries through registering the number of children without care, compiling the information, and presenting it to the Board. It is here that the CIO has stepped in to offer the full facilities of its new office at 4310 South Central Avenue.

In a message to the city's ministers yesterday, the labor body stated:

"We know that many thousands of women now in industry, in domestic service, and other occupations have children who lack supervision and other care while the mothers must be away from home. This creates health problems, expose the children to danger, often increases juvenile delinquency, and in many ways worries the parents to the extent of seriously interfering with their efficiency in our war effort.

"The Los Angeles Board of Education is responsible for providing sponsorship of projects for day care of children in this community. They have taken the first step in providing such care by applying to the Federal government for funds which are available under the Lanham Act . . .

"In order to make sure that the Board of Education establishes these child care projects, we have to have the evidence that they are actually necessary.

"This puts the problem squarely up to us and to you! We are prepared to do everything in our power to see that this evidence is compiled and with others in the community to forcefully present it to the Board of Education at the proper time. For this reason the CIO Joint Committee has set aside four full days at which we will have a staff of workers take applications from working women who have children needing care.

"Applications will be received at the office of the CIO Joint Committee, 4310 So. Central avenue, Saturday, Sunday, Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, Jan. 16, 17, 18, 19 and 20."

. . . We have quoted the letter almost in full because we believe it is an example of progressive union activity. It is through such efforts that thousands of Negro industrial workers may be inducted into the labor movement joined with millions of others, white and black, all over the nation, to engage, finally, in an all-out contest for their full human rights, for the winning of the war against Hitler barbarism, for the peace that shall be a People's Peace.

India Freedom Is Victory Need

Thus the very fact that India has not been granted her freedom makes it possible for Axis agents among the Indian people to spread malicious propaganda of this sort; it helps them in their work of sowing disunion and confusion; it enables them to organize sabotage against the war effort; it enables them to develop among the people doubts as to the sincerity of the United Nations. Not only is internal disunity furthered by this state of affairs, but Axis agents are enabled by this means to sow distrust and disunity between the people of India and the people of the United Nations.

Today's requirement, therefore, as I see it, is INDIA MUST BE FREE in order to guarantee victory, in order to make it more immediately possible to organize and achieve that victory speedily. India must be free now, during the course of the war, in order to assure crushing the Axis, a just peace, and a postwar world of peace, freedom and security amongst the peoples of the world.

It is therefore, from this premise that I wish to approach the discussion of the issue concerning Indian freedom, tonight.

There still remains a great deal of confusion in the minds of many people regarding the Indo-British deadlock. The American press from the Atlantic seaboard to the Pacific coast, with some honored exceptions—notably the Negro press and leading labor and people's papers—has spread a volume of "reasons" that purport to prove "India incapable" of assuming the role of a full, free and equal partner in the ranks of the United Nations.

In the attempt to prove this argument to the American people, the press spoke of India not as a nation, but presented India in many instances as a land of racial cleavages, of religious fanaticism, of separate nations, of various tribes—each of these groups assertedly following its own customs untouched by the cataclysmic events of history that were occurring beyond India's borders. Over all, however, there was pictured a benevolent paramountcy in the shape of the Government of India, providing a system of law and order for all, which if withdrawn—especially now when India faces a crisis—would result in chaos becoming rampant throughout the land. It was said that the Moslems would avenge themselves by cutting the throat of every Hindu, and every Hindu would seek to do likewise to every Moslem. The result: India, this press claimed, would become easy prey for the Nazi-Japanese imperialists.

It was to be noted that none of the newspapers which pictured these horrors ever suggested ways and means through which to inspire India's four hundred million people to a full support of the United Nations' war effort in the Asiatic theatre of conflict.

By their editorial silence such papers have condoned the machine-gunning from the air of the Indian people. They have, by their refusal to print the true facts about India, given the Colonial Tories and appeasers who have still managed to hang on in the British Cabinet, the moral right to carry on in India the rule of the LATHI. Thus they have contributed to the creation of a lack of mutual understanding between Americans and Indians, even to the extent of fostering a bitterness and resentment which hinders the development of a win-the-war spirit, not alone in this country, but in India and in other parts of the United Nations as well.

Let us look at a few facts about India.

India is a nation. India is a signatory to the United Nations' pact. India is a member of the United Nations. And yet India today provides the United Nations with grave and serious problems It is clear that few things could be more dangerous to Allied success than failure to understand the nature of the Indian crisis. Obviously, the first requisite to understanding the Indian problem is to sweep away the volumes of trash fed us by the Colonel Blimps abroad and at home. We must come to grips at once with the basic fundamentals of the issue existing between the Indian people and the Colonial Tories. The problem no longer can be claimed to concern India and Britain alone. It has become the problem of all who want to see the Axis defeated. It has become a prime United Nations concern, because Indian freedom has now reached the state of being a military necessity, a condition of victory, in this people's war of liberation.

I would like to do a little of the sweeping away of trash right here and now, and would like to begin by calling your attention to an argument, much too often repeated, that "the Indian Congress Party does not represent all of India. It does not represent the majority of people in India. It does not even represent the Hindu masses. It is a political organization built around a party machine and it is sustained by certain manufacturing and financial interests." So says the press.

The Congress does not, of course, represent ALL India in the sense of representing every group and every shade of opinion. It cannot claim to represent or claim the loyalty of the Indian Princes, or the big landlords, or the merchant princes. A number of Indians who owe their place in public life to the Government of India would also not be expected to give Congress their support. And under the present leadership of the Moslem League, that organization has adopted a policy in opposition to the Congress. But with such exceptions, the Congress still represents the opinion of more than three-quarters of all the people of India.

Again, in defense of Colonial Tory rule in India, the Colonel Blimps argue that a national government in India is impossible because of what they call the "communal problem"—the claim being that "ninety million Moslems oppose the Congress."

I think it will be news to you that eighty percent of the Moslems in India are of the same racial stocks as the Hindus. Millions have accepted the Moslem faith simply in order to escape caste restrictions. This process has been going on since the ninth century, A. D.

The Moslems, incidentally, are divided into five groups. The two largest are the Momins and the Ahrars. The Momins number 45 million and the Ahrars and the Shias together number 30 millions. The Momins, Ahrars and Shias represent the Moslem peasantry of India. They unqualifiedly support the Indian National Congress. And because they are peasants in common with Hindu peasants they have cut across religious barriers. They are the largest Moslem groups. Whom, then, does the Moslem League represent? It can be correctly said that the Moslem League is not representative of such bodies.

The Congress itself, being the main organizational expression of the nation-wide movement of political liberation and economic emancipation, is a democratic body of years of experience in welding together all constructive, progressive forces in India. It is scarcely known here in the United States, that the India Congress has organized scores of thousands of Congress Committees throughout the length and breadth of India discussing policies and problems and making contributions to the Congress' national decisions.

The All-India Congress Committee is an elected body, the elections being hotly contested. It controls and directs Congress policy. Congress does not think in terms of Hindus and Moslems. It does not recruit members according to religion. It affords no special favors or concessions to anyone. It permits no religious, racial, caste or sex discrimination. Within its fold will be found men and women of all racial and religious groups in India.

During the past twenty-five years, nine Moslem organizations, with a membership many times that of the Moslem League, have repeatedly announced their support of the Indian National Congress. Only the small minority in the Moslem League have declared their opposition.

AUSTRALIAN RED TAPE

After years of over-warm debate, Australia appears to be on the point of passing a universal service conscription law, when Parliament meets this month. With General Sir Archibald Wavell begining what appears to be a move to retake Burma, all-out Australian help will be essential. Australia's defense setup is full of complexities. American soldiers have traveled as far as 6000 miles in defense of their country, but the Australian military aren't permitted to cross Torres Strait (a distance similar to that between Key West and Cuba) to defend Australia! The majority of people are bitterly against this policy. This group says that a comparatively small proportion of citizens have been trying to play horse with the war effort! Now things are coming to a head and Prime Minister John Curtin has signified his intention of bringing the conscription measure to a vote. The military leaders find the present setup a decided handicap in planning a successful war effort. America has no corner on red tape.

THE EIFFEL'S AWFUL

Rust dooms the Eiffel Tower, that landmark for Americans in Paris! built of iron, for the Exposition of 1889, by A. G. Eiffel, a French engineer, it stood up over the city like a giant on stilts. Every American tourist in Paris in past years, climbed it as a duty to himself, to his country, and to France. It never was considered any addition to the remarkable beauty of this famous old city, but there is a feeling of sadness that lack of material and men--the necessities of war--should be the cause of its decay. Better to have taken it down while its dignity remained to it.

★ SPREADING JOY

SPREADING JOY
By JOHN FOWLER

Again our good friend Sheriff Eugene Biscailuz and his able staff has proven that this office believes in a real Democracy. This is demonstrated in the appointment of a colored man, the first ever to serve as court Bailiff in the county.

Last week Wilber A. Bratton, the son of Major and Mrs. Bratton of South Serrano street, was so elevated. Young Bratton is a newcomer in the Sheriff's office. His intelligent and courteous manner has already won for him the respect of the whole department.

He has been assigned to Judge Georgia Bullock's court. This fine jurist is another good friend of the race. I feel sure that Bailiff Wilber will make good and reflect credit upon the office, himself and his race.

I believe it high time that a proper appreciation of the value to the city and the race be paid to one of our most highly respected city officials. So I am tipping the lid to Deputy City Prosecutor Bert McDonald. His fifteen years' service in the city attorney's office has given him an opportunity to prove his mettle. No man in that office is more familiar with the law and procedure than he.

Reared and educated here in Los Angeles, he knows everybody, high and low. Even with his vast popularity, he is modest and retiring. He does not seek limelight, but prefers results to publicity.

Bert McDonald was one of the masterminds behind the scenes in the last campaign for Governor

My guess is that he will be an important factor in the Warren Administration.

I have been informed that we have a valuable emmissary in the person of Louis V. Cole. He sold himself to the Pacific Wire Rope Company a war defense plant and by dint of hard work and intelligent application, he drew himself up by his bootstraps, as it were to a place of confidence and respect.

In the plant, where the personnel is 60 percent white and [40] percent colored, Cole's efforts have made working conditions and group loyalty vastly improved.

I am proud indeed to report that our women are taking their place like women of all other groups in war industry and not only making good but are looking good.

If you want to know where many of our young ladies are training for war work, just look in at the North American Aircraft Training School on South Figueroa street. There you will see from three to five hundred bright-eyed, good-looking young brown beauties preparing to take their places on the production line.

In peace-time industry, too, they are replacing men and their white sisters on elevators in some of our biggest firms.

If you want to experience a feeling of pride surging through your veins and your chest expand, go into Bullocks and see those nifty colored girls handling those elevators and note their intelligence and good manners.

Or drop into Barker Brothers and see that attractive crew of brownskins and hear their courteous, "Watch your step, please."

And in the Fifth Street Store, too, our girls are replacing men on the elevators and making good.

Yes, I am behind the eight ball, but only because I am wearing one of the gift key rings that Celestus King gave as Christmas

"NATIVE SON" ★

From the book by
RICHARD WRIGHT

"Did you, in your agitation of that drunken Negro, tell him that it was alright for him to have sexual relations with white women?"

"No!"

"Did you advise Miss Dalton to have sexual relations with him?"

"No!"

"Did you shake hands with that Negro?"

"Yes."

"Did you offer to shake hands with him?"

"Yes. It is what any decent person . . . "

"Confine yourself to answering the questions, please, Mr. Erlone. We want none of your Communist explanations here. Tell me, did you eat with that Negro?"

"Why, yes."

"You invited him to eat?"

"Yes."

"Miss Dalton was at the table when you invited him to sit down?"

"Yes."

"How many times have you eaten with Negroes before?"

"I don't know. Many times."

"You like Negroes?"

"I make no distinctions . . ."

"Do you like Negroes, Mr. Erlone?"

"I object!" Max shouted. "How on earth is that related to this case!"

"You cannot regulate these questions!" the coroner shouted. "I've told you that before! A woman has been fully murdered. This witness brought the deceased into contact with the last person who saw her alive. We have the right to determine what this witness' attitude was toward that girl and that Negro!" The coroner turned back to Jan. "Now, Mr. Erlone, didn't you ask the Negro to sit in the front seat of the car, between you and Miss Dalton?"

"No, he was already in the front seat."

"But you didn't ask him to get into the back seat, did you?"

"No."

"Why didn't you?"

"My God! The man is human! Why don't you ask me . . . ?"

"I'm asking these questions and you're answering them. Now, tell me, Mr. Erlone, would you have invited that Negro to sleep with you?"

"I refuse to answer that question!"

"But you didn't refuse that drunken Negro the right to sleep with that girl, did you?"

"His right to associate with her or anybody else was not in question . . ."

"Did you try to keep that Negro from Miss Dalton?"

"I didn't . . . "

"Answer yes or no!"

"No!"

"Have you a sister?"

"Why, yes."

"Where is she?"

"In New York."

"Is she married?"

"No."

"Would you consent for her to marry a Negro?"

"I have nothing to do with whom she marries."

"Didn't you tell that drunken Negro to call you Jan instead of Mr. Erlone?"

"Yes, but . . . "

"Confine yourself to answering the questions!"

"But, Mr. Coroner, you imply . . . "

"I'm trying to establish a motive for the murder of that innocent girl!"

"No, you're not! You're trying to indict a race of people and a political party!"

"We want no statements! Tell me, was Miss Dalton in a condition to say good-bye to you when you left her in that car with the drunken Negro?"

"Yes. She said good-bye."

"Tell me, how much liquor did you give Miss Dalton that night?"

"What kind of liquor was it?"

"Rum."

"Why did you prefer rum?"

"I don't know. I just bought rum."

"Was it to stimulate the body to a great extent?"

"No."

"How much was bought?"

"A fifth of a gallon."

"Who paid for it?"

"I did."

"Did that money come from the treasury of the Communist Party?"

"No!"

"How much was drunk before you bought the fifth of rum?"

"We had a few beers."

"How many?"

"I don't know."

"You don't remember much about what happened that night, do you?"

"I'm telling you all I remember."

"All you remember?"

"Yes."

"Is it possible that you don't remember some things?"

"I'm tellin you all I remember."

"Were you too drunk to remember everything that happened?"

"No."

"You knew what you were doing?"

"Yes."

"You deliberately left the girl in that condition?"

"She was in no condition!"

"Just how drunk was she after the beers and rum?"

"She seemed to know what she was doing."

"Did you have any fears about her bein able to defend herself?"

"No."

"Did you care?"

"Of course, I did."

"You thought that whatever would happen would be alright?"

"I thought she would be alright."

"You thought that a drunken Negro would be able to handle a white girl?"

"I thought he would be all right."

"Just tell me, Mr. Erlone, how drunk was Miss Dalton?"

"Well, she was a little high, if you know what I mean."

"Feeling good?"

"Yes; you could say that."

"Receptive?"

"I don't know what you mean."

"Were you satisfied when you left her?"

"What do you mean?"

"You had enjoyed her company?"

"Why, yes."

"And after enjoying a woman like that, isn't there a let down?"

"I don't know what you mean."

"It was late, wasn't it, Mr. Erlone? You wanted to go home?"

"Yes."

"You did not want to remain with her any longer?"

"No; I was tired."

"So you left her to the Negro?"

"I left her in the car. I didn't leave her to anybody."

"But the Negro was in the car?"

"Yes."

"And she got in the front seat with him?"

"Yes."

"And you did not try to stop her?"

"No."

"And all three of you had been drinking?"

"Yes."

"And you were satisfied to leave her like that, with a drunken Negro?"

"What do you mean?"

"You had no fear for her?"

"Why, no."

"You felt that she, being drunk, would be as satisfied with anyone else as she had been with you?"

"No; no . . . Not that way. You're leading . . . "

"Just answer the questions. Had Miss Dalton, to your knowledge, ever had sex relations with a Negro before?"

"NO."

"Did you think that that would be as good a time as any for her to learn?"

"No; no . . . "

"Didn't you promise to contact a Negro to see if he was grateful enough to join the Communist Party?"

"I didn't say I'd contact him."

"Didn't you tell him you'd contact him within two or three days?"

"No."

"Mr. Erlone, are you sure you didn't say that?"

"Oh, yes! But it was not with the constructions you are putting upon it . . . "

"Mr. Erlone, were you surprised when you heard of the death of Miss Dalton?"

"Yes. At first I was too stunned to believe it. I thought surely there was some mistake."

"You hadn't expected that drunken Negro to go that far, had you?"

"I hadn't expected anything."

"But you told that Negro to read those Communist pamphlets, didn't you?"

"I gave them to him."

"You told him to read them?"

"Yes."

"But you didn't expect him to go so far as to rape and kill a girl?"

"I didn't expect anything in that direction at all."

"That's all, Mr. Erlone."

Bigger watched Jan go back to his seat. He knew how Jan felt. He knew what the man had been trying to do in asking the questions. He was not the only object of hate here. What did the Reds want that made the coroner hate Jan so?

"Will Mr. Henry Dalton please come forward?" the coroner asked.

Bigger listened as Mr. Dalton told how the Dalton family always hired Negro boys as chauffeurs, especially when those Negro boys were handicapped by poverty, lack of education, misfortune, or bodily injury. Mr. Dalton said that this was to give them a chance to support their families and go to school. He told how Bigger had come to the house, how timid and frightened he had acted, and how moved and touched the family had been for him. He told how he had not thought that Bigger had had anything to do with the disappearance of Mary, and how he had told Britten not to question him. He then told of receiving the kidnap note, and how shocked he had been when he was informed that Bigger had fled his home, thereby indicating his guilt.

When the coroner's questioning was over Bigger heard Max ask: "May I direct a few questions?"

"Certainly. Go right ahead," the coroner said.

Max went forward and stood directly in front of Mr. Dalton.

"You are the president of the Dalton Real Estate Company, are you not?"

"Yes."

"Your company owns the building in which the Thomas family has lived for the past three years, does it not?"

"Well, no. My company owns the stock in a company that owns the house."

"I see. What is the name of that company?"

"The South Side Real Estate Company."

"Now, Mr. Dalton, the Thomas family paid . . . "

"Not to me! They pay rent to the South Side Real Estate Company."

"You own the controlling stock in the Dalton Real Estate Company, don't you?"

"Why, yes."

"And that company in turn owns the stock that controls the South Side Real Estate Company, doesn't it?"

"Why, yes."

"I think I can say that the Thomas family pays rent to you?"

"Indirectly, yes."

"Who formulates the policies of these two companies?"

"Why, I do."

"Why is it that you charge the Thomas family and other Negro families more rent for the same kind of houses than you charge whites?"

"I don't fix the rent scales," Mr. Dalton said.

"Who does?"

"Why, the law of supply and demand regulates the price of houses."

"Now, Mr. Dalton, it has been said that you donate millions of dollars to educate Negroes. Why is it that you exact an exorbitant rent of eight dollars per week from the Thomas family for one unventilated, rat-infested room in which four people eat and sleep?"

The coroner leaped to his feet.

"I'll not tolerate your browbeating this witness! Have you no sense of decency? This man is one of the most respected men in this city! And your questions have no bearing . . . "

"They do have a bearing!" Max shouted. "You said we could question with latitude here! I'm trying to find the guilty person, too! Jan Erlone is not the only man who's influenced Bigger Thomas! There were many others before him. I have as much right to determine what effect their attitude has had upon his conduct as you had to determine what Jan Erlone's had!"

"I'm willing to answer his questions if it will clear things up," Mr. Dalton said quietly.

"Thank you, Mr. Dalton. Now, tell me, why is it that you charged the Thomas family eight dollars per week for one room in a tenement?"

"Well, there's a housing shortage."

"All over Chicago?"

"No. Just here on the South Side."

"You own houses in other sections of the city?"

"Yes."

"Then why don't you rent those houses to Negroes?"

"Well . . . Er . . . I-I-I don't think they'd like to live any other place."

"Who told you that?"

"Nobody."

"You came to that conclusion yourself?"

"Why, yes."

"Isn't it true you refuse to rent houses to Negroes if those houses are in other sections of the city?"

MARIAN ANDERSON, noted contralto, sings "The Star Spangled Banner" at the dedication of a murial comemorating her free public concert on the steps of the Lincoln Memorial on Easter Sunday, 1939. The dedication was held in the Department of Interior Auditorium before a distinguished audience on January 6, 1943. Miss Anderson is holding a bouquet of roses presented to her by Negro high school cadets who served as ushers at the ceremony. Secretary of Interior Ickes accepted the mural for the government.

MARIAN ANDERSON IN HISTORIC CONCERT

(This article covering the Marian Anderson concert in Washington, D. C., was especially written for the California EAGLE.—Ed.)

Vivid, tremendous, colorful, but most of all historic, was the stupendous concert of Marian Anderson tonight. For the first time in our capital did Negroes and whites share the spiritual messages delivered thru the most dynamic voice in history.

The two races were intermixed throughout the entire hall. Glimpses, innumerable of beautifully gowned women, black and white, formed a blend with the lustrous Chinese red and gold trim velvet creation worn by the artist.

One would now have known that the two races had ever been separated. Each was exceedingly friendly with responses. The warmth observed during the entire performance proved a specific step forward, not only for the DAR and the capital, but for the entire country and democracy.

Marian Anderson is a great artist, but a greater American. Her contribution to our United States reached its climax at Constitution hall. Here the withdrawal of one of the most destitute dogmas marks a milestone in the elimination of medieval ignorance.

The charming artist and her accompanist constitute a motivation which cannot escape the profound force of an integrated nation. It is through an exchange of spiritual reactions that realism can be experienced. This, Miss Anderson affords as no artist has ever accomplished before.

Selections which brought most of the appreciation were "Auf dem Wasser Zu Singen," by Franz Schubert; the aria, "Pleurez Mes Yeux," from "Le Cid," by Jules Messenet; "Amuri, Amuri," by Geni Sadero, and to the memory of George Washington Carver, Miss Anderson rendered the favorite, "Ave Maria."

Resonance, tonal quality, precision, balance and varied modes with the saturated mellowness that only Miss Anderson has expressed, brought to the audience a well-rounded epic.

THE MAKINGS OF A GREAT U. S. GENERAL

oOo oOo oOo oOo

Lieut. Gen. Eisenhower and Negro Captain Were Old Football Rivals

(NOTE TO EDITORS—Lieut. Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, Commander-in-Chief of the Allied Forces in North Africa, recently commended the courageous service of American Negroes in the United States Army during action on that battlefront. The following article, recounting a significant incident in General Eisenhower's youth, is made available to your paper through the courtesy of the College of Pacific Weekly in which it originally appeared.)

The scene was a sleepy fall day in an even sleepier Kansas town of the early 1900's. The character was a young lad of about 19, scuffling and thinking his way down the dusty pthway. You could tell he was thinking deeply, and that what was bothering him was not the usual trouble that besets the late adolescent.

He opened the gate leading to the street an dstarted on his way to football practice. Minutes later he walked into the dressing room. His team-mates somehow knew that there was an emotional storm brewing under the exterior calm of their captain.

They were quiet that day. There wasn't the usual horseplay and joshing. And strangest of all the captain left the field before practice was over.

He walked slowly into the dressing room, tears in his eyes. The day when he had been elected captain was his happiest, this day was his saddest.

You see, he wasn't like every boy in the town whose parents and grandparents had lived there before them. His mother and father had left Germany before he was born, that their son might live in a land of tolerance and democracy--precious word.

They'd come to this small village because it seemed to them the ideal place to raise a child in the American Way. And they had raised their son that way. He'd gone swimming when he should have been painting the fence; fishing when he was supposed to be in school. He was just like every other boy in that village, only his parents had taught their lesson well. That's why there were tears in his eyes as he waited for his pals.

For those boys had refused to play a nearby high school team because there was a Negro boy on that team. And the young captain couldn't stand it. The door opened, and the other fellows filed slowly in.

He spoke simply, but his voice broke in the telling, "I'm ashamed of you, every last one of you. How can you make those things for which my parents and your great grandparents fought for mere words? How can you live a life half-free and half slave--your mind free to parrot the words of Lincoln, and your actions slave to the prejudices of the mob? How dare you?" And he left the room.

There was a moment of stunned silence. No one had ever talked to them like that before. And then the unashamed one spoke, "I think we'd better call him back, and play the game his way."

They did play the game his way, and he did come back. The young captain broke his leg later that year and never played again. But though these many years have passed that boy's spirit is still worshipped in the sleepy Kansas town.

For he is Dwight Eisenhower, leader of the American troops in our fortieth front of the war. And serving under him as captain in the colored troops, assisting in the invasion is that same Negro boy who played against him so many Falls ago.

The story is remarkable because of the coincidence. But it is more remarkable in that it shows in the simplest fashion the stuff of which real heroes are made. It was the spirit that young Dwight Eisenhower learned from his home that carried him to today's headlines.

More than that it was his unwavering determination to live his favorite words that led him to take the bitterest step in his life. That he personally would be hurt, he knew. But that his standards should be shaken, would be unthinkable.

There are lessons, in this, the finest story of the war. Lessons for the parents to instill in their children the love for the truth that will make them uncompromising crusaders. Lessons in tolerance for us all. A lesson that says stand for the truth no matter what it costs. And finally, that the war may not be won on the playing fields of Eton, but it is won already in the thatched hut near the Volga, in the tenements of Shanghai, in the vicar's cottage of an English countryside, and in the sleepy little Kansas dusty-pathed home.

Service Men Enjoy Fast-Moving Week of Fun at Oakland USO Club

OAKLAND, Jan. 15.—The De-Fremery USO club ended its Yuletide festivities when the junior hostesses staged one of the gayest parties of the season last Saturday night for hundreds of service men stationed in and about the Eastbay area.

Home-made popcorn, crispets, nut fudge, peanut brittle, cookies and fruits were freely distributed. Noise makers, confetti, serpentine and paper hats gave the club the carnival appearance.

The party was a fitting wind-up to one of the busiest and happiest weeks of merriment that the club had experienced since its opening in September, 1942, a little over 90 days ago. With Paul Reid at the piano and Essex Cook at the marimba and drums, the dance clicked from the start. The men and their hostesses jitterbugged all over the place until closing time, and then asked for more.

The previous Thursday night, a bus load of hostesses and their chaperones left the club house and journeyed to Vallejo to entertain the sailors there. They were greatly outnumbered, but they entered into the affair of bringing as much happiness as they could to the men, and they figuratively danced their hearts out. It is said that there is hardly a more loyal and conscientious group of junior hostesses in the State of California.

The invitation to go to Vallejo was in the nature of an emergency call, but time made no difference to them. They left parties which had been arranged for some time before, their church engagements and their home firesides to be with the boys on New Year's Eve. They were recruited within less than 12 hours notice.

The girls and their chaperones arrived back at the club house at 2 a. m., a tired but happy group.

"Sure we were tired," said one of the girls, "but we would do it again, and right now, if the byos asked us to."

And believe it or not, it was that same group that dadnced so strenuously at the New Year's night party, less than 24 hours later.

GENEROSITY OF THE COMMUNITY

Through the generosity of the community, the club has been able to send several electric pin ball games, phonograph records and athletic equipment to several of the camps. The boys are now enjoying these during their spare moments. If one could personally witness the joy on the faces of the men as they play with one basketball, there would be a fuller response to the men's appeal for friendships, in a land strange to most of them.

The efforts of the Phyllis Wheatley club is a shining example of what can be done to make the service men know that they have not been forgotten by the people of the Eastbay area. They have taxed themselves far in excess of any Victory tax, as we know it, to purchase monthly, useful gifts which they are giving, through the club, to the service men in this area. They have been doing this quietly and without fanfare for many months in the past. They are a lovely group of ladies who never tire of making someone else happy. Their officers are Mesdames Frieda Bethel, president; Eugenia Green, recording secretary; Laura Calhoun, corresponding secretary; Charlotte Stanton, financial secretary; and Miss Edith Davis, treasurer.

Eastside USO Books Full Week for Service Men

Over the week end, which is a busy time, a party of forty men were feted for good behavior. The officer in charge was grateful for any entertainment that could be planned. The agenda ran something like this: Sunday night "Take It Or Leave It" Broadcast at NBC, the Biltmore Theatre, Thursday evening, and a tour of Twentieth-Century Fox Motion Picture Studio the following Saturday afternoon. Reading material was also secured for this group.

A Saturday evening broadcast over Radio Station KFWB, with Margaret Harrison and a Vesper service conducted by Mr. Cyrus Keller, assisted by Misses Mattie Moorehead and Frances Holland, were our two club highlights for the past week. The reading room of the USO Club was filled to capacity with soldiers, sailors and hostesses. Negro spirituals, gospel hymns, and an occasional secular number were enjoyed. The harmonies were spontaneous and the general feeling was one of reverence and solemnity.

Amid excitement and thrills, three carloads of hostesses and service men journeyed to the broadcasting station. In the group were three visiting Lieutenants.

Of this number was the former Private B. K. Craig, who was among the first group of service men who came to Los Angeles over a year ago for specially arranged entertainment.

Local daily newspapers are taking note of the interesting results obtained by this club in featuring it on their Women's pages, such as a feature article in the Los Angeles Times of Jan. 6. The majority of the bridesmaids in Mrs. Margaret Herron Bullock's military wedding at Second Baptist Church, were Junior USO hostesses. The guard of honor was also selected from service men who visit this club.

The military motif was carried out by the color combination of the bridesmaids' gowns. Red, white and blue candles lining the aisle-way leading to the altar, enhanced the loveliness of the occasion. The vows were solemnized by Rev. Henderson, pastor of the Second Baptist church.

Clubs and individuals who have entered into the USO spirit are: The Alpha Bowling Social Club, the Sally Stewart and Allensworth Federated Clubs, The Christian Friendliness Missionary Society of Baptist Churches, Miss Julia Lee, Mrs. Golden Irvin, Mrs. A. J. Booker, Mr. Wm. Mack, Mrs. Clara McLemore, Mrs. A. Foreman, Mrs. Alice Wilson, Mr. Everett Roberts, Darline Davis, Eva Christophe, the Antique Art Social Club and Pueblo Del Rio Housing. Visitors have been Mr. Layton, Director of the Bakersfield USO, and Miss Juliett Mitchell of the Houston, Tex., USO.

★ BEHIND THE SCENES With Harry

By Harry Levette

DOUBTLESSLY NO BRANCH of the American Federation of Musicians has a larger representation in the nation's armed forces, all gladly doing their bit to help win the war, than Local 767. According to records made available to the Theatrical Editor by President Bailey and Financial Secretary Paul Howard, there are 67 members now on active duty in various departments of the army. They are as follows: Samuel Allen, Wm. Blocker, Leon Buck, Ralph Bledsoe, Leslie Biscos, Douglas "Blitz" Byars, Benjamin Booker, Clifford Burton, Wallace Bowland, David Bryant, William Cooper.

Onest Conley, Wm. Collette, Wm. "Sonny" Clay, Elzy Cooper, Willie Cole, Sylvester Cunningham, Hugo Dandridge, Wm. Douglas, Wm. Ellis, Robt. Forlice, Elmer Fain, Frank Dandridge, Harold Grant, Ulysses Howze, Minor Hall, Chester Hickman, Edward Hill, Forester Hamilton, Dave Hendricks, (in Merchant Marine service), Perry Johnson, Bulee Gaillard, John Nelson, Joseph Gutcher, Edward Lynn, Donald J. Lucas, Robt. McNeeley, Willie McDaniel, Martyn Quedellis, Victor Meers, Arthur Mitchell, Chas. Martin, Jas. Nelson, Roy Precely, Jas. Pearson, Jesse Purdue, Clarence Wesley Prince, Jake Porter, George Reed.

Caughey Roberts, Floyd Ray, Marshall Royal, Ernest Royal, Jesse Robinson, Minor Robinson, John Randolph, Robt. L. Ross, Ray Savage, Robt. Sims, Lloyd Walker, Clarence Woods, Britt Woodman, Jonas Weir, Ellis Walsh, Odell West, Wm. Wilson and Earl Willis.

9th Cavalry Band Organized by 767

Another outstanding example of the work of Local 767, is the fact that the fine Tenth Cavalry Band stationed at Camp Lockett, was organized and set up by it. Besides this all the several hundred members either here or traveling have tirelessly aided in entertaining the soldiers at army camps, thus helping keep up the morale of the boys in khaki and blue. President Bailey who comes back from the national convention each summer with new ideas and new inspiration, says his war work will be even increased during 1943. Secretary Florence Caddez keeps in active correspondence with the boys in service. Who all appreciate this attention from their local, biding the time when having helped win the war, they will be back to again take up their instruments.

Paul Howard in Office 17 Years

A great deal of the credit for the systematic operation of 767 which has made it one of the best in the country is due to Paul Howard, Financial Secretary, and actively in charge of the fine three-story clubhouse on Central avenue near Washington Blvd. An excellent musician, himself, Howard for a number of years, was leader of the well-remembered "Quality Serenaders", recognized as one of the top bands on the coast. Members of the Local have all become accustomed to the strictly businesslike policy of Paul in operation of the Local's affairs, and realize that fines and suspensions will follow infractions of the strict rules of the organization.

Baron Moorehead, also a band leader, is the new business manager having been appointed to the office following the induction of Elmer Fain. He is doing an excellent job of protecting the interests of the musicians on their engagements.

FETCHIT RETURNING TO HOLLYWOOD

By LAWRENCE F. LaMAR

Although, folk on the coast have been hearing faint rumors of it for lo, all these months and seasons, no one up until no less authority than Luella O. Parsons, eminent cinama columnist for all the Hearst publications mentioned it in her daily syndicated column, did anyone apparently believe it. But, its a fact now. El Stepino Fetchito, famed sepia droll comedian is returning to the hearts of Americans via the cinema once again!

In announcing the fact, Miss Parsons included a "hurrah" on the subject of Stepin Fetchit's return to the screen. The famed comedian has been absent from pictures far, far too long. Regardless of his difficulties with film producers, the actor has made himself a niche in the American theatregoers heart, and it is up to the producers to see that they get their favorite brand of entertainment, which is Stepin Fetchit.

Miss Parsons writing in the Los Angeles Examiner of last Tuesday morning issue, said that Fetchit is a much "rejuvinated man", that he has paid all of his bills (to Uncle Sam) and is now a very "good boy". Joe Glaser who is here looking after the business of Eddie South and his orchestra current at the Mocambo Cafe in Hollywood, is set to handle the business of El Stepino Fetchito. We add a "hurrah" for Stepin Fetchit's return to the flicker scene.

TO IMMORTALIZE BILL ROBINSON IN NEW FOX PRODUCTION

By LAWRENCE F. LaMAR

Although, the script, and for that matter, the original story, does not pretend to be an authentic biography of the life of Bill Robinson, nontheless, that great character of the vaudeville stage, whose nimble feet beating incessant taps to a precision rhythm, is the central theme of the forthcoming 20th Century-Fox film production "Stormy Weather." The title "Stormy Weather" has been changed from the original "Thanks Pal."

Bill Robinson has arrived on the coast to play himself in this greatest calvalcade of Negro music and dancing to yet be produced for the screen. The title of the piece "Stormy Weather" immediately conjures to the mind, the great Ethel Waters, who made the song famous in New York's famed Cotton Club years ago. But, Miss Waters will not appear in the picture. Instead Lena Horne, beautiful hi-brown darling of the screen, will sing the lilting blues number.

"Stormy Weather" will bring to the screen the greatest aggregation for sepia talent yet to be assembled before the cameras. 20th Century-Fox studio during the filming of the picture scheduled for January 21st, will be the headquarters of sepia performers of America. Such outstanding notables as Lena Horne, Cab Calloway and his orchestra, Fats Waller, Dooley Wilson, Katherine Dunham and her famous dancers, Mae Johnson and scores of others are slated to grace the cast list.

CALL TO ARMY INTERRUPTS CAREER IN MOTION PICTURES

FORT SILL, Okla.—When 30-year old Pvt. Dion Muse of a Field Artillery Regiment here entered the Army in January, 1941, he interrupted a fledgling stage and motion picture career which might have emulated that of his father.

A son of Clarence Muse, one of Hollywood's busiest and best-known colored character actors, Private Muse says he "was practically brought up in show business."

He is a native of New York City, where he studied journalism for a time at Columbia University, but he finally adopted the stage as his chosen profession.

Private Muse was a member of Little Theatre groups and the Lafayette Players, an all-Negro professional group, in the East until 1933, when he went to Los Angeles to join his father.

At the same time, says Goebbels the USSR is the toughest opponent and every German should know there are no immediate prospects of victory. Speaking of the "weakness for battle" shown by the United Nations in North Africa, Hitler's own paper told the Germans that the Axis has acquired what it needs, economically, in Russia. And that when Russia is wiped out, they would regain their losses on the southern front. We call this propaganda over here!

36 DANCERS IN FOX CAVALCADE

By HARRY LEVETTE

In preparation for the actual shooting on the big Irving Mills-William LeBaron all-colored musical cavalcade at 20th Century-Fox, strenuous rehearsals of the dancing choruses have been taking place daily under the general direction of Clarence Robinson, New York dance director.

Patsy Hunter, capable, versatile local producer, was placed directly in charge of the 24 girls who will perform the intricate and difficult routines in support of the largest collection of famous names that has appeared in any other Hollywood all-colored picture, except MGM's "Cabin In The Sky."

The girls, all well experienced, clever and pretty, are Lucy Battles, Babe Simmons, Fannie Buford, Alyce Keyes, Avanelle Harris, Ruth Mills, Rosalie Lincoln, Vivian Dandridge Louise Franklin, Cleo Herndon, Gladys Jackson, Suzette Johnson, Cleo Hayes, Anise Boyer, Vivian Brown, Juanita Boisseau, Artie Young, Doria Ake, Neva Peoples, Etta Jones, Nadine Cole, and Bobby Reeves.

The boys are George Davis, Henry (Baby Face) Roberts, Johnny Thomas, Andrew Jackson, Curry Lee Calmes, Sam Montgomery, Amiel Brown, "Sneaks" Downs, Jack Williams, Sammy Warren, Bobby Johnson, Bernard Bradley and Endell.

Built around a screen story by Perry Horwin and Seymour Robinson, scenarized by Hy Pratt, it is under the direction of Andrew Stone. Stars include Bill Robinson, Lena Horne, Cab Calloway and band, Duke Ellington and band, and many others.

Filming is scheduled to start next week.

"THE MOON AND SIXPENSE," "DEVIL WITH HITLER" AT UA

The noted story by W. Somerset Maugham of the painter who takes what he wants from life without giving anything in return is brought to the screen by David L. Loew and Albert Lewin whose "The Moon And Sixpense" is now playing at the United Artists Theatre, 933 So. Broadway, downtown Los Angeles.

The picture is off the beaten path, and took courage to make. The fine acting, the life and loves of the principal character, the faithful translation of the novel, and the elements of the story itself are outstanding points.

The plot has as its chief implement the iconoclasm which surrounds the works and actions of a man who after 17 years of married life leaves his wife and two children to follow an irresistible desire to paint.

Don't miss "The Moon And Sixpense" plus "The Devil With Hitler now at United Artists Theatre, 933 So. Broadway, downtown Los Angeles.

Sensational Globetrotters On Way Here

The Harlem Globetrotters, 1940 world's champion basketeers, are on their way here to show how they got that way. Harry Hanin, Chicago promoter who has been their advance man on the present western swing, told the column this week that the 'Trotters will show here Tuesday night, Jan. 26, at Shrine auditorium against either 20th Century-Fox or Santa Ana Air Base, the service quintet.

For the past several weeks the 'Trotters have been playing in British Columbia and the Northwest, and wowing the customers aplenty with their ability and showmanship. Their California junket opens Tuesday, Jan. 19, in Sacramento when they face an all-star aggregation. Then, on successive nights, the Trotters' schedule shapes up like this: Moffett Field, in San Francisco; San Jose State college in San Jose; Fresno State, in Fresno; Santa Barbara State, in Santa Barbara; Santa Ana Air Base, in Long Beach; San Diego State, in San Diego; 20th Century-Fox or Santa Ana Air Base, here; and St. Mary's Pre-Flight, with Hank Luisetti, in S. F.

On their way to Mexico, the Globetrotters aim to show coast fans why they are tops, masters of the cage sport. And so, we might just as well prepare for them, and get to know 'em, player by player.

Inman Jackson Is Key Man

Organized, owned and coached by Abe M. Saperstein, the Globetrotters lineup (subject to change due to injuries, draft, trades and defense measures) reads as follows:

INMAN JACKSON—center, captain and utility man. The oldest player, in length of service, playing independent basketball in the United States today. This is his 14th season with the 'Trotters and his 22nd year of pro basketball. Considered in his prime, the greatest ball-handler in basketball, and a star in the art of court showmanship. Jackson now devotes much of his time to developing outstanding ball-handlers to carry on the Harlemites' tradition of the best showmen in American basketball. Height 6'3" and weight 205. Home city, New York.

ROSCOE JULIEN—guard. This 6'2",,190-pound youngster is playing his second season with the Harlemites. After three starring years with the Wendell Phillips High school in Chicago, he joined the 'Trotters last season, and spent all but the last month with Globetrotters farm club on tour of the Southwest. Improved rapidly and today is an exceptional floor man and pot-shot. Home city, Chicago.

Black Yankee Catcher Is Forward

EVERETT MARCELL—forward. Back for his third trial with the Globetrotters, and improved shooting has won him a berth. Starred in baseball, basketball and football at Houston (Texas) High school and Southern university (Baton Rouge, La.). This past summer caught for New York Black Yankees Baseball club of the Negro National league. Height 6'3", weight 198. Home city, Denver, Colo.

BOB POWELL—forward. A refugee from Indiana High school "firewagon" basketball, Powell played with Roosevelt High school of Gary, Ind., and a season with Wilberforce university of Xenia, Ohio. A hard-running, under the basket shot specialist. Height 6'4½", weight 187. Home city, Gary, Ind.

AL SINGLETON—guard. Following sensational play at Virginia State college, Singleton has had five seasons of barnstorming basketball experience with the Philadelphia Commanders, the Broadway Clowns and the Chicago Collegians. A very fine backboard man and exceptional ball handler. Height 6'3", weight 190. Home city, Petersburg, Va.

"Ruzzy" Hudson Is Team's Point-getter

REECE "THE GOOSE" TATUM. This is Tatum's first season of organized basketball play. Brought from the field of baseball, as was that great ball handler, Ted Strong, because of his big hands, reach and ability to run and jump, "The Goose" is developing faster than any rookie in a decade. Tatum played a sensational first base, this past summer, for the national semipro champion Cincinnati Ethiopian Clowns baseball team, whose home base was Crosley Field (home of the Cincy Reds), and his showmanship on the diamond was the talk of the Midwest. Has probably the longest arms of any performer in basketball, and can reach a foot above the basket in dropping in a ball. Height 6'3", weight 200 pounds. Home city, El Dorado, Ark.

Rounding out the roster are Ted Strong, mentioned above, and Roosevelt ("Ruzzy") Hudson. Strong, a 16-year veteran with the club, is the Kansas City Monarch first baseman, had a .371 batting average last summer. He joined the 'Trotters just before their game a couple of weeks ago against the University of Washington Huskies. Hudson, the sharpshooter of the team, popularly known as "Ruzzy," is from Detroit.

Notes Picked Up Here and There

Saw "Hammerin'" Henry Armstrong outside Hollywood Legion stadium Friday. Said then his tonsils forced him to keep getting rid of his mouthpiece in the Jimmy McDaniels battle . . . Jimmy Garrison and Max Hutchins fought a dull affair on the inside. Neither of them are THAT bad . . . Should be a good show at the Olympic Tuesday night. Genial matchmaker Babe McCoy pits Turkey Thompson against Jack Marshall . . . Nat Corum, who has a pretty good record against some tough bantams, receipted for an 8-round licking Tuesday at the Olympic from a lad fighting his first main event—Chuckie Garcia. Corum substituted for Al Medrano, and that's probably the reason Garcia caught him short . . . Tonight at Hollywood, much-talked of Earl Turner, Oakland welter, bows with Cecil Hudson. The place figures to be packed, if for no other reason than to see Turner . . .

Sgt. Joe Louis, in New York on furlough during the holidays, had this to say when queried as to boxing in his camp: "We have three rings going full blast every night out in Fort Riley. All the soldiers there wanna box and they keep at it until taps. I don't have any good heavy boys in my classes yet, but there's a couple of lightweights who might make champions some day and I'm sure some of the camps will turn out some good big fellas. Maybe Billy Conn'll teach the boy who'll beat me! Wouldn't that be somep'n!" . . .

Chase Thumps Booker; Bags State Crown

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 15.—Jack Chase, 157, popular Los Angeles fighter by way of Denver, Colo., bagged the state middleweight crown here Monday night when he defeated Eddie Booker, local 159½-pounder, in a 15-round bout.

It was the first 15-round fight in this state since 1914. The longer bouts were legalized in California in last November's elections.

Landing the heavier punches, Chase, who at one time fought as young Joe Louis, barely kept ahead of Booker to cop a close decision.

Ring Body Puts Boxer Leroy Wade on Shelf

The State Athletic commission, as of Saturday, Jan. 9, took action in the following cases, J. M. Genshlea, secretary, said this week.

Ill and Unavailable: Leroy Wade, San Francisco boxer, two weeks, injured ear.

Suspensions: Rubin Abolofia, Santa Monica wrestler, 60 days, and Vic Hill, local wrestler, 30 days, for violation of rules.

Release Filed: Martin Mardirosian, boxer, released by Jack Mendonca, manager, effective Jan. 6.

Contracts Filed: Martin Mardirosian, boxer—Ralph Gold, manager, effective Jan. 6, for five years; Benjamin Calcavechia (Benny Calla), boxer—Albert Manfredo, manager, effective Dec. 18, 1942, for three years.

Jackson Is 'Trotters' Key Man

Basketball's famed Harlem Globetrotters, who won the world's championship tournament at Chicago in 1940, will show local fans when they come to play 20th Century-Fox or the Santa Ana Air Base quintet on Tuesday, Jan. 26, why they're America's No. 1 team for playing ability and showmanship, a combination that has been paying dividends for this great Negro quintet for 16 consecutive seasons.

Uncertainty as to the Globetrotter's opponents has been occasioned by an AAU ruling which may affect the great Fox aggregation, Harry Hanin, the 'Trotters' advance man, told the EAGLE this week. The foe is expected to be agreed upon momentarily, however. The teams will play at Shrine auditorium.

"MR. GLOBETROTTER"

But, back to the Negro five:

Traditionally, too, the Globetrotters year in and year out come up with a most interesting group of players. And this season is no exception.

Heading the personnel for the 1942-43 season as the club swings into all sections of the country, bent chiefly on playing service and war plant teams in the interest of morale, is "Mr. Globetrotter" himself. That could be none other than Inman Jackson, the giant 6 foot, 4 inch captain and center now in his 14th season with the team.

A former City College of New York ace, the popular "Jack," idol of the fans everywhere the team has played, hasn't an equal in the game for superb ball-handling. He's the key man of all the Trotters' stunts of showmanship and still a mighty effective player.

NEW STARS

Now playing his 22nd season of independent basketball, Jackson is the lone survivor of the wonder group of centers of the '20s. Joe Lopchicke "Horse" Haggerty, Tillie Voss, Homer Stonebraker and all the other leading centers were faced by Jackson, who more than held his own against them, as they would be the first to attest.

Despite his long service record, Jackson is still able to "go." He is a wonderful influence on the team and a steadying factor for the newcomers to Globetrotter togs.

In the latter group are Reece ("Goose") Tatum, sensational comedian of the nationally known Ethiopian Clowns baseball team; Bob Powell, a star from Gary, Ind., and Al Singleton. Back from last season, besides Jackson, are Roscoe Julien, Everett Marcell, and Ted Strong, the Kansas City Monarch first baseman.

Wilson, Wright in Garden Bouts

NEW YORK Jan. 15.—Sgt. Jackie Wilson, of Los Angeles, now stationed at Mitchell Field, and Chalky Wright, former featherweight champion, appear in Madison Square Garden tonight in the two 10-round bouts.

Wilson, high-ranking welterweight contender, will meet Jake Lamotta of New York, and Wright boxes Joey Peralta of Tamaqua, Pa.

Cecil Hudson, Turner Paired at Hollywood

Earl Turner, popular Oakland welterweight, makes his local debut tonight at Hollywood Legion stadium when he takes on rough, tough Cecil Hudson in the 10-round main mix.

The two welterweights figure to stage a slambang brawl.

Turner was stopped in four rounds by Henry Armstrong several months ago, but came back to score a 7-round technical knockout over the cagey veteran, Jimmy Garrison, who Friday night decisioned Max Hutchins in a dull affair at the film plant.

Hudson has met Garrison twice, tieing and losing. In his last start at Hollywood he TKOd Mario Ramon in 8 stanzas.

Matchmaker Charley MacDonald gives Everett Rightmire a chance to start a comeback in the six-round semi-windup. He meets Charley Miegel.

ON THE TURF

By Geo. A. Ramsey

SAN DIEGO, Jan. 15.—Well, another year starts and only two race tracks in the country are running, New Orleans and Tropical Park in Florida. At first the management of Tropical Park didn't think that they could continue as gas rationing had them stumped. But things have been picking up lately and the meeting looks like a sure thing to continue with all the big stakes run. (This was written for the week of Jan. 8.—Ed's note.).

Of course, Hialeah Park, which opens Jan. 13, will be the biggest meeting in Florida. The one big event there will be the Widener, a race that carries an added value of $25,000. More than 50 thoroughbreds have been nominated for this event.

C. S. Howard, of Seabiscuit fame, has nominated Kayak II, who will be making a comeback after severing in the stud. Also Mioland, who has won $237,815 during his racing; Porter's Cap, who has won $117,820; and Yankee Dandy. With these four strong thoroughbreds, he will have a big hand in this event.

But you must remember they all must face the king, Whirlaway, with nearly $600,000 won during his racing career. His owner will try to make it a million dollars before the king retires. Some of the horses that have defeated Whirlaway entered are Riverland and Mr. Townsend B. Martin's Bolingbroke.

It costs $100 to enter a horse in the stake and an extra $500 to start, so we know that 50 horses will not start. One of the leading steeds of the turf will be missing from this race and that is the $700 bargain, Alsab.

Although the best horses in the country that are in winter training will go to the post this race will not be run until Mar. 6. Last year's surprise winner was the longshot, The Rhymer, property of the Greentree stable, owned by Mrs. Payne Whitney. Besides Whirlaway, the Calumet Farms also nominated Ocean Wave.

We hear Bay Meadows will have a Spring meeting of 21 days, also another rumor is that Caliente will open in February. Of course, I'll believe it when I see it.

Well, that's the news of the turf, folks. Hope that you will all keep buying bonds and U. S. war stamps. The more we buy the quicker the war will be over, and all our boys will be back home. I know that you all want that, so let's give it to them so they will get every d—— Jap. So long and keep smiling, GEORGE.

HENRY ARMSTRONG . . . floored by tonsils.

Tonsils Force Hank to Take Long Lay-off

There'll be no more fighting for "Hammerin'" Henry Armstrong, former triple-crown champion, for about six weeks, George Moore, business manager of the comeback champion of 1942, announced this week. The "human buzz-saw" is ill with a pair of tonsils which are acting up.

Because of a cold which has affected his tonsils, Armstrong will have to undergo treatments for at least two weeks, after which the tonsils will be removed, according to Dr. A. A. Foster.

Following the operation it will be from three weeks to a month before the ring's busiest fighter will be able to resume training.

The managerial staff of "Hank" is firm in its statement that Armstrong will not be permitted to resume training or continue fighting until he has fully recovered.

Boxing dates with Al Trubiani in Philadelphia and Beau Jack in New York City have been postponed indefinitely, Moore stated, and no more fights are being scheduled pending Armstrong's restoration to tip-top shape insofar as health is concerned.

...for Distinguished Service

As each member of the Los Angeles Railway family becomes a member of the armed forces, he is presented with a medallion, fashioned of sterling silver and designed to be carried as a pocket piece. With it goes appreciation of distinguished services, not only in future fields of action, but of those previously rendered as an employee of the company.

We believe that a man gives distinguished service as a good employee, but especially so in that moment when he leaves his home, family, and job to take his place in his country's service. It is to commemorate this moment that we present the medallion, specially designed for the Los Angeles Railway, engraved with his own name, and proudly bearing the American eagle.

We think he deserves it — don't you?

Cub Owner Gets Baseball Bias Protest

A letter urging an end to discrimination of Negro baseball players was sent to Philip Wrigley, club owner of the Chicago Cubs, by Sol Vail, chairman of the National Athletic Commission of International Workers Order, a mutual benefit insurance fraternity which numbers many Negro members in its 30 Los Angeles lodges.

The letter was prompted by Wrigley's statement that the baseball public is not ready to accept Negro ball players in the major leagues.

"I speak authoritatively for my organization of over 155,000 members, of whom several thousand are Negroes," declared Vail in his letter, "when I say that we are not only ready for such a change, but have been clamoring for it for many years.

FANS HATE BIAS

"Certainly the American public," he continued, "and especially the sport fans, have proven time and again their love for democratic principles and their hatred against intolerance and discrimination. The respect America has for such Negroes as Joe Louis, Paul Robeson and Dorie Miller, hero of Pearl Harbor, illustrates the public's desire to welcome Negroes in all phases of American life.

"Mr. Wrigley, many of our boys, Negro and white, are giving their lives on the sands of North Africa and around the world, so that democracy may live. They are carrying on our fight against Hitlerism and its vile ideology of race superiority. In face of this, how can you allow yourself the false security of waiting and thus appeasing a vociferous Hitler-minded minority?

"You and other club owners," said Vail in conclusion, "have the opportunity of serving your country in a very important manner at this critical time. In the name of my organization, I urge you to hire Negro ball players in the major leagues NOW."

5TH RANKING HEAVY, TEXAS SOCKER TO CLASH

Turkey Thompson, hard-hitting Los Angeles heavyweight, fifth ranking heavyweight of the world, and Texas Jack Marshall, giant puncher from Dallas, are training for their headliner scheduled for 10 rounds Tuesday night, Jan. 19, at Olympic auditorium.

Marshall rates highly in the East where he was runner-up to Lee Savold, the belting St. Paul heavyweight, last Spring in the "white hope" tournament at Detroit.

The Texas socker had Savold on the deck for a 9 count and lost by a narrow margin. It was a split decision.

Manager Izzy Kline claims Marshall earned no less than a draw. One of the judges ruled the fight a draw and had the Texan ahead by two points.

One of Marshall's best knockout victories was scored over the South American heavyweight star, Vic Campolo, in Madison Square Garden.

Campolo came to New York highly rated and was being groomed for a shot with Joe Louis, world heavyweight champion.

TURKEY RANKS HIGH

Marshall's kayo victory blasted Campolo out of the picture.

The six feet, two inch Texas belter recently beat Babe Ritchie in a 10 rounder at Chicago, and had Melio Bettina, former world light heavyweight champion, on the boards in their Pittsburgh match.

In a recent rating by the NBA, Turkey was listed under Joe Louis, Billy Conn, Tami Mauriello, Melio Bettina—Thompson named in the No. 5 spot. Conn, Mauriello and Bettina have repeatedly rejected offers for fights with Thompson. Last month when Turkey defeated Gus Dorazio in Philadelphia the match was offered to Mauriello either in Philadelphia or New York, but the New York heavyweight turned it down.

Conn could have signed for Thompson in New York or Los Angeles, but turned a deaf ear to the proposition when Turkey's name was mentioned.

Probably the greatest heavyweight fight for thrills was the first Bob Pastor-Turkey Thompson match at Gilmore Field. Pastor was down six times in the first round in a wild mill of leather and blood.

HITS AS HARD AS JOE

Thompson has confined his fighting to other cities in recent months. He flattened Gus Dorazio in two rounds at Oakland in late October and stretched Ernie Nordman, the Kansas giant, at Portland.

Manager Cal Working expected to move into Madison Square Garden with his dynamic-socking, wide-shouldered Turkey, but the New York heavyweight side-tracked Thompson.

Pastor said after his first fight with Thompson that the local belter hits as hard as Joe Louis, but not as fast.

Matchmaker Babe McCoy is arranging a strong supporting card to back up the heavyweight natural.

Five prelims will be on the program.

St. Paul Baptist Marches on Under Banner of Holy Ghost

In an atmosphere of unprecedented Christian Co-operation, St. Paul Baptist Church finished the business of 1942 and launched into 1943 in a manner that filled the hearts and minds of hundreds of friends and visitors with reverential awe.

PASTOR S. A. WILLIAMS

The time, Thursday, December 31, 1942, 7:30 p. m. to Friday, January 1, 1943, 2:00 a. m. Place, St. Paul Baptist Church, Main Auditorium and the Social Auditorium. The setting of the scene was a highly spiritualized devotion period in the main auditorium, leading up to the Annual Message, which embraced an Annual Sermon by Pastor S. A. Williams. In his message to the constituency, Pastor Williams reviewed the many activities of the church during the year, pointing out the cooperative spirit that prevailed in all departments, the excellent support given the administration by the Assistant Pastor, Rev. E. A. Anderson, and the entire staff of Associate Ministers. He also mentioned the numerical increase of more than four hundred members, including 48 by baptism. Pastor Williams lauded the singing units for their most excellent service rendered, not only in their own church, but in compliance with the request of the administration, treked to other cities and churches and sang to the edification of souls; he praised the entire membership for their unreserved support of the regime. He then stressed the necessity of our being conservative during this great money making period in which the Lord has, through His own plan, opened up avenues for us wherein we are making more money than ever before in our history, some wages having been increased thirty fold some sixty, some one hundred, he urged us to be ever mindful of "The Hand of God" in our getting the goods of this world, and in order to be assured of a continuance of His blessings we have His word for it, found in Malachi 3:10.

Pastor Williams also expressed, that as previously stated, he has in mind the building of a church edifice here on this corner, that would be commodius enough to accommodate the immense throngs of people coming into the church. Completing his Message, he delivered the Annual Sermon from the Subject "The Power of Prayer." This message was in connection with, and a continuance of, the Soul Saving Campaign, in progress since Sunday the 27th. One might think it strange for a church to launch a "Soul Saving" effort during the Holy Day Season, well, St. Paul thought it not strange, so plans were made months ahead to do the seemingly strange thing, and engaged the services of the noted nationally known Gospel Singer, Sally Martin, and her spirit-filled pianist and soloist, Julia Smith, to conduct the singing campaign, the preaching being done by our ministerial staff, so Pastor Williams was slated to preach on this occasion.

Pastor Williams' sermon was dynamic, full of food for thought, his treatment of the subject evoked many favorable comments from visiting ministers, among whom were Rev. Frederick D. Ferrell of Macedonia, who remarked, "My hopes, my objectives, my aims, have soared to higher heights, after witnessing this great demonstration of divine leadership by this great leader. Rev. Frank James, Missionary, Western Baptist State Convention—"I've never witnessed such a marvelous meeting; it clearly shows what divinely inspired leadership can and will do."

Rev. G. Albert Miller, Moderator L. A. District Association stated, "Los Angeles has in Pastor Williams a beacon, a light that is not under a bushel; no wonder people are flocking to this corner."

Rev. F. L. Taylor, President Ministers Union, "I had a few years of close relationship with Pastor S. A. Williams, and his church, therefore, I am not surprised at this great meeting, great message, and a masterly sermon He was, and is still, my inspiration."

Rev. J. D. Golden, Dean of Baptists and church work in California remarked, "I witnessed the 1941-42 business meeting here, and can appreciate the gains made during the year. I've been in the ministry for more than two-score years; but, I am still in the kindergarten of church school, when I sit at the feet of the matchless leader, preacher, and executive, S. A. Williams."

Rev. L. D. Stephens, pastor of Abyssinia Baptist Church and Executive Secretary L. A. District Association—"There is no greater leader in our city than Pastor S. A. Williams, and he is doing the seemingly impossible things here in Los Angeles; the ministers of the District, realizing his worth, recently unanimously chose him as their leader in the newly formed Evangelistic Bureau of the L. A. District Association."

Remarks by the veteran, Rev. Venerable—"I have heard of great churches, with great leaders. Churches with a financial rating that was the envy of their denomination. Churches wherein order and discipline were strictly observed, but I never heard of, nor witnessed such an orderly, business meeting in all my church life; it has been said that the Olivet Baptist Church of Chicago is the largest Negro Baptist Church in the USA, but after witnessing this church's modus operanda, I have concluded that Olivet's largeness consists of her numerical strength, and that St. Paul Baptist of Los Angeles is second to none except in numbers and probably equipment. But, she has the largest program, the largest leader of any Negro Baptist Church in the USA."

At the conclusion of the sermon, the order of business was changed from Soul Saving to the transaction of the business of an Annual Meeting of a Baptist Church. In this phase of the meeting is where the great surprise came, to the uniformed, as they sat and observed the election of officers to the head of forty separate auxiliaries; heard the report of the receipt and allocation of more than $15,000.00; heard the reports of the fifty-five departments of the auxiliaries, giving in detail the scope of their activities, which embraced the number of church attendance, Sunday School, B. T. U., Mission, High-way and Hedge, Sick Visits, Hospital and Jail Visits; and to see all this done in less time than it took you to read this, and not a single dissenting vote, or an arrest of the motion to approve, was bewildering, if not astounding, to the casual observer and called forth many complimentary remarks from those non-members of St. Paul who were fortunate to witness the occurance.

The election over, and partial reports made, it was observed that the hour was 11:30 p. m. and that it was the prerogative of the pastor to appoint the officers who do not come under the elective phase of the church's program, it was unanimously agreed to defer the appointment to Sunday night, January 3, 1943. This agreement made we repaired to the Social Auditorium where we were on our knees (spiritually) as the wheel of time flickered for a split second to let old 1942 close the door between him and new 1943. After a series of prayers for the sick, shut-ins, and the boys on the battlefronts, we entered into a social hour, featuring remarks from invited guests and new members touching on the marvelousness of the meeting. The social committee served a delicious repast of hot coffee and crullers, the success of the affair was due largely to A. C. Cole, one of the greatest Deacons in the world.

Sunday, January 3rd, was a big day in St. Paul. The Holy Spirit's presence was prevalent throughout all the services. At 11:00 a. m. Rev. E. A. Anderson, the dynamic young assistant pastor, delivered a very forceful message from the subject "The Fly in the Perfume." His exegesis was profound and met the approval of an over-flow audience, who had availed itself of the opportunity to worship on the first Sunday in the New Year in St. Paul. I need not assure you how deeply we are impressed by the life and work of our Assistant Pastor, E. A. Anderson. I am not vain enough to offer this as a personal compliment, but I would have you believe that we realize the ties, common interest, common faith, common ideals, that bind our pastor, S. A. Williams and Assistant Pastor, E. A. Anderson so closely together, is destined to form an inseparable destiny; for if cordial friendship, if warm affection ever existed betwixt two persons, it has reached the Jonathan and David stage with our pastor and his assistant. Therefore, we love him all the more because he is the beloved.

The evening service was equally inspiring. Rev. B. Clarence Cook, a recent addition to the ministerial staff of St. Paul, was the speaker. He, in his inimitable manner brought from his treasure of Holy Ghost inspired subjects, a very striking message based on the question Jesus asked the mother of Zebedee's Children, "Are Ye Able?" His expostulations were so profoundly delivered till everyone that heard him feared that he should make an end. I cannot conceive anything more fitting to say of his message than that he had something. He used language that captivated the affections, charmed the understanding, restrained the will of those who would go astray. He has truly endeared himself to the constituency of St. Paul, and from all indications, he is destined to be one of the leading Holy Ghost preachers on the staff.

There were nineteen accessions for the day, thus closing the first three days of the New Year, and St. Paul Marches On Under The Banner of The Holy Ghost.

"Under the auspices of the Baha'i Faith, Mr. Willard P. Hatch will speak Sunday, January 17, at 1709 West 8th Street, on "Oneness Of Faiths." Says Mr. Hatch: "There can be no doubt whatever that the peoples of the world, of whatever race or religion, derive their inspiration from one heavenly Source, and are the subjects of one God. All the religious systems proceed from the one indivisible reality, but the followers of these systems have disagreed through following forms and ceremonies which have crept in--blind imitations, rather than reality."

COMING EVENTS, CAST THEIR SHADOWS

During the coming months war developments and daily occurrances which take place may be of vital interest to you. Practically all of these future events are interpreted astrologically, into our Horoscopes and may cast a ray of light on particular circumstances that are apt to be highly significant to our welfare.
It is most important for us to know what lies ahead. For if one is enlightened they can accomplish a great deal by being prepared in advance to meet the changing conditions which are indicated from time to time in their Horoscope.
With the help of your Guiding Planets and Lucky stars, you should be able to live your life more shewdly to your eventual betterment, whether it be Love, Money or Success. However, if you ignore or waste your efforts, you are likely to miss opportunities that the starry positions in the heavens may point out to you. Prepare now, by sending for your 1943 Horoscope.
Dear Sir: I have been reading your column in the California Eagle and find that your advice to other people is true. Now, I would like some advice concerning my problems. Will I ever marry?

Ans.—After giving your question careful thought I find that marriage is indicated in your Horoscope. It is this friend's intentions to marry you on his furlough.

Mhs. R. S. D.—What should I do about my problem?

Ans.—Concentrating upon your question I find that you and your husband have wanted children for the past seven years of your married life, but up to this date haven't been fortunate in this respect. I suggest that you consult a specialist and follow his instructions carefully.

J. B. B.—Is my husband going to leave me for another woman?

Ans.—A careful analysis of your question indicates the fact that your husband's disposition hasn't been congenial lately, but I do not vision his being infatuated with another woman to the extent that he would leave you. Dismiss this thought from your mind, try being a better companion to him and your married life will be much happier.

G. M. T.—Will we marry soon? Will his family like me as a daughter-in-law? Will we make our trip if he returns on his furlough?

Ans.—Only one question is answered in this column, I suggest that you writ in for a private reply.

A. M. T.—For sometime I have been reading your column and enjoyed it very much, also your great wisdom in answering questions. I realize that you have a limited amount of space in the paper and would appreciate any consideration you can give me concerning my problem. Will I marry my husband again?

Ans.—Your lucky stars and guiding planet indicate certain facts that I would prefer telling you in a personal letter. At your earliest convenience write in for a private reply.

H. T.—Did my husband tell my sister's husband anything on her or did someone else do that to cause confusion?

Ans.—It seems that your sister's husband heard this information from a stranger in a Tavern. Your husband is not responsible for this trouble. But until it is cleared up I suggest that you both remain to yourselves.

G. J.—Why does E. J stay out every Saturday and Sunday night?

Ans.—It appears to me that E. J. likes to play cards and has found a club where he can do so on these nights with other friends. No harm is meant, and if you were to question him, I am sure he would explain this to you.

L. U. S.—Will I ever profit from my songs and poems?

Ans.—According to your Zodiacal Sign, you are destined to make quite a name for yourself thru your talents. Just keep trying and if special study is necessary in order to advance in your endeavors, then make every effort to obtain it.

★ POST OFFICE FACTS & FIGURES

By PAUL L. HACKETT SR.

Let us bow our heads for a moment and pay tribute to the late Dr. George Washington Carver. He was not a great Negro but a great American who contributed so unselfishly of his genius to the economic life of America and especially the South. We should pray to God that America produce more men who do not measure their contributions to society in dollars and cents.

What is this war doing to the American people? Are we losing the gallantry and deference we have always held in such high regard for our women? Has the advent of women wearing slacks ushered out the Sir Walter Raleighs. If so ladies please put dresses back on.

In a recent conversation with one of our foremen women taking over work formally done by men was discussed, where ardous duties or tasks are to be performed we believe that women should be given special consideration. This particular foreman stated that if a women acepted a man's job she should fill it. He also added as long as he was foreman he would see to it that they did their work. We wonder how many men feel this way. It might help to remember that our wives and mothers are women.

Brothers fourty-eight hours are here as we predicted and they will be here for the duration and a lot longer if labor does not get its heads together. We hope for once that all post office employees will ge together and agree on one bill before April 30, 1943. It does'nt matter who gets the credit but lets draft a bill with a balanced equation.

Custodial laborers have had a little more idgnity added to their disignation if that means anything, we are now junior laborers. It has all the earmarks of filling more duties with the same pay. Just what it means will have to be clarified later. It reminds us of the man who said, "A sword was laid on my fathers head by a king and he became a knight." To which the other fellow replied, "That's nothing an Indian hit my father on the head with a tomahawk and he became an angel."

An engineer knows that a motor of a certain horse power will do a certain amount of work. By changing sizes of gears on the power side or the drive you may obtain either increased speed or power but you must sacrifice one for the other. Overload a motor and you will burn it up, We wonder if this will not happen in lenthening hours.

Saw the ex Don Juan of the Custodial Department on the third floor the morning in the person of the one and only Benny Harris. Girls you will receive a treat Monday when Clark Gable, (Eddie Abrams) leaves the sawdust in the carpenter shop to sniff hemp lint on the third floor. Well pals yours truly has you all beat he gets a chance to inhale it all plus perishables in the trash pile. Boy oh boy was it prolific this Christmas.

SOMEBODY Beats LARY

John T. Veasy, defense worker, employed in the Kaiser Shipyard at Richmond, Calif., came to town last Tuesday morning for the purpose of trying a damage suit against the Los Angeles Railway Corporation and met with a pleasant surprise. Veasy, through his attorney, Curtis C. Taylor, had brought suit against the company for damages to his hand arising out of a street car accident on September 19, 1942, at which time one of the street cars on which he was a passenger suffered a rear end collision with a truck.
The company had steadfastly refused to offer a reasonable compromise and his attorney and witnesses were preparing to go to court last Tuesday morning when attorneys for the company suddenly decided to compromise the claim. He and his attorney then went into a huddle with attorneys for the company and when they emerged both were smiling broadly. The amount of the compromise was not stated but it is understood to have been a considerable sum.

No matter how uncomfortable he may look, don't move the patient until you're absolutely sure you won't make his injuries worse.

Don't move him unless you're absolutely sure there are no broken, bones, no internal bleeding, no concussion, no heart weakness. Therefore, since no untrained person can be sure of all these things, don't take a chance—don't move him. Don't even put a pillow under his head to make him more comfortable!
Don't move him if he's unconscious. Don't move him if he is conscious if he can't move his hand and feet (which usually indicate a broken neck or back).
Don't move a broken arm or leg or you will probably increase the damage many times.
There are only three exceptions to this rule—when the victim is not breathing, when he is being burned or gassed. Then you must move fast, but otherwise—leave him alone 'til the doctor comes.

Moderation, Health and Public Morals Improved In Nine Years Since Repeal

Nine years after repudiation of prohibition the nation can count a gratifying trend toward moderation and an improvement of public health and morals, according to a survey of authoritative statistics assembled to mark the anniversary of repeal of the 18th Ammendment.

In 1932, the last full year of Prohibition, the crime rate was 1,645 per 100,000 population. Nine years later, the Federal Bureau of Investigation reported the gradual decrease in criminal cases had reached 1,581 per 100,000.

The U. S. Public Health Service says we, as a nation, are healthier than ever before. A report of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company, issued at the end of the third quarter of 1942, states the year-to-date death rate for its many millions of policyholders is 7.4 per 1,000—an all-time low.

Government sources report that the health of the Army is also better than ever. The rate of Army hospital admissions for alcoholism for 1940, latest year available, was 2.7 per 1,000—a drop of 76% since the peak prohibition year of 1922 when the rate was 11.5 per 1,000.

Reports from the Census Bureau show that the death rate from alcoholism has decreased more than 50% since its prohibition peak in 1928 and in 1941 was 1.9 per 100,000 population.

The National Safety Council reports that deaths from traffic accidents measured against motor vehicle mileage declined 33% since 1925.

The records of social and moral improvements, compiled from official sources by Brewing Industry Foundation, include a Federal report for 1941 showing that bootlegging seizures were reduced 73% since 1929; arrests by Federal agents down 61%.

Among the scientific findings reported in the authoritative medical publications are the following:

"There is no clinical or pharmacologic evidence that would suggest that alcohol alone ever produces heart disease."—Dr. Paul White, Harvard Medical School.

"There is abundant evidence that alcohol alone does not cause cirrhosis of the liver."—Dr. James M. Beazell and Dr. Andrew C. Ivy of the Northwestern University Medical School.

"Our findings indicate that beer in reasonable amounts is essentially non-intoxicating."—Dr. H. W. Haggard, Yale University, in the New England Journal of Medicine.

Research has concluded that alcoholism is a symptom, rather than a cause of mental and other ills and education in moderate living and self-control are being used increasingly to combat it.

The favorite excuse of immoderate drinkers that they had only a "few beers"—no matter what they drink—has been exploded by use of scientific testing standards adopted by the American Medical Association.

The brewing industry's nation-wide moderation program has also provided cooperation with law enforcement authorities to maintain proper conditions in places where beer and ale are sold.

THELMA DALE JOINS STAFF OF NATIONAL NEGRO CONGRESS

NEW YORK, N. Y., Jan 18—Dr. Max Yergan, national president of the National Negro Congress announced today that Miss Thelma M. Dale of Washington, D. C. has been named Administrative Secretary of the Congress by a recent action of the National Executive Board.

Miss Dale succeeds Mr. George B. Murphy, Jr., who recently resigned his post to join the United States Army, after two years of outstanding service to the organization.

Dr. Yergan also announced that the Board had accepted the resignation of Mr. John P. Davis, who leaves the post of Executive Secretary which he has occupied since the establishment of the congress in Chicago in 1936. Mr. Davis terminated a five-year period of service with the organization to concentrate in the field of labor law. Outstanding among his many contributions to the organization was his work in directing thousands of Negro workers into the benefits of the organized labor movement. He has also played an outstanding role in the fight against the poll-tax and in many other campaigns for the advancement of the Negro people. The successor to Mr. Davis will be announced later, Dr. Yergan indicated.

Miss Dale brings to her new position wide experience gained through several years of active leadership in the American youth movement and government service. She is a graduate of Howard University, where as an undergraduate she was a leader in the Student Council, the Liberal Club and the Alpha Kappa Alpha Sorority, and among the initiators of the First All-Southern Negro Youth Congress. Miss Dale has served as a member of the National Executive Board of the National Negro Congress since 1938 and has been an active leader of the Washington Council of the NNC. She was formerly employed with the War Man-power Commission as Junior Editor of the Employment Security Review. As a government worker she was well-known as a popular speaker and an energetic supporter of the United Federal Workers, CIO.

Mr. Murphy has long been active in the work of unifying the Negro people on a common program to secure democratic rights for Negro Americans and all oppressed peoples and to insure the victory of democratic forces over fascist aggression.

Mr. Murphy leaves civilian life with a record of significant achievement in advancing the cause of Negro rights. Before joining the staff of the Congress, he served as editor of the Washington Afro-American and as publicity director for the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

★ CROWN CITY CAPERS

By PHILIPPA E. JONES

Well, hello, again Pasadena, here I am back again bringing you the latest news and then some. If all of it isn't exactly new I only hope you will forgive me and keep with me.

It seems as though the old city has really been jumping lately. That is it seems as though everyone is just getting the jump on Uncle Sam. Parties are being given alot but each time it seems as though there are fewer of the male sex. Johnny Burton gave a little jump the other night in honor of the boys that left last Tuesday. Those that were there and having their fun while it lasted were: Thelma Jackson, Johnetta Smith, Edith Johnson, Lucille Harrion, Jessie Arnold, and J. T. Morgan. They all had a lot of fun so the boys really got a send off.

Proceeding the game the Scott's Basketball Team played LACC at the YMCA. The game was really interesting and a lot turned out to see it. Too bad but Scott's team lost but they are going to play again Friday, January 15, 1943 so let's all turn out to cheer them to victory. Some of those on the team are M. L. Jackson, Johnny Burton and Thomas Floyd.

They tell me the party Paullyn Garner gave last Sunday announcing her engagement to Lt. Wilbur Fisher was really something. Some of the Denians there and enjoying themselves were: Dot Mimms, Dodo Carroll, Arthur Duncan, and Lois and Doris Prince. Congratulations Palluyn.

Carolyn Callier gave a party the other night for her brother Arthur who is home on furlough. Everyone had a swell time and wondered why it wasn't done more often.

Also on the list of those giving parties was Jackie Bunch who gave one week ago last Friday. Attending and enjoying were Bernice Cunningham, Betty Lou Jones, Joe Collins, and Lora Jacques. As for the refreshments, well, they were wonderful.

Also on that night Lucille Fairfax gave a party and I hear that everyone had a lovely time.

A little bit old but still new are the Xmas presents displayed by various persons. LOCKETing it were Gloria Bunch, Carolyn Collier, and Lucille Harrison who received their jewelry from Ralph McAfee, Jimmy Owens, and Tommy MacLurkin respectively. They only come on as Johnny would say. Lora Jacques has an identification bracelet, and Jessie Arnold is WATCHing it. (from Rufus Blake). Oh, I forgot Lora got the bracelet from Clarence Rucker. As for the boys Johnny Burton rated a belt that's only fine, Rufus Blake deserved a foxy tie and handerkerchief set, and J. T. Morgan received a wallet. So you see we really believe in Santa Claus.

LOTS OF NEWS

Home on a furlough and really enjoying himself is Walter Knott. He hails from Ft. Riley (where brother is) and he certainly looks fine in his uniform. After all there's something about a soldier. J—Perhaps that's what some of the boys were thinking but it really must have been Uncle Sam for he decided that he would furnish some more of Pasadena's boys with "joot suits" (they are). The latest ones to go were Rufus Willard Blake, jr. (Jaddie to you), James Huff, Arue Lowe, Morris Bunchannan, and Wally Ford. They left for destination unknown last Tuesday after a week's furlough. We really will miss the boys so we hope they will hurry home . . . We are glad to see Roy Stensin back with us from Arizona. He will probably be seen alot on Vernon Avenue. (Pasadena) . . . Did you know that Thelma Jackson was a Christmas child? . . . Also hear that Cookie Cooke is engaged to Cecil Lucky. Is that old or new news? Anyway congratulations. . . . The Fine Melloneers and the Dena Debs really came out in some foxie sweaters. They only come on. . . . Why were J. B. and P. J. with some more Fine's manless dating it at the Raymond two Sundays ago? "THEY" didn't "go to war" they only made New York or was it Miama? . . . Could Adam Burton think that he got his A and B ration card because those are his anitials? . . . Anyway he and Bill Duncan helped out the "widows" one Sunday, . . . Johnetta Smith had cause to rejoice over the holidays. James Armstrong was down from up north.

I like Thelma's new suit also J. T.'s . . . Speaking of the north (I was) it's good to see Carolyn back from up that way . . . Home again and hoping to stay is Grady Hickambottom. He seems to think the south has all the fine "chicks" . . . Jessie Arnold says, quote, "Philip King thanks you Santa for the opportunity . . . . not to drive awhile. But I will be looking forward to the time when: they make watches with winding stems and crystals that will stay on, "people" bring their portable radios to school, Johnny Burton tells the truth, the Bunch's buy a heater, J. T. Morgan will make four gallons do, and M. L. "keeps his Paddy time." . . . (unquote)

Ask Lucille Harrison who she went to see Krupa with Sunday. It couldn't been Tom M. could it? I'm beginning to think that is the reason she bought her new shoes with such low heels . . . . Thelma J. has an awful sudden interest in hamburgers lately, could Wimpy be the reason? (I don't mean Popeye's friend either) . . . Joe Collins must like to COMPACTit, at least there are three no four that I can account for . . . You should see the new purses that Jackie and Jessie are displaying. No., not Xmas, their birthday's. They're sweet eighteen . .. With a little time Betty Benson would have been Postmistress General . . . Billy Scott of Monrovia, is seen frequently on the East Campus. Which is it Hattie Williams or Crystle Jones? . . . By the way J. T., how's New York? . . . . . Bump Cunningham is singing "I'll Be Around" . . . By way J. Burton they aren't taking them 15 yet . . .

I think Bernice Anderson is going to miss Ernest but she says he's not the only fish in the sea. . . . Where is Willie Slayton lately . . . Will be looking forward to the basketball game between the Fine Melloneers and the Dena Debs. The date hasn't been set as yet but it will be played off at Washington Jr. high school . . . I wonder how L. J. really did hurt her ankle? .. . . How about the Gloria Jones, Robert Morgan time? I hear it only comes on . . . I like Mary Frances Smith's soldier "time" . . . Well I guess that's all for this time. Don't look for me till you see me. Hi, Faye H., come over sometime. Bye now,

—PHILIPPA JONES

State to Act on Old-Age Pensions

SACRAMENTO, Jan. 15.—The legislature of California is rapidly being streamlined for immediate and effective action during the emergency of war, and every effort will be made to limit action to necessary measures.

One of these necessary measures, as definitely stated by Gov. Earl Warren in his inaugural address; by Lieutenant Governor Houser and by Speaker Charles Lyon, is reformation of the old age pension laws of the state. There will be liberalization of payments to provide immediate relief from the present lack of adequate provision for the recipients of old age aid, as well as necessary changes in the administration of the law to give a fair deal to the senior citizens.

Among the first to offer assistanace in carrying into effect the streamlining process was George H. McLain, chairman of the board of trustees of the Citizens' Committee for Old Age Pensions, who is in Sacramento to give aid and advice in matters affecting changes in the old age pension law.

★ LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

The Late George Washington Carver:

On January 5, 1943, one of the world's most uniquely interesting characters passed within the shadows of what we call "Death".

Born under the extreme circumstances of one of humanite's most vicious and cruel institutions cradled in the lap of misfortune and reared up under a very unkind and prejudice-ridden environment, the subject of this brief descriptive effort by the strength of his indominable inherences, rose to the heights of markedly unusual and outstanding imperishable achievements.

The fierce trials of his way were not able to daunt his unconquarable spirit. Find God in his personally enriching experiences, and listening as he did to the revelations of His Will as expressed in the enrapturing fields of an entrancing nature, Dr. Carver gave himself as perhaps no other had ever done before, to the unselfish task of placing freely within the reach of human need for human need for human good, the gifts of God he found in the gardened ways of his exceptional investigations and wonderful discoveries.

Doubtless few other men, if any, have ever talked more intimately, more understandingly with the Creator of all things in the open fieldsc of his purposeful enshrinements, then did George W. Carver.

His well trained intellect his fine, artistic spiritic spirit together with his extraordinary scientific set of soul, made it possible for him to sound the depths to scale the heights of those astounding discoveries that remain as pyramidal monuments to his undying credit.

When the curtain of this marvelous man's earthly career dropped the other day one of the world's greatest scientists, one of humanite's largest benefactors, one of God's most remarkable noblemen went home to rest!

We wonder how much of what he knew, remains?

Who will carry on where he left off?

Sincerely,
JOS. M. EVANS, Minister
Metropolitan Community Church, Chicago, Ill.

Dear Editor:

It becomes my sincere regret to ask such a favor of you, although it will greatly benefit me. I have a friend (very dear to me) in Los Angeles who I would very much like to get in touch with.

The last I knew of him he was employed by the city. I don't remember his address, but his name is Ed Jefferson. If at your leisure you find it convenient to locate this person, I shall always be indebted to you.

Since I am in the Army it is very necessary that I get in touch with him as soon as possible. I was inducted in the Army from Los Angeles.

I think that he last lived in the vicinity east of Central near the Clark hotel. I am sorry that I can't supply you with more definite clues.

Thanking you in advance, I am grateful to you.

Respectfully yours,
ISAAC.

P. S.—My address: Pvt. Nelson Isaac, 4th Aviation Squadron (Sep.), Maxwell Field, Ala.

War Stamps Sold By Harlem Church

With more than $16,000 in War Bond sales to its credit during the past 5 months, St. Martin's Episcopal Church, 230 Lenox Avenue, New York City, is becoming one of the most active centers in Harlem for the promotion and distribution of War Savings securities.

Sunday announcements and appeals by Dr. John H. Johnson (shown at right), pastor, and weekday efforts of Guy C. Payne, sexton, stimulate systematic investment in War Bonds and Stamps among the 3,000 members of the congregation. Sale of Stamps alone averages over $30 daily—in addition to the $3,200 average monthly sale of Bonds.

Enrolled as a branch of the Federal Credit Union, the church is legally entitled to handle War Bonds and Stamps for direct sale, and its office is open every Wednesday evening for the convenience of all persons in the neighborhood, regardless of whether they are members of St. Martin's or not.

The church itself subscribed for $4,000 in War Bonds and various clubs and societies have made block purchases. A number of middle-aged women banded together and invested their savings in $400 worth of Bonds.

The picture at the top shows Miss Lorraine Baily, church secretary, selling Stamps to a member of the congregation, at the church office.

More Than $10,000 Raised By Local NAACP in 1942

In praparation of its annual report, the local Branch of the NAACP stated this week that the record shows the local branch to have a most active year in the Association's local history. Now the fourth largest branch in the United States, the branch has a paid up membership of more than 3500 members, white and colored, and raised more than $10,000.

Among its major accomplishments was acting as host to the 33rd Annual Conference of the National Organization last July which was considered the most successful and effective conference in the history of the Association which was organized in 1909. Wendell Wilkie was the guest speaker at the final and capacity meeting at the Shrine Auditorium. Next in significance was the Carnival Bazaar for United China Relief directed by Clarence Muse. In this accomplishment $2500.00 was sent to China for relief of the Chinese and was the beginning of the movement for other organizations in the Country to sponsor various war relief benefits.

The unprecedented success of the China Relief Bazaar and other kindred efforts enabled the local branch to report an income of more than $6000.00 in 1942 than in previous years. More than $3000.00 was sent by the local branch to New York for the support of the organization's National Work and in connection with national defense compaigns.

★ What's Doing in the Younger Set

By JESSIE MAE BROWN

The Los Angeles Younger Setters have definately been living the life, over the past few weeks, clubbing, partying, dinning, and witnissing a wedding of two. One of the finest parties, was held New Year's Eve, when the Bullock sisters, along with Betty and Evelyn Williams served as hostesses. The affair was given on order of an open house, and most of the New Year's frolikers made it their final stop. The latest recordings were on hand, and delicious refreshments were served throughout the evening. Josephine and Nita Spearman gave their annual affair. Paulite Coleman also entertained.

New Year's day, the Jr. NAACP, took over, and held its first Annual New Year's dance at the Elks. This dance followed the Rose Bowl game, which was well attended by the UCLAites.

PAULYN GARNER BETROTHED

A very gay time was had by all last Sunday afternoon, when the engagement of Paulyn Garner to Lt. Wildert Fisher was uniquely announced. Younger setters from Pasadena as well as LA, were in evidence. Took note of Nita Hippard and Vance Jones, Haroldine Browning, Doris and Lois Prince, Carolyn Collier and YeVert Patterson, Billy Benfield, Norma Lee McDaniels, Jack Terry, Jaddy Blake and a host of others. Lt. Fisher hails from Pasadena.

Last Monday night at the stroke of nine, Reaper Shaw became Mrs. Vernie Coleman. The ceremony was solemnized at the beautiful home of Rev. and Mrs. J. Raymond Henderson. Vernie is scheduled to leave for the armed forces next week.

WELL! WELL! WELL!

According to T. ., and other gents, the UCLA Co-Eds were only looking fine at the Rose Bowl game. Florence Cornelius in her furs, Marion Clarke, Idell Johnson, and Rachell in new suits . . . Betty Yarbrough spent holidays in Idaho with her parents this year. Wonder if John Alston is still the main issue . . . .

According to soldier boy Poly, Cpl. Darrington Weaver is sending his love to that certain Miss Fox . . . According to latest, Joye Speights and Lt. Luther Goodwin will take vows on the first Sunday in Feb. . . . As soon as finals are over out UCLA way, a group of the debs will be Arizona bound, for a short vacation . . . Wonder why Phyllis Hoxie has become so interested in joining the WAVES . . . Cookie Cook is wearing a ring on that certain finger. To the surprise of many, Jack Terry isn't the lucky fellow, but Lt. Cecil Tucker instead . . . By the way, Roy Loggins is knocking himself out, at Atlanta University, completing his basic training. Pvt. William Spencer is stationed at camp Stoneman, Calif. has an office job, and says the Army's OK.

Received word from a Tuskegee Co-Ed t'other day, says that suave Bill Terry, Dan Ferneil, and Clifford Wilson are taking the Campus debs by storm . . . Dan Cupid is still making his rounds, Dora Lee Armour and James Lee became engaged Christmas day . . . Man-about-town, George Sturdivant is serving Uncle Sam down in Mississippi. Well, well, Ruth Williams was bowled over when a certain Cal student was down for the holidays, and is anxiously awaiting next semester, when he enrolls at UCLA. Now how 'bout that . . .

LeRoy Beavers, Ruth Fowler, and Jean Williams were also down from Cal over the holidays. Margaret Prince left the San Diego campus a few weeks, and devided her time between LA, and El Centro . . . Hear that the sparkler on Leonette Walker's finger is just a gift, and doesn't mean a thing . . . By the way, Nita Clifton is also sporting a ring . . . Earnie Mae Maxey held open house New Year's day for the UCLA students visiting Pasadena . . .

According to the latest, Jefferson Barracks, Mo., is becoming as popular as Tuskegee. Latest additions are Dick Terry. Al Hudson, Dickie Owens and numerous others. Carolyn Collier recently returned from 'Frisco with news, that a few local back numbers have become hipped issues. Isn't that grand. Benjell Graham is looking rather blue since SC's Sinclair has been drafted. She says he was tops. Theodore Lumpkin will be a Second Lt. on the 21st of this month. In closing—What local deb got her wires crossed, when she mailed wrong letters down Tuskegee way.

Till next week.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE CHURCHES

"The gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord." The foregoing passage from Romans will be the Golden Text of the Sunday Lesson-Sermon on "Life" in all Churches of Christ, Scientist.

A Lesson-Sermon citation from Luke relates that when Jesus came near to the gates of the city of Nain "there was a dead man carried out, the only son of his mother and she was a widow: and much people of the city was with her. And when the Lord saw her, he had compassion on her, and said unto her Weep not. And he came and touched the bier: and they that bare him stood still. And he said, Young man I say unto thee, Arise. And he that was dead sat up, and began to speak. And he delivered him to his mother."

Mary Baker Eddy, the author of "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," writes: "Man's privilege at this supreme moment is to prove the words of our Master: 'If a man keep my saying, he shall never see death.'" "That statement is not confined to spiritual life, but includes all the phenomena of existence." "It is a sin to believe that aught can overpower omnipotent and eternal Life, and this Life must be brought to light by the understanding that there is no death, as well as by other graces of Spirit. We must begin, however, with the more simple demonstrations of control, and the sooner we begin the better."

It used to be TABOO for girls to discuss this kind of help

Many a girl has suffered from cramp-like pain and other distresses due only to periodic functional causes simply because that was a subject people didn't talk about.

Nowadays, thousands of women rely on the 2way help of CARDUI. Started 3 days before the time and taken as directed, CARDUI should help relieve purely functional periodic pain. Used as a tonic, it often perks up appetite, increases the flow of gastric juices, thus aiding digestion and thereby helping to build up strength and resistance for the time it's most needed.

CARDUI may help you. A 62-year record says it's worth a trial.

Man Stooges for Cannon Co. Union

Richard K. Franklin came visiting to the Eastside Sunday. He had a bad time.

Franklin is a worker in the Cannon Employes Association, company union of the Cannon Electrical Development Company at 3209 Humboldt street, which faces the powerful United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers of America, CIO, in a National Labor Relations Board election Monday.

Over 250 Negroes are employed by the firm, and it is possible that they may swing the election one way or another.

But Friend Franklin is not a stranger to the Negro workers. Where they are concerned, he has garnered for himself a reputation like the Fulton Street Fish Market.

It is alleged from informed quarters that Richard K. was tossed out of the International Longshoremen and Warehousemen's Union, CIO, for Negro-baiting.

There is behind him a long record of anti-union activity, with his special venom directed against the CIO, which generally hands Negro members a square deal.

FRANKLIN'S MASTERPIECE

Franklin's masterpiece was his letter to the San Francisco People's World, which denounced the 13th, 14th, and 15th amendments to the Constitution,--those which insure Negro rights,—and threatened to hang Pettis Perry, Negro Communist, to a tree in Pershing Square.

Concerning the Negro's labor friend, CIO, Franklin held:

"It is our deep ambition and sincere intention to hang every communist and CIO organizer in California to the highest tree we can find. Those few spared will be horse-whipped and castrated."

Further, in the same letter Franklin states that:

"When this war is over and

NAACP ELECTIONS: GRIFFITH

A lively election session of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People Sunday found incumbent President Thomas L. Griffith overwhelmingly elected over a write-in opponent.

The meeting, which heard reports from all sections of the 1942's NAACP activity, was heavily attended.

Att'y Griffith's annual report showed that the organization had raised ten thousand dollars during the last years entertained a national convention, sponsored one of the largest entertainments of the city, the China Relief Bazaar, and participated in upwards of twenty individual investigations and projects.

STRONG LABOR SHOWING

The meeting saw heavy labor sentiment, and found two representatives of organized labor, Revels Cayton, of the CIO, and William Pollard, of the AFL, elected to the executive committee. They join labor figures John E. Hargrove and Fay E. Allen on the committee.

Att'y Cince Monroe Townsend was a write-in candidate opposing Att'y Griffith. Other write-in, for executive committee, were Luther Merriwhether, James Anderson and Gilbert Lindsay. They all lost.

Four vice-presidents' were elected: Rev. S. M. Beane, Walter L. Gordon, sr., Dr. H. Claude Hudson and L. G. Robinson. Financial secretary is George A. Beavers; treasurer, Albert Baumann; secretary, Zella M. Taylor; and assistant secretary, Noreen Forney.

New executive committee members are Fay Allen, Edward C. Atkinson, Charlotta A. Bass, Rev. J. L. Caston, Arthur Cole, Floyd C. Covington, Thomas J. Duckett, Elizabeth St. Charles Edwards, Clarence O. English, Rev. Frederick D. Jordon, Assemblyman Augustus F. Hawkins, John E. Hargrove, Norman O. Houston, Charles H. Matthews, Att'y Loren Miller, Claude E. McKinney, Frederick M. Roberts, William Pollard and Clarence Muse.

WHERE FRANKLIN MET WATERLOO

JUST A GAY PARTY? Well, that's how it turned out AFTER Richard K. Franklin (insert) left. Held somewhere on the Eastside last Sunday, the meeting found Negro employees of the Cannon Electrical Development Company lambasting Franklin, stooge for the company union, and anti-Negro agitator who once wrote he opposed enfranchisement of colored people, threatened to hang Negro Communist Pettis Perry to Pershing Square.

MURDER-SUICIDE PAIR

The late Mr. and Mrs. William A. Aaron

Cop Kills Wife, Self, Leaves Note

Death riding the balmy air of last Sunday evening as seven steel-jacketed bullets, ended the lives of a young married couple and brought grief to two mothers, when William Lester Aaron, handsome 29 year old police officer, shot his pretty wife, Enid, 26, in her mother's home, 1508 E. 20th street, then turned the gun on himself. Four bullets from Aaron's service pistol crashed into the face and body of his victim before she could rise from the overstuffed chair in which she was sitting. He next fired two into his own head, staggered into the kitchen, reloaded with another shell and shot himself again, falling prone on the floor.

Detectives R. H. Varela and H. A. Howery, cruising near, arrived just in time to hear the last shot, and hurried him to Georgia Street Receiving Hospital, but he died en route. Mrs. Aaron died instantly, and was found with her head reclining to one side of the chair rest as if she was asleep.

HAD BEGGED FOR A RECONCILIATION

According to friends and the surviving relatives of the deceased couple, their marital union had seemed an ideal one, and they had been living happily at the home of his parents, 1329 E. 43rd street. They had purchased nice furniture, and both customarily dressed stylishly. Recently Mrs. Aaron began working at Lockheed Aircraft plant, and it is thought that the enforced absence from each other made, it easy for domestic misunderstandings to arise. At any rate the wife left the husband and returned to her mother's home, but madly in love with her, he continued to entreat her to return. Failing this, apparently the love turned to despair and bitterness and he decided to end it all.

WRITES LONG NOTE TO MOTHER

Last Sunday afternoon he wrote a note to his mother, Mrs. Buela Aaron and left it on the dresser in his room, then went again to see his wife. Arriving there about 4:30 P. M. he was met

LOS ANGELES MOBILIZES

Fight F.E.P.C. Blitz!

Mobilization of all Southern California win-the-war forces, Negro organizations, labor unions, and progressive bodies, in an effort to secure reopening of hearings on the Fair Employment Practice Committee were outlined here this week by the Negro Victory Committee.

At the same time the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People urged that every citizen write Paul V. McNutt, War Manpower Commissioner, in Washington, D. C., asking him to re-open the FEPC hearings.

Victory Committee spokesmen pointed out that McNutt's action in calling off the probe is a threat to the job of every Negro employed in defense industry as well as a threat to all U. S. war production.

A case in point is the Los Angeles Railway Company. Employment of Negroes as conductors and motormen by this firm would break a manpower shortage which has blitzed the city's transportation for several Weeks, tying up thousands of war workers and delaying production in many vital plants.

The company's business-as-usual policy contributes to traffic snarls, delay in war production, health hazards to transport customers, aside from negating the principles for which the war is fought.

The FEPC railway hearings, which would have reviewed documented evidence against LARY would almost assuredly have ordered prompt hiring of Negroes on rail lines here, as it did in Washington, D. C., much to the consternation of poll taxer John Rankin.

Further, postponement of FEPC activity is a go-signal to prejudiced employers.

Already restriction of Negroes in West Coast industry has been felt keenly. This is contrasted to the general trend of developments over the last year, during which time barrier after barrier has fallen before the demands of all-out war production.

Chief danger in giving employers such a go-signal is not that most employers are race prejudiced. It is that the bulk of top American industrialists, as recent pronouncements of the National Association of Manufacturers, are not fighting a total war against Hitler, fear our alliance with democratic China and socialist Russia, and have determined to direct their energies toward sabotaging war production rather than bolstering it.

A go-ahead on race discrimination would give these anti-war forces a deadly weapon to wield against the nation's whole effort

Marcantonio Faces Dixie Opposition

Poll Taxers Don't Want Him on Judiciary Committee

WASHINGTON, Jan. 22 — The poll taxers did it again.

Earning his place on the important House Judiciary Committee by right of seniority, fighting Rep. Vito Marcantonio, was kicked out of that important group following a Democratic caucus which meekly bowed to the will of Texas' Hatton Sumners, chairman of the judiciary committee.

Sumners it was who kept the Pepper-Geyer Anti-Poll Tax bill pigeon-holed for over a year-and-a-half, and vowed that it would never see the light of day.

Marcantonio has crossed all the Dixie leaders this session with his prompt filing of a bill to abol-

ON THE SIDEWALK

By C. A. B.

AN OPEN LETTER TO PAUL V. McNUTT:

DEAR COMMISSIONER McNUTT:

I am writing to urge that you immediately set a date for the Fair Employment Practice Hearings on railroad discrimination.

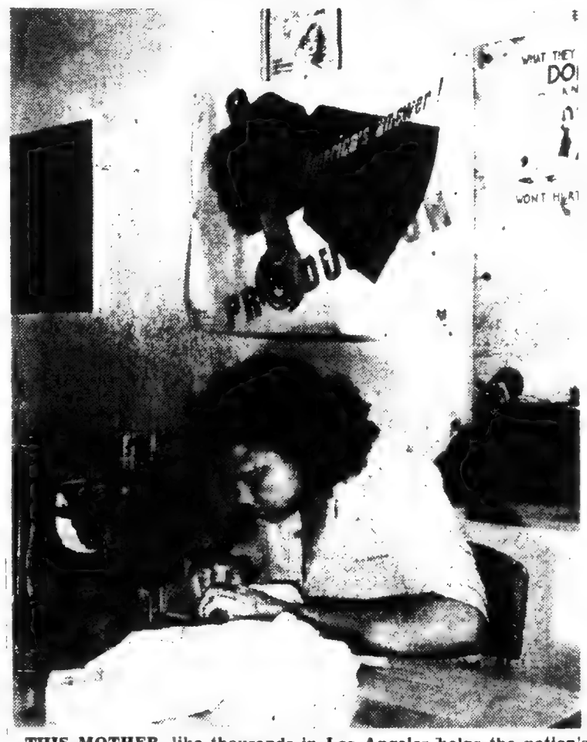
I have supported and I shall continue to support the President of the United States and his War Administration in every move that is designed to hasten this nation's victory over its enemies. That has been my position since the outbreak of hostilities, despite the fact that I opposed the Roosevelt Administration in the two previous elections, and in 1940 was the Western Director of the Women's campaign for Republican candidate Wendell Willkie.

My condemnation of your action in cancelling the railroad hearing is firmly in line with the win-the-war policy of the newspaper which I publish and those popular movements which I espouse.

What you have done, Mr. McNutt, I believe is a compromise with the worst forces of appeasement in the nation. It is a compromise with those who conspire against the war effort. It is a compromise with those whose hatred of Roosevelt and his policies of a democratic, people's war would drive them to any lengths. It is a compromise with Hitler.

I understand the practical political considerations with which you are faced, and I am convinced you have made a practical polical mistake.

My people and I know that the President must face a Congress heavily stacked against him. We understand the venomous nature of the Congressional opposition. We know the front men for the National Association of Manufacturers. We know the Nazis, big and little. We know the poll taxers. We know that all these forces of reaction are bound together in a working unity unsurpassed in the history political chicanery. We know that their ultimate object is the defeat of the war effort, because they are determined not to cross the threshhold of that new world, that century of the common man for which the Administration has battled so nobly.



But this compromise will not appease the appeasers. It will embolden them.

Remember the first bellowing of revolt against national authority in the war effort? Remember when Alabam's Gov. Dixon refused a government contract in his state because it held anti-discriminatory clauses?

Working Mothers! Register For Child Care

1-THIS MOTHER WORKS

THIS MOTHER, like thousands in Los Angeles helps the nation's victory through defense employment. Her efficiency is hampered because she must tend children when she's supposedly off from work

PHONE CALL TO CIO WILL REGISTER CHILDREN FOR CARE

Labor Body's Probe Turns Up Startling Cases

Do you work in industry or domestic service?

Do you have children?

Do they have proper care while you work?

If not, phone AD. 3321, or go to 4310 South Central Avenue, to the offices of the CIO Joint Committee, where registration for home nurseries are being gathered.

As explained by CIO organizing chairman Revels Cayton, there are funds available for nurseries, operated 24-hours a day, if it can be shown the Board of Education, which handles these Federal monies that there is need.

The need doesn't have to be run down with a butterfly net in this community. It sticks out like a sore thumb.

But compiling all the necessary information so that no legalistic tricks can be used to dodge establishment of the nurseries is a major task that the labor has taken on in the interest of the community's working population.

The drive for registration of the women is in full sway. Ten thousand hand-bills have been distributed explaining the drive,

THIS IS AN IDEAL NURSERY . . . but there are precious few of them on the Eastside to care for the thousands of "war orphans" of defense working parents. Many roam streets, open to danger and delinquency.

Thrifty Drug Awarded U. S. Treasury T-Flag

First award of the U. S. Treasury T-Flag to a chain store organization in Southern California was made Tuesday to Thrifty Drug Company in a ceremony at Los Angeles, the local Thrifty branch was advised by telephone.

The prized T-Flag is given only to firms having 90 per cent or more of their employees enrolled as regular purchasers of War Savings Bonds under the Payroll Plan to the extent of 10 per cent or more of the gross pay roll.

It was revealed that considerably more than 90 per cent of the 3,200 employees in the 58 units comprising the Thrifty Drug Stores organization throughout Southern California are making regular payments on War Bonds through deductions from their pay.

This is true not only of employees in the retail stores but also wrokers in Thrifty's bakery, photo finishing plant, ice cream plant, big warehouse and general offices.

Presentation of the flag was made by Howard D. Mills, administrator for Southern California of the Treasury's War Savings Staff, to Norman Levin, general manager of the company.

Facsimiles of the flag, which pictures a Minute Man in white on a blue background, with T in the corner, will soon be flying over all Thrifty Drug Stores, including the local branch.

"The achievement of Thrifty Drug Stores Company in winning this coveted flag is gratifying to the Treasury Department," Mills said, "and we hope that it will inspire many other firms and their employees to adopt and carry ot completion this voluntary plan of regularly buying War Bonds."

PHONE CALL TO CIO WILL REGISTER CHILDREN FOR CARE

daily papers have given it prominent space, and Tom Van Dyke's CIO broadcast repeatedly urges women to register, stressing that just a phone call will do the trick.

Community churches have rallied around the drive. Sunday morning Revels Cayton spoke before the mammoth Second Baptist church congregation, while Rose Segure, treasurer of the drive, appeared in the pulpit of People's Independent Church of Christ.

A delegation has appeared before the Baptist Ministers' Alliance and gained that body's support.

Sunday forty volunteer workers will cover the district from door-to-door, in quest of war working mothers who want nursery care for their children.

WOMEN'S STORIES

If any canfirmation of need were required, the reporter who covers CIO headquarters could volunteer it.

Some of the women's stories shocked even the seasoned social service workers who are donating their time in the drive office.

One small ,attractive woman, a riveter at an aircraft plant, has been trying to work nights and tend her children in the day. Her husband works days at the shipyards. Her only sleep for weeks has been a few hours she can catch during school hours.

Another woman has been paying $55.00 per month for the care of her two children, not including all meals or sleeping overnight.

Dr. Ruth Temple, serving for Assemblyman Augustus Hawkins as chairman of an already existing child-care group, will join with the CIO group to register, "every working mother whose child needs care."

AN OPEN LETTER TO PAUL V. McNUTT: RE-OPEN FEPC PROBE!

This was the test. The government retreated. It has been retreating ever since. It retreated before the anti-poll tax filibuster. It has retreated before the FEPC hearings. Each retreat has become the foundation for another, more damaging rout.

Now, I feel this surrender to the nation's anti-war forces must be halted!

I know there are issues of justice for my people involved. I know that their morale has been adversely affected by the symphony of surrender that has greeted their ears from Washington.

But it is not on the basis of justice or morale that I declare the FEPC railway hearings MUST be re-opened.

Our nation is faced with the greatest production challenge of any nation in history. We must feed, clothe, and arm an army of 7½ million American soldiers. We must arm and feed the great Red army. We must continue and expand our aid to the British isles. We must pour supplies across the Pacific to embattled Australia and China. We must maintain a flow of planes, tanks, guns, clothes, food to every battle front on earth.

The production estimates for 1943 far surpass those of 1942, and in 1942 there was a manpower shortage.

Who can be so naive as to believe that America can fulfill its vast production obligation without the utilization of every man and woman in this nation? Upon our success in production, the President has said, depends the military events of 1943.

How in the name of victory then, can we begin a retreat before those forces which mean to wound America's production through circumscribing what is virtually the nation's only remaining labor pool, the Negro people, with "boundaries as usual."

Cancellation of the hearing on railroad discrimination can be interpreted in only one way by the prejudiced employer. It is a go-signal. It is a go-signal for the race-baiting nonsense which can lose the American battle of production. Already industries on the West Coast have begun seriously restricting Negroes, whereas a few months ago each day found new barriers to Negro workers and other minority groups torn down, and a consequent production increase for the nation.

This is a serious situation!

Only your forthright and instant action can remedy it.

There are millions of men all over the world who stake their lives on the fullest operation of our industry during this crucial year. The American Manpower Commissioner must not become a party to the restriction of American production.

Act now!

Sincerely,

CHARLOTTA A. BASS

CANNON ELECTRIC SITUATION

Franklin has been employed at Cannon Electric for a month, apparently by the management and the company union to fight CIO organization.

He was formerly associated with the American Union Alliance, a union-busting outfit/frequently charged with dancing to the tune of company dough.

At Cannon, the Employes Association has operated without membership participation, has not handled grievances, especially those of Negroes and when the management came up with the neat scheme of paying Negro women ten cents an hour less than what they paid white men for the same work, the CEA dummied up like a tomb.

FRANKLIN EXPLAINS

All these points were put to Franklin at Sunday's Eastside meeting. He admitted past missteps of the CEA but promised a new day. He said statements concerning him disliking Negroes were not true.

Franklin charged that the CIO is un-American because "it makes race issues." There were some questions he just couldn't handle. To wit:

Why has there been no upgrading of Negro workers?

Why have no grievances of Negro workers been taken up?

Why do company guards turn away Negro women applicants, with the union blessing?

ELECTION MONDAY

Monday's election, to decide whether Franklin's CEA or the CIO's United Electrical Radio and Machine Workers of America will become the workers' sole bargaining agent, will take place at the Miracles of Grace church, 200 West Avenue 33, a block away from the plant.

SUNDAY'S MEET

Prior to the election, Eastside workers will gather at the headquarters of the CIO Joint Committee at 4310 South Central Ave. Sunday at 2 o'clock for a pre-election rally. Leo Turner, International Representative of the UERMWA, urged every Cannon employee to be on hand.

Negro community figures who have denounced Franklin include Mrs. Charlotta A. Bass, EAGLE editor; Rev. Clayton D. Russell, chairman of the Negro Victory Committee; and Att'y Thomas L. Griffith, president of the local branch of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

Hibler, treasurer; Marie Washington, chaplain; Eva Shavers, reporter.

Each officer agreed to perform her duties to the best of her ability. Remarks by Mrs. Flenoy Cunningham, president of Local 465 and Mr. Flenoy Cunningham, secretary-treasurer of Local 465.

Atty. Vince Monroe Townsend, Mr. John Hargrove, general chairman of 465, and Mrs. Josephine Brown of the YWCA, gave encouraging remarks.

A grand time was had by all. The union wishes to extend its sympathy to Mrs. Washington, whose home was destroyed by fire.

Marcantonio was further distinguished during the week by a familiarly foul blast from Poison Pen Westbrook Pegler, Los Angeles Times syndicate writer.

Negro-hater Hatton Sumners he particularly liked.

Marcantonio said the vote against him was a victory for the "forces of domestic Fascists." He was elected from a New York District, carrying Republican, Democratic, and American Laborite nominations.

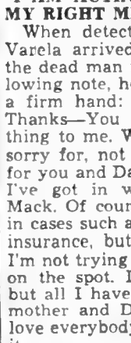
at the door by Mrs. Aaron's mother, Mrs. Betty Walsh. He asked to speak to his wife, and when the mother appeared a bit apprehensive, hastened to reassure her. He said quietly, "I'm not going to harm her, see I haven't anything, throwing the front of his coat open to show he had no gun. Mrs. Walsh admitted him, and when he asked to be left alone with his wife, proceeded into her bedroom and shut the door. The estranged man and wife sat in the front room for some time talking over their affairs.

"MOTHER" WAS HER LAST WORD

About 9:17 p. m. the mother heard her daughter call to her, "Oh, mother." Since the tone of voice was not hysterical, Mrs. Walsh walked at an ordinary pace into the front room where she had left the two. As she stepped in, she saw Aaron standing in front of Mrs. Aaron who sat a few feet away. Pulling his gun from his hip pocket he fired four shots in quick succession into the body of her daughter, then turned the gun on himself, before her horrified eyes. Getting sufficient control of herself to run out screaming someone call Newton Police station, and when the officers arrived she exclaimed he's in there, he's in there!"

"I AM ACTING IN MY RIGHT MIND"



When detectives Howery and Varela arrived at the home of the dead man they found the following note, he had written with a firm hand: "Dear Mother:—Thanks—You have been everything to me. What I am doing, I'm sorry for, not for the people but for you and Dad. Give everything I've got in wearing apparel to Mack. Of course you realize that in cases such as this you can't get insurance, but please believe me I'm not trying to put you and Dad on the spot. I don't have much, but all I have, I owe to my dear mother and Dad. I've learned to love everybody but Emel. So goes it.

"In my right mind, I do bequeath and will, every piece of furniture to my friends, my wearing apparel to A. W. Hooks. And to mother and Dad again I say I am sorry. I love you both more than you know. I am really serious now. The people called. It meant everything to me Another note was written by the faltering hand of the stricken officer, but was never finished, trailing off into a scrawl. The investigating officers found it stained with blood, lying on the kitchen table at the scene of the tragedy. It read: "I'm sorry . . . It's my only . . . .

At the coroner's inquest the verdict was murder and suicide at the hands of William Lester Aaron Well liked by all, both friends of the couple and fellow officers of Aaron who worked from downtown Central Station were saddened by the unfortunate incident.

Double funeral services will be held today (Friday), 2 o'clock at Angelus Funeral Home.

A SMART, PRETTY, FIX-IT-YOURSELF COIFFURE

SOMETIMES a hair style is like a popular dress style—becoming to many women, simple enough to wear at home yet pretty enough for visits and meetings. That's the kind of coiffure pictured on this page. It's new but not extreme, becoming to almost every age and type of face, easy to fix yourself. The little side rolls give the new "upped" effect that look so smart and neat; the center hair is arranged in soft waves that extend over the brow, so that the general effect is not too severe. A woman with very straight hair needs a good permanent as the basis for her hair-do, but anyone who has naturally curly hair can easily set it for herself in this charming manner — provided her hair is in healthy, manageable condition.

Before you start trying to arrange this coiffure or any other new effect, however, you must be sure that your hair is healthy and manageable. If you feel that your hair is a little dry and lustreless, start at once to get it into good condition. One of the first steps toward this lies in frequent, proper washings with the right type of shampoo. A favorite both of hairdressers and of women who set their own hair is Special Drene, the liquid soapless shampoo with added hair conditioner. Because this shampoo is soapless it cannot leave any sticky soap film on the hair to dull its lustre and color; instead, such a shampoo gives the hair extra lustre and enhances its natural color. Best of all, the added hair conditioner leaves the hair in a delightfully manageable condition so that it will fall easily into the lines of a new hair style. While the hair is still damp it can be rolled up at the sides upon curlers or strips of cloth; then the top hair can be brushed into waves that are held in place by combs or metal clasps —or it can be set in pin curls that can afterwards be brushed into soft waves.

In addition to frequent washings, healthy hair requires a good brushing every night—one hundred brush strokes clear to the ends of the hair. This distributes the natural oil of the hair evenly and also helps to keep the scalp in healthy condition. Massaging the scalp with the fingertips before a Special Drene shampoo is also helpful, as are occasional hot oil rubs before a shampoo. Such care, plus a good shampoo every week or so, will create shining, lustrous hair that can easily be arranged in pretty coiffures such as the one pictured.

What Is Black Market? — It Robs Your Food

H'WOOD RESTAURANTS GET CHOICE CUTS; EASTSIDE GETS BLANK

Central Avenue's war working population felt the sting of sloppy price contorls, sky-rocketting expense and inferior grade foods this week.

Worst of all, black markets were flourishing..

A black market is one which overcharges or takes bribes.

Its customers, those who pay high prices and keep their traps shut about it, are little saboteurs

"Not only," as PW writer Tom Cullen puts it, "are they cutting their own throats, they are cutting the throats of their fellowmen. They are hastening inflation by creating unbearable pressure on price controls. They are threatening to wreck the government's entire price structure. They are impeding the war effort just as effectively as if they threw emery dust in the cogs of a war machine.

Citizens who get gypped should yell. They should yell to the Office of Price Administration. They should collect evidence. If they don't, living costs are going to soar even higher.

Basic difficulty in the food situation is that the poll taxers (yep —those bums again) and assorted defeatists in the Congress of the United States have prevented the development of a well worked out national rationing program strong enough to cover the whole of the nation's food resources and with the authority to cut down on the wholesale and assorted middle-man chiselers.

Take meat. That is, take it if you can get it. If you live in the Central avenue area, the pickings are going to be damn slim and the qualify something awful.

The friends, however, who still hold down domestic posts in Beverly and Hollywood come home with weird and wonderful tales of fine eating on the other side of the tracks.

Those who can pop into Earl Carroll's for lunch will also come up with a story of life that's lovely, from the gastronomic angle, anyway.

Distribution of meat is a mess.

The wholesalers are operating, by and large, one sweet racket. Restauranteurs slip 'the boys' an extra 25 fish and mysteriously locate choice cuts in their assignment. Exclusive eateries are packed with fine meats. Whole neighborhoods of war workers are without even near-adequate supply of meat.

Neighborhood butchers operate black markets, too. People don't pay attention to price ceilings and permit themselves to be robbed.

And so the dizzy system goes.

What could solve the problem, of course, is the fair, democratic rationing of all consumer meat supplies, without favoritism, at the consumer level, so that everybody gets theirs in proportion to the meat on hand.

What's blocking the solution is the entrenched interests of the big packing houses, the phoney swivel chair 'farm bloc,' yes, and the Poll taxers, once again getting in their licks for Hitler.

Eastside war workers are urged NOT TO SUBMIT to inferior quality meats or over-charging. They should become familiar with price ceilings and nail cheating butchers on the spot.

Before the Office of Price Administration can take action, however, certain information is necessary.

It must obtain the meat and the receipt for sale of same from the purchaser; it must take this meat to another butcher or meat expert to identify it as to grade and to weigh it properly; then it must check the ceiling price under which the meat in question er;if, after checking these factors, was sold by the suspected butch-it appears there has been a violation, prosecution is in order.

Come, John Citizen. Let's prove there wasn't one born around here every minute.

Let's blitz the black-market!

REV. CHARLES M. TONEY,

Field Secretary of the Los Angeles District Association of the Western Baptist Convention, rendered by request a special service, at the Los Angeles, General Hospital, last Sunday, January 17, at 8 p. m., 10th Floor room 400.

Rev. Toney said, "he is not a healer," but just an instrument in the word of God; and was happy to give this service.

It is an undoubted truth, that the less one has to do, the less time one finds to do it in. One yawns, one procrastinates, one can do it when one will, and therefore one seldom does it at all. —Lord Chesterfield

Jolly Twelve Matrons Give Outstanding Fete

Although this is delayed news somewhat, yet we feel it unfair to our Grand Associate Matron; Grand Deputy Lecturer; our Past and Present Grand Officers; unfair to our host, hostesses and our many guests, if we failed to mention the beautiful Xmas party and reception given by the 1940 "Jolly Twelve Matrons".

It was an outstanding affair, long to be remembered. On that eventful day, Dec. 20, 1942, the beautiful, spacious home of the Corrys, 787 N. Garfield, Pasadena was filled to its capacity in a continuous stream.

It was the Xmas dinner party of the club and more than forty persons including the husbands of the "Twelve"; other invited guests among whom were: Mrs. Ida Mae Robertson, PGWM; Mrs. Theresa A. Bailey, PM of Queen of Sheba Chapter and Mrs. Alice Parker, PM of Queen of Sheba.

All sat down to a well-planned, well-cooked, delicious turkey dinner at 2.30 p. m. The tables were nicely decorated with flowers and Xmas colors throughout the house. After dinner, the tables were cleared and all were comfortably seated in the spacious living room and other places, to hear and see the club members distribute presents from the huge, well decorated Xmas tree, placed in the den, with gifts on, around and below it. Yes, gifts and more gifts, artistically wrapped and too beautiful to be removed.

It was the prettiest, heaviest-laden Xmas tree that the club has had since its organization. Each received many gifts, and a special gift from their 'Secret Pal' which was revealed on that day. Thus ended another beautiful and successful year for the 1940 Matrons.

Now, the reception at the same place, honoring our Grand Associate Matron, Beatrice McCarroll of Santa Monica and our Grand Deputy Lecturer, La Gulia Shaw. Just before the arrival of our guests beginning at 4:30 p. m. a receiving line was formed as follows: Sis. Beatrice McCarroll, GAM; Sis. LYa Gulia Shaw, GD L:. Sis. Ossia L Harrison, President of the Jolly 12 Club; PGWM Ida Mae Robertson, Grand WP, Brother Herbert H. Lampkins and some of the club members.

At the door, receiving was Sis. Katherine Howard of Long Beach. Other members served the guests.

Nearly 200 attended the reception, exquisitely, and charmingly gowned. A continuous stream for three hours, and each was served delicious refreshments. All departed, deeming Mrs. Virginia Corry and the other club members, ideal hostesses.

Who Are These Jolly "12"

They are the OES Matrons of 1940. Known the whole state over, for in the book of the Guiding Star they appeared from cover to cover. They meet as truly friends who care, and for each other their burdens share. You will always find them meek and humble, never complaining, nor grouchy or grumble. And they would never, never, never mar the work, the aim and beauty of our Star.

We sleep, but the loom of life never stops, and the pattern which was weaving when the sun went down is weaving when it comes up in the morning.

White Quits Council for Democracy

NEW YORK, N. Y.—Because of the Council for Democracy's refusal to accept responsibility for the publication of an article by Warren Brown, one of its paid employees, slandering the entire Negro press, Walter White, executive secretary of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People resigned this week as a director of the Council. The Brown article appeared simultaneously on news stands last month in the December, 19th Saturday Review of Literature and the January Reader's Digest.

Ernest Angell, president of the Council for Democracy in answer to White's query as to whether the position of the Council was "indicated" by the Brown article said:

"The Council is not called upon either to endorse and adopt every statement made in its general conclusion, nor to repudiate the particular statements and general conclusions. The article is not in the formal sense an official Council publication. It was written by a regular member of our staff. We knew it was being written, we saw the piece before it was turned in for publication. We did not see then nor do we see now any reason to disavow it or to modify it."

White charged that the Brown article is not a well-rounded presentation and would do "infinite harm" because of its immaturity and false emphases. He pointed out also, that the appearance of a reprint of the article in a recent Texas daily newspaper alongside an advertisement of the Ku Klux Klan was an unpleasant coincidence. Accompanying White's resignation was a statement by Roy Wilkins, assistant NAACP executive secretary, Crisis editor and veteran newspaper man. Wilkins asserted that evidently there was a plan for this article, perhaps before it was written and that someone was very anxious to place the 7 million circulation of the Reader's Digest behind Brown's statements.

He said that information had reached him that the Reader's Digest had had this article originally and had approached several magazines including Opportunity to get them to publish it so that the Digest could "digest" it. Finally it was placed with the Saturday Review of Literature and published simultaneously in the Digest.

Judge Gives Accused Man a Break

Although Christmas has come and gone, George Gailbraith, defense worker of 1704 E. 21st St., was given what could be described as nothing less than a Christmas present at the hands of Judge Newcomb W. Condee in Dept. 41 of the Superior Court last Monday morning.

Galbraith had been charged with assault with a deadly weapon, a felony, upon the complaint of his brother in law, Walter Fuller. At the preliminary hearing it was shown that Fuller was cut so badly around the throat that his jugular vein was exposed. On the morning of his trial, however, defense attorney, Curtis C. Taylor went into a huddle with Deputy District Attorney Galliano, after which the latter announced to Judge Condee that the prosecution would withdraw the felony charges on condition that Galbraith enter a change of plea to simple assault, a misdemeanor.

Attorney Taylor then made a fervent plea for leniency and Galbraith was let off with a $50.00 fine, but best of all, the Judge gave him five days in which to raise the money.

Race Urged to Contribute to FDR's 'March of Dimes'

Negroes throughout the United States, along with all other American citizens, are being asked and urged at this time to make liberal contributions and join the "March of Dimes" to the President to continue the fight against Infantile Paralysis. Negroes afflicted with Infantile Paralysis benefit from these contributed funds as do all other Americans so afflicted.

President Roosevelt has authorized, for the tenth consecutive year, the use of his birthday, January 30, 1943, for the raising of funds to continue the nation-wide fight against Infantile Paralysis. The Committee for the Celebration of the President's Birthday for the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis is asking all to send contributions to the President on his birthday.

The fight against Infantile Paralysis is carried on throughout the year through the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis and its 2,900 chapters. All funds contributed or raised during the President's Birthday Celebration are administered by the National Foundation and its 2,900 Chapters. Each chapter assists those afflicted with Infantile Paralysis, regardless of race, color creed or age. Negroes receive hospitalization and treatment for this dreaded disease throughout the nation.

PRETTY LITTLE GERLDINE ARTIS celebrated her fifth birthday Sunday, Jan. 10, at the beautiful home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Artis, at 1145 E. 47th street. Little Gerldine wore a pink taffeta formal and a pink bow of ribbon in her hair. Owing to the skillful art of Mr. Ralphe Porter (cousin of the hostess) the house was beautifully decorated. The elaborate birthday cake, with its gorgeously raised floral design, was the centerpieee and the center of attraction. With their little voices ringing out, "Happy Birthday to You," the tiny guests then circled the table and each was presented balloons of various colors, and were they thrilled, blowing and tossing them into the air. The little guests, accompanied by their parents, were Mary Louise and Olivia Hunter, Nancy and Edgar Scruggs, Rosezina and Jonetta Baker, Ricky and Jovonne Harrison, Janice and Raymond Dones, Glory Jene Easley, Walter Shirley jr., Reginal Woods, Emma Jean Allen, Rosalie Harris, Marline Hurt, and Judy Stanford. Not only were the parents of little Gerldine happy, but also the grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. H. L. Whitley, of 1335 E. Washington boulevard, and Mrs. J. D. Artis, 1132 E. 47th street, who blessed the table so brilliantly.

The Earl Griffins, he's the p... ...ening it to their lawyers, but decisively . . . Cabin In The Sky will finally get its NY premiere at the Astor Theatre, on a two-a-day schedule. It follows Tenn. Johnson, now getting its discussed showing . . . Somehow, we're personally discounting those rumors anent Bill and Fannie Robinson and pigeonholing 'em in the Lil Family Squabble file. After all these years, it seems a lil silly that they'd do anything so unbelievable . . . In town: Ollie Terry and Allan Cook, and suavely settin' onlookers back on their composition heels what with really looking the admirable part of two smoothies in their tailored Naval officers uniforms. Even down to a snazzy station wagon tossed in for good measure! It all agrees with them mightily, for neither have looked as well and happy and complete in many a moon begone. They're at San Peuro . . . and continue, as we overheard one youngie whisper, "Fine Easter, honey!"

Sissle and his crew made overseas transcriptions at NBC, Sunday . . . Olivette Miller spent Mond. t... ...ing at Columbia Studios . . . Maurine Browning, back from a hurried trip to Frisco, has never looked more radiantly youthful, have you noticed? . . . her radiance strikes us equally as warm as does Juanita Terry's lovely smile . . . and Dot Brown has yet to let us down whilst continuing so stunning and sophistocratic . . . and, if we had our way, we'd have such lovely women always framed in mirrors like that breathtakingly beautiful mirror which hangs on Leonore Winkler's wall.

Gladys Dent has returned from her Sacramento trip, and is home to stay this time. Clara and Gene Henderson are around these parts, too, after so long up No'th. Good seeing 'em . . . Gosh, that was certainly a brilliant roomful of talent at the Satd. nite party at Music Town for Hall Johnson's Choir! Never saw so much music wealth in one room. And happy . . . Babe Wallace, the top-drawer entertainer here from NY, tells pals he'd like nothing more than living out here. Coming from Harlem, Babe, they ALL wanna stay! . . . Kenneth Spencer did a magnificent job as guest Sund. eveg at the concert at Earl Carroll's (Philharmonic weekly), took countless bows after his two numbers (he encored Ole Man River, too), and did quite handsomely for himself. Monica and Phil Carter were among his guests. Spencer, wearing a beard for current film work, looks more mature with his growth.

In Oakland: Marie Joe Browne . . . Cunny Wilson sr., Flo Rucker's hubby, is quite, quite ill in Omaha, we hear . . . As we whispered to you 2 mos back, confirmation comes of the slated divorce of singer Anne Brown (she was Bess in Porgy & Bess) and her medico hubby, back East . . . Certainly no cavalcade of tan tone entertainment would dare overlook Dean Dixon? What ho, Irving Mills? Dixon's milestone achievement should be included! A continual electrifying recollection for us was seeing Dixon conduct in NY's Central Pk. on a lovely August nite, last summer . . . WAAC Enlistee Myrtle Anderson left Frid. for Des Moines.

Baritone Lawrence Whisonant is at Huachuca, we see . . . Pianobeatin' Charlev Brown was in town last wk from Ft. Ord . . . Resonant speaking voice: Ruby Phillips. (Tondelayo, the dancer, is her house guest, while here for the Fox film) . . . Dick Williams, medico attached to the 369th, is reported as Missing In Action! . . . Hastening to see "Noah," the Ojai Valley Theatre production at the Assistance League Playhouse last week, was a delightful event for us! Beautifully created, the play was impressive, but, then, viewing anything at the intimate Playhouse would be a pleasure . . . Later, for a quickie at the Melody Lane over at Hollywood & Vine, and this ... cident: Luvercha Evay, wrapped in costly mink, wearing a saucy hat, lights a ciggie, turns to wave our way. She was with Stan Perez, whose Dad manages a plantation in Brazil. Saw 'em later at Streets Of Paris, and she had two camelias, plucked on the way.

Anot... interesting event for us, ove... the past wk: Going by Hank Armstrong's to view Cal Bailey's art work in the playhouse. Cal's done a fine job with 22 caricatures over the bar, 3 wall impressions on yellow backgrounds, a sports panel of 15 famous athletes, a head of Hank on the bar and a table-top piece done with an electric needle. An excellent study of Borican in the panel, and also Jno. Henry Lewis, whom, Cullen Fentress leaned over the bar to tell us, is in the Bay Region now. Hank was on hand thru the afternoon . . . that Bailey's slightly terrific, no foolin.

Prince Modupe is busy rehearsing another show . . . According to Co. Clerk Albert Walker, Co. H of the State Guard (at Arlington) boasts the youngest and best dressed men of the entire 7th Reg., no less. He names a few of the lads. Richard Abderkerder, Ulysees Johnson, Richard Gordon, Willie Henry, Albert Walker and Wm. Riley. Capt. Jno. Williams is their commanding officer . . . If Emmett Wilson (Frank's son) will contact this dept., we'd appreciate it . . . Frown: You regular folk would be dismayed at other folk who still stand off and upbraid others who work for and serve servicemen on furlough! Why a serviceman should ever be regarded as plague, I'll never learn. He's fighting for us, and yet there actually exist people around here who condemn any movement to entertain these lads—I DON'T get it!! . . . personally, I'm all for tar 'n featherin' such hypocrites! . . . and I know you are, too.

Add note: Local pals of Eddie Smith's hear he may go overseas from his local Dixie post.

Local AWVS Canteen to Hold Sunday Vesper Hour for Service Men Stationed in Area

Because a recent incident disclosed the fact there is a large percentage of the men in the armed services who are of a religious turn of mind, or who at least desire to obey the advice of religious parents, the excellently conducted, canteen operated by the colored AWVS plans to add a Sunday Vesper hour to its entertainment.

The incident that inspired this decision occurred at a recent dinner sponsored by the congregations of seven colored churches. Following the dinner, the boys crowded around the piano where a young lady, organist for one of the churches was playing and singing hymns by way of entertainment.

The whole group of some two hundred listened intently, and as quickly as she finished one hymn, would name and call for another. Many of the boys joined in the singing, and this developed that there were a number of good voices, among them. A check up among the various units stationed in the vicinity brought out the fact that they would appreciate an hour of religious singing on Sunday evenings, and a number of quartettes and choruses are in process of formation in preparation for the institutions of the soldiers' Vesper hour.

The members of the AWVS are asking all the churches in the city to aid in this work by sending singers, pianists, and hymn books, so when in operation this colored canteen will have a feature that no other canteen in the area has, and possibly nowhere else in the country. Several outstanding organizations have offered their support and appearance. Included are the Hall Johnson Singers, Gilbert Allen Choir and others.

★ CINDERELLA GIRL

Cinderella girl, such is the title being given to pretty Miss Mildred Hearn Stent, 18 years, of 25 Hamilton Terrace, New York City, who is to leave shortly for Hollywood, Calif., for a motion picture career via "Thanks Pal", the new all-colored motion picture of Twentieth Century Fox Corporation.

Lithsome Miss Stent is lovely to look upon, a feast for one's eyes. She is a Cinderella girl through the magic of research and modern medicine. This is especially true when one takes into consideration she was a cripple with Infantile Paralysis, with not too much assured hope of full recovery when she was 13 years old.

"Gosh!" exclaimed this very attractive girl, "When I think about it I have so much to be thankful for; I'm well, I have youth, my figure is not bad, and I have a career before me!"

When interviewed, the future motion picture actress said it was a boon to her that the hospital had done what they could for her but she'd have been much better and would not have been confined to her bed for eight long months if such methods as the Kenny method now used in the treatment of Infantile Paralysis had been used at that particular time.

"Gee! I thought that I would never walk again!" she exclaimed as she sipped a glass of milk. "Lying in that bed all those months was so painful!"

Her charming eyes danced to and fro, as she gave a big smile that lighted up her lovely and winsome face.

She said, "I'm glad the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis has found a method of relief and help for all races of kiddies today, and I'm realy glad in my heart when people send contributions to President Roosevelt in the "March of Dimes", on his birthday. It gives hope to other boys and girls who may be helped sooner than I was".

Miss Stent is tall and rather large for her age. She works every day, goes horse back riding ,plays tennis and is an ardent swimming fan.

When querried about her favorite motion picture star, she answered that she had none--all seemed to impress her just the same.

Her favorite current best seller is "The Sun is my Undoing" which she averred was thrilling.

"When I go to Hollywood—if I can make just half the success Lena Horne has made, I'll be happy.

"She is a lovely person and she's still Lena Horne, even if she has been to Hollywood."

Friends who know the young lady, who hails from South Carolina and who works as an artist model for one of the leading artist of New York, say that Cinderella's wish will come true. Her hat size will remain static when she returns.

Anti-Prejudice Society, Inc. Raps McNutt FEPC Action

The following is a copy of a letter mailed to Washington, D. C.:

January 18, 1943
Mr. Paul V. McNutt
Commissioner War
Manpower Board
Washington, D. C.
Dear Sir:

We, the American Anti-Prejudice Society, Inc., feel that your recent cancelling of the hearings before the FEPC veritably paralyzing the faculties of this valuable board to have been very untimely. It is also very discouraging to the minority groups that are striving to do their share towards the winning of this total war, which even yet threatens the very life of our country.

Since racial prejudice with its accompanying discrimination in employment is the enemy within, that makes it far more difficult to conquer the enemy without, the FEPC should continue to be the vigilant watchman. Now if at any time it is greatly needed to adjust differences, and remove obstacles that have arisen on account of racial prejudice.

Our grounds for taking this stand is not that of race or nationality, but that of Democracy, the very thing we and the other United Nations are fighting to save. War production is impeded by racial prejudice and if the figures were available the extent to which the nation's loss has been and what it is still suffering would be colossal.

Hence we join with the millions of other citizens throughout the country, in urging you to return the authority to the FEPC for hearings on matters so vital to the nation at large. Thus you will be removing a clog, before the wheels of industry devoted to war work, and needing all hands for it. Since our connections are international, we hope in the near future to be able to announce that this has been done.

With highest regards we remain,

Respectfully yours,
REV. C. TOWNSEND TUCKER, President;
HARRY LEVETTE,
Director, Public Relations.

Talks Out of Turn in Movie; Is Investigated By FBI

If Johnnie Bonds Thomas, 22-year old defense worker, hadn't talked out of turn in the Lincoln theatre Monday night, he wouldn't be in the hands of the FBI on suspicion of draft dodging or desertion from the army.

Creating a disturbance in the theatre when he hailed a friend, sitting on the main floor from the balcony, Thomas was questioned by officer James Roseborough, assigned to special duty at the theatre, and by manager Jimmie Marshall.

Asked to show his draft registration card, Thomas at first claimed to be only 17 years old. Breaking down under questioning, he finally admitted to being 21. An application for a job, found on him, stated his birthdate as Mar. 12, 1922.

The youth claimed that he registered in Pennsylvania and said a friend, whose name he could not give, had his card. He was arrested by Roseborough on suspicion of draft evasion and later turned over to the FBI.

WAR ON RIFF-RAFF

Thomas' arrest was part of the Lincoln's war on riff-raff, rowdy youngsters who disrupt the peace and quiet of the house. Considerable progress was reported this week by manager Marshall, who said the problem is one shared by houses all over the country and all over Los Angeles, in a general breakdown of juvenile morale.

Officer Roseborough, member of the Newton Street Police station's juvenile detail, has been on duty several weeks and has almost completely rid the house of noisy fans. Roseborough said his apprehensions have included a 14-year old boy for using abusive language; another for destruction of theatre property.

Others, known to be undesirable characters, have been refused admittance to the theatre.

These Questions answer many a laxative problem

Ques. Are all laxatives alike? Ans. Certainly not. Ques. Are all laxatives herbal laxatives? Ans. No, some are saline, emollient, etc. Ques. Is Black-Draught herbal? Ans. Yes, Black-Draught is purely herbal—usually gentle but thorough if directions are followed. That's why it is called "the friendly laxative."

★ LIBRARY NOTES

Helen Hunt Jackson Branch

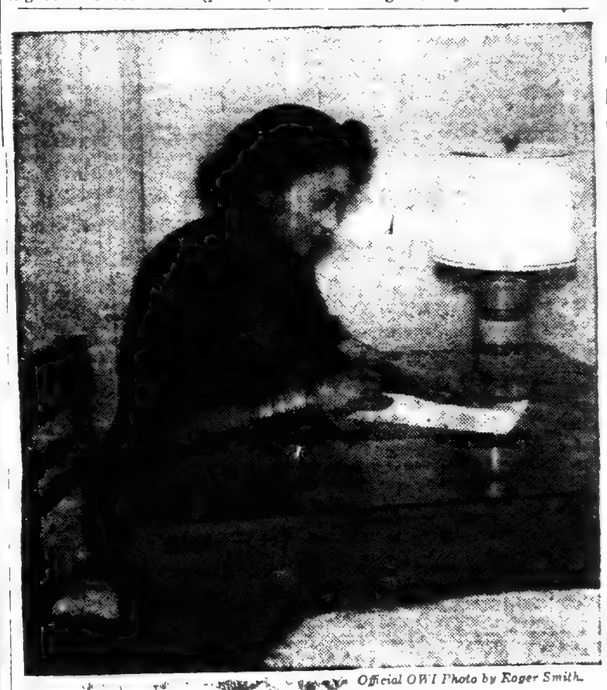
Look to the Mountain—Cannon

There is both an American saga and a warm love story in this fine novel of a boy and a girl, under twenty, in pre-Revolutionary New Hampshire. The two leave their settled village and set off together to find a new home up the Merrimack River.

Follow the Leader—Davis

The story of Charles Martel's rise to fame and power has warmth and humor. Charles was born in the 1890's, was an ordinary youngster who went through the World War, gaining confidence in himself and becoming civic minded. Charles planned to put his hometown of Pabulona, Mo., on the map and found an old school mate to help him.

My Uncle Newt—Eisenberg



He was definitely an old reprobate-cantankerous, ornery and cussed. He descended upon his relatives like an ill wind, complete with formula for liniment, ingredients for making same, a dirty shirt and an empty purse. He was the terror of proper ladies, the skelton that wouldn't stay in the family closet.

West With the Night—Markham

Beryl Markham arrived in British East Africa at the age of four. Her childhood was spent on her father's farm for training race horses. Here she went hunting pigs with a spear; learned to shoot game with a revolver from horse-back; received a professional trainer's license and raced her father's horses; and ran the farm in his absence. Then she gave horse training up to learn to fly, being the first woman mail pilot in the world.

The Seventh Cross—Seghers

A German woman has given us a cross-section of German life as it was before this war, but under Nazi domination. This is a gripping novel of seven men who escaped from Westhofen prison camp, of the many lives effected by their escape, and of how one of them got away.

HEY, McNUTT: HAVE YOU A SOLUTION?

About six weeks ago there appeared from the California Shipyard a series of ads in the Los Angeles Examiner asking for men and women to apply for the position of guard and firemen, no experience needed. I made application immediately and was interviewed. Later I was investigated, supposedly by the FBI, and approved.

Two weeks ago I received a letter from the head of the Plant Protection department, Mr. J. B. Stewart, telling me that there were no vacancies as guard, but if I would like to be considered in the fire department to contact his office. On Saturday, Jan. 16, I went to the hiring hall and told them that I would accept the position in the fire department. Mr. Stewart was contacted and with his approval I was accepted. However, I had occasion to remember his statement to the effect that there was no vacancy in the guard department, since the man who stood next to me while we were being fingerprinted and photographed had a telegrama that he had received the day before asking him to report for guard duty. He had made his application only two weeks before. My application had been in six weeks.

Having been given a number I was told to report to the fire station. Upon reporting I was welcomed into the department by the deputy chief who had started to get my time card and issue of clothing when he was called by the chief. They talked behind closed doors for about 20 minutes when the deputy chief returned he told me to sit down for a while. After having sat for about two hours I was told by the deputy chief that there seemed to be a mistake somewhere. He then took me to the chief who told me to return on Monday at 2 p. m. and talk to Mr. Stewart. I then asked him point blank if he was not giving me the run around because of my color. He wouldn't admit that but did say that I was the first of my race to be admitted and he as chief didn' think it would be to the best advantage to have a Negro in the department. I made no effort to leave and he finally certified my time for one day and told me to walk over the yard and entertain myself any way I wanted to until the close of the shift.

While I was on duty there was a fire in the yard but no one even mentioned giving me a fire extinguisher. In other words, I was being paid as a fireman, but was not allowed to work even as a fire was burning in the yard.

I returned on Monday at 2 p. m. to see Mr. Stewart and was told that he would have to terminate my employment. Negroes and white might not be able to work together in the department. He admitted that they were short of guards and firemen but he didn't think a Negro could be put in the department at this time. I pointed out the window and showed him Negroes and whites working together as welders, etc., but he said that can't be done in this department. I asked him if he had ever tried it and he said no he wouldn't be willing to experiment at this time. With that I was handed my dismissal. Having been on the force one day without being allowed to work. I must add that the men in the department were very congenial and cooperative, but the policy is maintained by the chief and the head of plant protection.

Young lady, does an old TABOO prevent your knowing this help?

In less enlightened days, women didn't discuss these things. Now, it's different. If a woman suffers from periodic cramp-like pain and other purely functional distresses, she tries to learn how to help herself.

Thousands of women praise the 2-way help of Cardui. Taken as a tonic, it usually peps up the appetite, stimulates the flow of gastric juices, thus aiding digestion and thereby helping build up energy and resistance. Started three days before the time, and taken as directed, it should help relieve much purely functional, periodic pain.

Try CARDUI. A 62 year record says it may help!

U. S. JOURNAL HONORS GOLDEN STATE MUTUAL

In the December issue of the leading Disability Insurance journal, The Accident and Health Review, particularly significant was the mention given the Golden State Mutual Life Insurance Company in the feature article recounting the results of the Hoodoo Day contest in which the Golden State Mutual accounted for 671 applications for its greatest one day drive that also netted $1,230 in premiums and 200 life applications. Accompaning the article was the photograph of A. J. Williams, Los Angeles District Supervisor who the managers throughout the nation with 29 qualifiers from his district. Mr. Milton Alleyne, Los Angeles field superintendent who qualified for his 12th Black Cat certificate was quoted as to the reasons for his success as a salesman.

This contest has been sponsored since its begining in 1934, by the Accident and Health Review, largest circulated journal of its kind in the United States. Contests are held on each Friday 13th of the year and designated Black Cat Day, and to qualify in the Black Cat Club; an agent on that Friday must secure 13 or more Accident-Health applications. Each company in the contest tries to qualify as many agents as possible as the standings are based upon the number of qualifiers.

Inter-Ocean Casualty operating in many Eastern states was the leader with 60 agents qualified. Golden State Mutual was in a tie for second place, with Provident Life and Accident, with 40 applications. Fifteen companies, all white qualified with five or more agents, and there were more entries who didn't qualify.

Golden State Mutual field superintendents cited along with Supervisor A. J. Williams and who qualified three or more agents were Milton Alleyne 6, Nolan Payton 6, William E. Franklin 5, Cecil Davis 5, Dee Hodge 4, and Russell Young 3.

QUALIFIERS

Milton Alleyne qualified for his twelfth consecutive time and is in a four way tie for the nation's leadership with representatives of Inter-Ocean Casualty, W. Va., Illinois Mutual Casualty, Ill., and the Illinois Bankers Life. Two of the five who have qualified eleven times are Roy Simpson and Roy Spencer of Golden State Mutual.

Stewart Stovall is in the group that has qualified ten times, with Edward Ford, John Payton and Edward Jackson, one step down with nine qualifications. Lonzie Jones and Nolan Payton represent Golden State Mutual in the group who have been cited eight times.

Marshall Reed, Jr., has been successful seven times while the November award was number six for Alvin Nurse. David Mattocks, Sacramento representative has competed five times successfully, while Clara Brown, Howard Ford, jr., Houston Pillow and Russell Young received their fourth certificate. For Mercer Ray, Cecil and La Grange Davis, the third time was the charm.

Black Cat Day has now been a winning one on two occasions for Henry Bell of Ripley, Calif. and Anton Perry, Robert Rutherford, James E. Taylor and J. Williams.

POST OFFICE FACTS

By PAUL L. HACKETT, Sr.

A watch is something we give little thought of until we wish to tell the time. There is nothing unusual about a person owning a watch but it plays a very important part in everyones life. To give satisfactory service a watch must be complete. There must be a case to seal the works and a frame to hold the works together. Every watch must have a main spring to run the rest of the mechanism. Each part has a distinctive duty to perform and yet is dependent on the other. A case, main spring, and a pair of hands does not constitute a watch.

In the Federal Government all departments might be compared with the operation of a watch. Unfortunately there are those individuals who fail to realize that they are only a small part of the service. These people have an exaggerated opinion of their importance. Positions are no different from watch parts there are always replacements to be had that are just as good or better than those in service.

Class consciousness valuating employees by positions held in Federal Service is an evil that should be dispensed with. Remove the so called unimportant employees and you have an interruption in the service. As every part is essential to a watch so are all employees essential for good service. Thus it is that all Federal Employees have something in common. It is just as necessary for the good of all that a janitor perform his duties as it is for a clerk. Whether it be mental or physical exertion, "A servant is worthy of his hire."

Plans are being made for drafting pay raise legislation. While discussions are being held, consideration should be given the economic problems facing all Federal employees. Compensation should be based upon the present needs rather than designation. While it is true consideration should be taken of the work performed it does not make sense that employees sharing work in same building should receive double the amount of a fellow employee. This is not an exemplification of true democracy. We believe that a bill with a balanced equation will have a better chance to be enacted than one of inequalities. clerks, carriers, postal laborers, motor vehicle, junior laborers, station cleaners, and charwomen should al get together and talk this over.

Next week we hope to give you some dope on a meeting to be held January 21, 1943 at which time pay raise legislation will be discussed.

We are delighted to announce that Thomas Alexander has been sworn in as a carrier. He is a hard worker and certainly deserved the opportunity. He has a wife and three fine kiddies to educate. His whole family says he is tops, well he is tops with us too. Good luck Tommy.

The old gang doesn't seem the same around the clock, soon we will have to place a mirror over the clock. We have had to place a box for the dear little things to stand on to hit out. You boys who have left us B. F. would have to be more careful of your French. We have stopped predicting what will happen before this is over. We are going to turn our efforts toward getting a few more sheckles to buy bonds and pay Victory Tax and we ask your help.

Hoodlum Gets $600 Baggage at Bus Station

Downtown police have had their attention drawn to a crime situation that has harrased Newton Station police in the Central Avenue business district for some time. This is several gangs of bold young colored hoodlums averaging 16 and 17 years of age, that preyed on merchants and parked cars, stealing any and everything possible. Recently they have extended their operations to the downtown section and can be seen roving here and there, especially on Main Street.

Last Saturday, after George Mills, white business man from Springfield, Ill. had wound up his business he alighted from a taxi at the bus station at 6th and Los Angeles streets. While he was paying his fare one of the gang of petty thieves stepped up and asked "carry your bags sir?" He nodded and turned back to the driver, then walked into the station expecting to find his baggage carrier. Up until bus time he could not be found nor could the baggage and valuable enclosed valued at $600.

Covington Is Civil Service Examiner

The Executive Director of the Los Angeles Urban League, Floyd Covington, has been appointed as special examiner by the Los Angeles County Civil Service Commission.

The Executive has ben serving as a member of the oral board and interviewing the applicants for position of social worker of Los Angeles County. The first group of persons reviewed numbered thirteen--only one of whom was a Negro.

The second group of twenty was reviewed recently, at which time there were no Negroes. Mr. Covington is hopeful and anxious that members of this community who are qualified for these examinations shall take them.

A new examination will be posted every sixty days, in order to build up an eligible list for temporary and permanent workers. The County Civil Service Commission is apparently endeavoring to remove any possible criticism of the existence of discrimination in the written or oral examinations. This is apparently the frst time that an American Negro has served in this capacity.

A cordial invitation is extended to all youth who would like to participate in this youth choir, which meets each Saturday at 5:00 p. m., at the church, Pico and Paloma.

EASTSIDE CHEST DRIVE GOES 'OVER THE TOP'

True to their promise, Community Chest volunteers on the Eastside faithfully kept on with their work and now report "over the top" with funds for the 86 health and welfare agencies through their chairman, John E. Hargrove.

In congratulating Hargrove upon his success in Division 44 and Mrs. Garner V. Grayson for an equally successful campaign in Division 47, Harry L. Masser, general chairman of the Chest campaign and vice-president of the Southern California Gas Company, stated that it is a "fine and generous piece of work."

The local divisions this year have raised more money for the Community Chest agencies than ever before in the 19 years of that organizations service

Through Mr. Hargroves Division 44, 500 Eastside citizens, organizations, clubs and churches came forward to give $2305.75, 104 per cent of quota for the hospitals, clinics, children's homes, youth and family agencies which are taking care "of our own on the home front."

Mrs. Grayson's group returned 182 contributions totaling $277.51, 107 per cent of their pledged quota.

Both leaders praise highly both the generosity of citizens and the hard work of the volunteers.

"I wish I could mention each and every fine deed that has come to my attention," Hargrove stated. "Many of our workers early brought in the sum they had personally promised for the Chest, but kept on with their work through the holidays, and in face of many problems of their own, to bring in every penny they could get.

"We have had the earnest backing of many of the Eastside's organized groups. We all can be proud of the spirit here in looking after our own in these grim days."

Second Baptist church thrilled last Sunday morning to an announcement from the minister, Rev. J. Raymond Henderson, that he had secured a gift of $1,000 from a friend, but that he needed $2,000 from the church in order to claim it.

The congregation was asked to make a special effort to raise $2000 on the coming Sunday. A great audience is expected and members are working feverishly to match this gift.

DONALD DOUGLAS:

FREE ENTERPRISE ANSWERS CHALLENGE: 60,000 WAR PLANES!

By DONALD W. DOUGLAS

Scarcely more than a year after Japan's sneak attack on Pearl Harbor, our Commander-in-Chief will have the weapon he first demanded to heap vengeance on our Axis enemies: an armada of 60,000 warplanes. Next year, I am confident, this fleet will be augmented by 125,000 additional planes rolling in uninterrupted streams from the assembly lines of the country's aircraft factories. This will be the greatest single striking force any nation has ever assembled.

Putting this first 60,000-plane armada in the air—more than our industry had built since the Wright brothers first flew; more than all the Axis factories turned out this year—rates as one of the prodigious feats of history. It has been possible only because of the ability of free enterprise to submerge private interests in the emergency and voluntarily function as a single industry.

Let me take you backstage for a glimpse of how democracy functions when it is behind the eight ball. The presidents of eight aircraft companies located in Southern California—Consolidated, Douglas, Lockheed, North American, Northrop, Ryan, Vega and Vultee—and frequently a spokesman for the Boeing Aircraft Company of Seattle, are seated around a big table in an office in Los Angeles. We are all rugged individualists and keen rivals. Prior to the war, we had almost nothing to do with each other, and this zealous competitive spirit swept down through the ranks of our thousands of employees.

"O. K., Mr. President"

Around the table, we discovered that the sudden plunge into all-out warfare had given us much in common. We had to black out our plants, protect them from sabotage, train women to replace thousands of our men whom the Army and Navy wanted, develop new sources of supplies, find ways of turning out planes as they had never been produced before. Working around the clock, our factories were building 64 per cent of the warplanes manufactured in this country. Straining every resource, we had managed to step up the combined industry production to 1,800 planes a month for the Army, the Navy, and for our allies.

That semed a phenomenal output, until the President called for 185,000 planes in two years. He asked American aircraft builders to treble their production rate in 1942, multiply it sixfold in 1943. The figure seemed fantastic, and it is doubtful if any one of us up to that time thought the industry could equal the quota. But we decided to send a message to Washington saying, "We can do it". After that it was up to us.

CHANDLER OWEN
Distinguished Negro journalist, official of the Office of War Information

EARL BROWDER
Secretary of the American Communist Party, noted historian

We concluded then and there that the only way to deliver this fabulous fleet on time was to pool everything we had—materials, machines, man power and know-how. We set up a corporation which we called Aircraft War Production Council, Inc., and through it we made available to each factory every engineering and areodynamic study any of our technicians had made. Some of these were costly research jobs that represented years of work. One that I know about ran over a million dollars. For the duration, it became available to anyone in the industry at no expense. We no longer had trade secrets from one another or from anyone else building war planes for the United Nations. While the war lasts, our only competitors are Hitler, Mussolini and Hirohito. When the dictators are finally bombed off this earth, we shall become rugged individualists and rivals again. But until then, we are an army of hundreds of thousands of aircraft workers with one aim only—victory.

The Council itself is merely the nerve center of a voluntary aircraft pool. The presidents who sit around the table once a month to formulate policies can accomplish little without the enthusiasm of the workers who build the planes. It is on the assembly lines that you see democracy at work. Since Pearl Harbor our output of planes has been stepped up tremendously. The man-hours and woman-hours on the planes have increased only half that of the plane output.

On Borrowed Material

This is due to industry teamwork, which is achieved without red tape. We thought the Council's office would serve as the trading post of the industry, an exchange through which each of us could borrow materials, machine time, technical brains from other plants. We set up eight major committees composed of the managers of production, material, enineering and standards, transportation and housing, accounting, plant defense, industrial and public relations, and industrial training, in each of the plants to work out the routine for this "borrowing over the back fence."

Before we knew it, the men in rival plants, who never knew Craemer, factory manager of Northrop at El Segundo, 25 miles away, and saying, "Paul, we're up against it for five sets of landing-gear forgings to keep the Flying Fortress line moving. Can you lend us some?" And Buckner was answering, "Sure, Mike, send your truck over." Or Lockheed's material manager, Harry Taylor, was rushing 300,000 lbs. of sheet metal to Vultee and Boeing in a single day to keep the hydro-presses stamping.

The layman looks at a Flying Fortress and sees one sleek streamlined machine. An aircraft builder looks at the same Flying Fortress and sees 110,000 separate parts, welded and riveted together by thousands of men and women, most of whom never saw the inside of a bomber less than a year ago. The 110,000 parts flow together in continuous streams, which have to join at the right moment somewhere along the assembly line, or else there is a slowdown or a stop in production. A good share of the parts are not made in the factory assembling them; they flow from

THE WORKERS FOR VICTORY

Row upon row of transparent plastic nose assemblies for use on Douglas attack bombers are shown in the above illustration by the Aeronautical Chamber of Commerce of America. They are receiving their final inspection and polishing prior to installation in the swift combat planes which are rolling from the Douglas plant in California to spread destruction on Axis forces in all parts of the globe. The plastic noses are actually more transparent than glass, are shatter-proof and strong enough to withstand the terrific force set up by the better than 350 miles-an-hour speed of the planes. Rows of ceiling lights are reflected in the nose assemblies as they undergo last-minute attention.

"CHANDLER OWEN:

NEGROES AND THE PEOPLE'S WAR

By CHANDLER OWEN

Some Negro Americans say that it makes no difference who wins this war. They say that things could not be any worse under Hitler. These are the people who emphasize liabilities; they never appraise their assets. They magnify the bad. They minimize the good.

Without understanding the Negro's liabilities, without denying the fact of handicaps and inequalities, I want to set down just what stake the Negro has in America—just what he has to lose under Hitler.

That he would lose it goes without saying. Race prejudice, from the first, has been Hitler's stock in trade. In his book, Mein Kampf, he brutaly calls Negroes "half-apes." At the 1936 Olympic Games in Berlin he greeted Aryan winners at his private apartment so that he would not have to shake the hands of Jesse Owens, Cornelius Johnson, John Woodruff, and the other great Negro athletes who played so large a part in birnging victory to the United States. Hitler's newspapers called these fine university-trained boys "the Black Auxiliaries."

Hitler and his false prophets have told the people of Germany that a Negro has neither a soul nor an intellect, that he is incapable of being civilized. The man in the street in Germany, deluded by the very magnitude of the Hitler lie, would not believe you if you told him that our Army is proud to have in its ranks many regiments of Negro soldiers, that there are now two full divisions of Negro soldiers, that Negroes serve in all branches. He would not believe you if you told him that there are Negro officers in our Army, Negro judges on the bench, Negroes in State legislatures and in the American Congress.

Germany backed up Mussolini in the rape of Ethiopia. In truth, Italy would not have defied the sanctions of the League of Nations without the support and encouragement of Hitler, and up until the end of the last World War Germany herself had extensive Negro colonies in Africa. In his book, Germans in the Cameroons, Harry R. Rudin, Assistant Professor of History at Yale, says this of German colonial administration:

"Whipping was the typical form of punishment inflicted on natives in the colony . . . In the Reichstag stories were told of whips made of hippopotamus hide cut so as to have sharp edges, of ropes soaked in water and then dried or dipped in tar and then rolled in sand."

OUR STAKE IN AMERICA

Just what stake does the Negro have in America? What has he got to lose? We have come a long way in the last fifty years, if slowly. There is still a long way to go before equality is attained, but the pace is faster, and never faster than now.

In 1890 there were 12,159 Negro clergymen in the United States; in 1930 there were 25,034. In 1890 there were 15,008 Negro teachers; in 1930 there were 54,439. In 1890 there were 208 Negro physicians and surgeons; in 1930 there were 3,805. In 1890 there were 120 Negro dentists; in 1930 there were 1,773. In 1890 there were 431 Negro lawyers, justices, and judges; in 1930 there were 1,247.

Progress? Yes. Too slow? Yes; but progress.

Not all of us can be professional men. As a matter of fact, few of us are. The great majority of Negroes are working people—skilled, unskilled; organized, unorganized. But during the last decade a good many doors have been opened to us, and other doors are ajar. There has been enlightened appreciation of the Negro's problem by the Government. There has been increase in Negro labor organization; many so-called "white" unions have abandoned colorline policies.

What would happen to labor under Hitler? I can tell you what happened to the Czechs, to the French, what happened to the Germans themselves. Their labor unions were suppressed. Strikes were prohibited. Union treasuries were seized.

This, applied to America, means that the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, the tens of thousands of Negroes in the United Mine Workers of America, the Negroes in the automobile, steel, rubber, packing, shipping, needle trades, and transportation unions, all would be reduced to economic impotence—turned into slaves or turned into the street.

The Negro businessman would fare no better than the Negro worker. The first thing Hitler does when he occupies a country is to seize control of the banks. Then he proceeds with a systematic confiscation of factories, stores, all industry. The National Negro Business League would be abolished. Negro banks, stores, loan associations, restaurants, real estate firms, insurance companies would be suppressed at once.

There are 680,000 Negro farm operators in the United States, with 95 per cent of them living in the Southern States. During recent years, and particularly during the last 5 years, the Federal Government has waged a vigorous program to aid and relieve the farmer—a campaign in which the Negro farmer has shared. The Farm Security Administration has made 60,440 loans to Negro farmers. These loans, both short term rehabilitation and long term purchase loans, total some $50,000,000. Negro farm operators represent 21 percent of the farm operators in the 17 Southern States (including Maryland and Missouri) and they have received 20.9 percent of the Farm Security loans in that area.

What stake has the Negro farmer to lose under Hitler? He has his land, his buildings, his machinery, his livelihood to lose. In Czechoslovakia, in Poland, in Yugoslavia, in Greece, and Norway millions of acres of land were seized. Farmers were removed from their acres, and Germans installed. It is needless to add that the Farm Security program would be supplanted by plantation slavery.

Since the advent of the New Deal, the phrase "social security" has rung like a pleasant bell in the ears of American Negroes. They are enthusiastic about old-age pensions, health and unemployment insurance, and pensions, health and unemployment insurance, and pensions for the blind. During the economic depression, Federal and State relief payments kept many families together. Negro youth found work and training in the CCC and the NYA. What kind of social security could they expect under Nazi rule?

In the New Republic for May 5, 1941, Michael Straight wrote this about Germany:

"The facts are these: In September, October, and November of 1940, 85,000 blind, incurably ill or aged Germans were put to death by the Gestapo. They were put to death as casually as the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals chloroforms old and helpless dogs. They were not killed for mercy. They were killed because they could no long-

EARL BROWDER:

All Together Now! Victory In 43

(Speech of EARL BROWDER at Philharmonic Auditorium Los Angeles, Calif., Sunday afternoon, January 17, 1943, Broadcast over Station KFWB)

The war has entered into a new phase. Some of the main features of this phase were stated in the President's message to Congress, and quite correctly. The relation of forces has turned against the Axis and in favor of the United Nations.

Public thinking about the problems of the war has reacted to this new phase in a peculiar manner. First, there has been a wave of shallow optimism which considers the war practically over except for the celebrations and therefore immediately turns toward "business as usual"; second, there has arisen among liberal and intellectual circles an opposite and equally shallow pessimism which suddenly is overwhelmed with the unsolved political problems of the war, throws up its hands in despair, repudiates all responsibility for the war, predicts a new war immediately after this one, and sits back to await the realization of its lugubrious prophecies. My remarks today are mainly directed against both these harmful tendencies in our country's political thoughts.

Perhaps it would be well to define exactly those factors which enable us to speak of the turn in the war unfavorable to the Axis. What are these factors?

First, and by far the most decisive, is the series of offensives by the Red Army before Stalingrad, in the Don Basin, in the Caucasus, and in the Northwest, which began on November 20 and roll on with rising momentum. The Nazis are losing, in dead and prisoners, more soldiers than the total engaged on all other fronts. Whole armies are being annihilated. For the first time Nazi officers and men are surrendering en masse. In contrast to last winter's offensives, which rolled back the invading armies, this winter's offensive is breaking through their lines, chopping them up, annihilating them, and breaching their strategic positions.

Second, in North Africa the British have struck General Rommel's Army and sent it scurrying back from Egypt, through Libya, in a wild race in which the Nazis have had but one thing to boast of, that they can run faster than the British can follow. American forces, occupying French North Africa, prepare with the British the destruction of the last Axis hold upon the southern shores of the Mediterranean, and open up Italy and the Balkans to invasion. The long-prepared Second Front in Europe can now be launched at any one or a dozen points of its entire coastline, while Hitler must fortify and guard twice the area of a year ago.

Third, the peoples of the occupied lands have begun to rise and create their own "second front" against Hitler. The partisan armies of Yugoslavia have liberated half their own land and set up their own Government of National Liberation, despite the treason of Mikhailovich. In Poland partisan armies are rising and engaging the Nazis in ever larger actions. In France signs multiply of an imminent rising of the peoples' forces. The Nazi-occupied lands are seething volcanoes of hatred against the invaders, with rising struggles which more and more break out on a mass scale.

Fourth, the Axis coalition is disintegrating, with Italy beginning to seek a way out of the war, with the first signs of revolt within Germany itself, with the few remaining neutrals such as Turkey, Sweden, Switzerland, moving farther away from Hitler and closer to the United Nations as they begin to see the clear outlines of inevitable Axis defeat.

Fifth, the Japanese have been halted in the Pacific, and the clear possibility has been shown, that the opening of adequate supply lines to China and a serious land and air offensive in and from that country can deliver a crushing blow to the Eastern member of the Axis.

Sixth, and last, American and British war production, despite all weaknesses and delays, now overtops the Axis and still has tremendous potentialities of expansion, while Axis production has already passed its peak and is reclining. The marvelous recuperative powers of Soviet war production, which is stronger than a year ago despite the loss of vital industrial areas, is being shown in the present equipment of the winter offensives, of which only a small fraction represents help from abroad.

All these factors add up to a decisive turn of the war in favor of the United Nations, creating the possibility of victory in 1943 over Hitler in Europe.

What is wrong, then, with being optimistic about the status of the war? Why do I warn against the current spirit of optimism as shallow and harmful?

The reason is, first, that the favorable turn in the relation of forces must still be realized by the maximum utilization of all the forces on our side. It will do us no good to have the margin of forces on our side if we fail to use them. And it is precisely this shallow optimism, which already looks upon the war as won, which is now the greatest danger to our victory, for it brings about a relaxation of the nation's efforts, especially in the field of economic and political problems, it is manipulated by forces of appeasement and agreed to disrupt the national unity for the war.

At this moment when the war turns in our favor, it is especially necessary to make clear that it is still possible to lose the war, that at this moment above all we must demand the greatest exertion, the fullest mobilization of every force at our disposal against the enemy. The turn of the war only makes the enemy more desperate, more ferocious, more implacable. This enemy has threatened that, faced with defeat, he will carry the whole world down into ruin with him. We have no reason to doubt the seriousness of this declared intention, but we have every reason to do what we can to make it impossible.

And we do not yet do everything.

Consider again those six factors which have turned the war in our favor. Think for a moment what would be the status of the war if one should abstract the first item, the Soviet offensive; clearly, without that factor, the war would be disastrously unfavorable to us. That is to say that the United States and Britain have not even begun as yet to militarily engage a considerable proportion of Hitler's forces, not to speak of defeating them. The Yugoslav partisan armies killed more Nazis in 1942 than did the U. S. forces, even as the Chinese Eighth Route and New Fourth Armies killed more Japanese than we, despite our enormous resources and our sixty billion dollar war budget. Do we really think that we will win this war without large-scale fighting? That is a dangerous thought which we should get rid of as quickly as possible, because it leads to mistakes and disasters. That is the thought which delays the opening of the Second Front in Europe, and every day of delay increases the cost of victory in lives and treasure. This is the thought which lears to the slogan "victory at leisure," to dilatoriness, to slackness, to weakness, to defeat. Those who speak as though the opening of the Second Front were some sort of 'favor' which we should do for the benefit of the Soviet Union when we get around to it, are not serving well our own country. The delay in opening the Second Front has hurt us more than it has the Soviet Union, and it has hurt the United Nations most of all.

Consider for a moment the second factor, North Africa. After brilliantly-executed landing we seem to have bogged down dangerously in political confusion which is seriously straining our cooperative relations with Britain, and is weakening our great influence in France and other occupied countries. This and similar dangers flourish in the atmosphere of shallow optimism, of the thought that victory is already a "bird in the hand."

Examine now the third factor, the rising of the peoples of the occupied lands. Here also we find not only evidence of the war's turn in our favor, but also grave dangers which we still must learn how to avoid. Consider, for example, Yugoslavia. General Eisenhauer, our Commander in North Africa, is reported as sending his congratulations to Mikhailovich who negotiated with the enemy while fighting against the partisan armies who brought us our victories there. This is even more dangerous than the deal with Darlan, for it has not even the color of "military expediency": it acts as a notification to the peoples of all occupied lands that the United States does not yet distinguish clearly between its friends and its enemies. Perhaps we could "afford" such "luxuries" if the war was already won, though I would question that very seriously; but surely it is a deadly mistake at this moment when, to win the war, we need the full confidence and active cooperation of all the rising peoples' armies throughout Europe.

Or, take the fourth factor, the disintegration of the Axis coalition. That is a heavy item in our favor, but we will lose its advantage if, at the same time, we permit the relations between the leading powers of the United Nations to become strained. And it is no secret that China has with-

Question of the Hour

Will the ugly tides of Negro-baiting and anti-Semitism sweep back into the war plants of America?

Or will the government's effort to drive these war-crippling prejudices out once and for all succeed?

This is the question that is being decided this week as southern poll taxers and mossback employers try to knife President Roosevelt's anti-discrimination agency, the Fair Employment Practice Committee.

Labor and Negro leaders here are up in arms at the decision of War Manpower Chief Paul V. McNutt to postpone indefinitely FEPC hearings on discrimination against Negroes in the railroad industry.

They feel that ths case, coming after a number of other instances of interference with the work of the FEPC involves the whole future existence of this extremely important anti-discrimination agency.

The railroad hearings were the first involvnig discrimination in an entire industry and the opinion among responsible leaders here is that the postponement of the hearings would seriously weaken FEPC's entire prestige and influence.

LABOR INDIGNANT

Acting as secretary of the CIO and chairman of its anti-discrimination committee, James B. Carey summed up labor's attitude by expressing "bitter disappointment at the postponement of the hearings and describing McNutt's action as a "serious blow" at national morale.

It is understood that AFL leaders are also indignant at McNutts action in going over the head of FEPC in calling off the hearings.

Both AFL and CIO leaders are reported to be urging a speedy meeting of FEPC to to protest against postponement of the hearings.

It is expected that FEPC will decide to take the issue directly to the President and ask him to give FEPC the powers it needs to combat discrimination in war industry.

One of the major questions in the now postponed FEPC hearings was discrimination against Negroes in 25 southern railroads which were sanctioned in an agreement with the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen.

The southern railroads were the spearhead of the drive against the hearings, but they unfortunately succeeded in using some of the railroad unions involved as a front to bring pressure on McNutt.

FEPC had already been defied by Gov. Frank Dixon of Alabama and other southern bourbonns.

And unfortuntely McNutt has not been the only government official to succumb to the pressure of industrial and poll-tax interests against FEPC.

The state department has succeeded in calling off and postponing repeatedly scheduled hearings on discrimination against Mexican workers in the southwest.

Meanwhile Assistant Secretary of the Navy Ralph B. Bard, who had previously objected to hearings on discrimination in Detroit's war industries, withdrew his objections on Wednesday.

This was viewed as an important gain in the fight to save FEPC.

Despite its limitations, FEPC has done some effective work in combatting discrimination.

FEPC officials say that their work has been instrumental in obtaining large-scale employment of Negro workers, including 800 women, at North American Aviation here in California.

They also state that barriers against Negroes and Jews have been broken down at the Wright Aeronautical plant in Patterson, N. J.

Generally, FEPC officials state that they have made progress against discrimintion in both the aviation and shipbuilding industries.

One of FEPC's great shortcomings however, has been its failure to follow up after it issues an order banning discrimination in a particular plant or industry. This may be partly due to a lack of funds. A recent meeting of the CIO's anti-discrimination committee urged larger appropriations for FEPC.

Continued interference with the work of FEPC in recent months as exemplified in the case of the railroad hearings has, however, made the future effectiveness of the committee very doubtful unless it can have greater leeway.

Negro and labor leaders were opposed to the transfer of FEPC to the War Manpower Commission under McNutt on the ground that they feared this would hamper the agency's effectiveness.

McNutt subsequently issued a statement assuring FEPC virtual autonomy within the Manpower Commission and granted it "the power to conduct hearings in any area" where it felt there was evidence of discrimination.

To Africa; this is a white man's land,
Not for inferiors whose skins are black!"
Well they went back; thousands of our brave boys,
To Tunisia, Libya, Morocco's gate
Biserte, Casa Blanca, bound for Rome
And Berlin, nest of Aryan-Nazi hate.

II

Yes they went back, not chained in sweltering holds
As their foreparents came, but on the deck
In mighty warships 'neath the Stripes and Stars
Happy, with guns the Fascist den to wreck.
Each hand grenade, each ripping bayonet
Their black hands wield bear doubled viciousness;
Each blow dealt for Democracy abroad
Should make race hatred back at home the less.

III

Yes, they went back, but not to stay. For soon
They will come home, and they'll demand to see
The traitorous Bilbo breed suppressed, so all
Can share the sun of lasting Victory!

VICTORY CONGRESS

Consciousness of the vital period in American history which lies ahead highlighted the mood of the opening of the 78th. Congress last week. Republicans, knowing their increased strength, and Democrats, already "there," so to speak, united in a desire for action to win the war. As soon as the Democrats had elected Speaker Sam Rayburn, tension broke, and both parties joined in a hearty ovation, singing "Happy Birthday" to celebrate the new Speaker's 61st anniversary. When President Roosevelt addressed the Congress on the following day, Congress was still in a mood for cheering. Forty-four times, the packed House chamber reechoed to applause and piercing yells as he told them, "the arsenal of democracy is making good . . . the Nazis have asked for it and they are going to get it." The President simplified our war aims as a "decent and durable peace." The general terms of his message included the germs of political chntroversy over how economic security for our own people and the rest of the world can be maintained. Many members felt a desire for more specifications along these lines and there is no doubt that "post-war" considerations will more and more occupy our planning during the remaining conduct of the war.

GET JAPS SOONER

At the moment Congress was opening, Admiral William F. Halsey jr. said to a press conference in New Zealand, "Japan's next move will be to retreat. If the Allies had a little more weight, it wouldn't take a year to smash the Japs . . . You don't need to worry about Jap tactics. Any normal Navy man can lick them." In Washington Elmer Davis, director of OWI, said he had no information to support such a prediction, and Joseph C. Grew, former Ambassador to Japan, commented that only "positive attack" could achieve victory over the Nipponese.

RESERVES USED UP?

Losses suffered by Germany in the last two months have probably wiped out the Reich's reserve of 900,000 men, thus forcing the Axis on the defensive everywhere. This should deprive them of the initiative during 1943, according to a noted British commentator. Most of these reserves were sent to Russia, but additional fortifying of French territory, hitherto unoccupied, drew off large numbers. The new North African front in Tunisia naturally occupies some of the best troops and many squadrons of aircraft. Widely strung out garrisons for Norway, Denmark, Holland, Belgium, and northern France must be maintained. Germany must watch her ground in Poland, Czechoslovakia, the Baltic States and Western Russia—and there are Yugoslavia and Greece. You're not in as good a position to hit when you lie sprawled all over the ground as when you're on your toes at the edge of the ring.

INDIA UNITED BEHIND CONGRESS PARTY, WRITER SAYS HERE

at 70 million. All of these gentlemen claim that these depressed classes are fundamentally opposed to the Congress.

What are the facts?

The India National Congress adopted twenty years ago an anti-"untouchability" pledge which prohibits any person believing in, or practicing, "untouchability" from becoming a member of the Congress.

The support given to the Congress by the former "untouchables', who are now called the Scheduled Castes, was demonstrated in the 1937 elections. Out of 151 seats reserved for the Scheduled Castes, Congress won 78. Fifty-seven were won by pro-Congress candidates. The only anti-Congress group, led by Dr. Ambedkar, succeeded in winning only 13 seats. Yet today this same Dr. Ambedkar, leader of this group which won only 13 seats, has suddenly been elevated by the Government of India to be leader of all of India's "untouchables". The simple fact is that the Doctor's following and influence is centered only in Bombay. The overwhelming majority of India's "untouchables", in spite of the recent Government appointment of Ambedkar, support the Congress.

And now about the Princes. It has often been stated in the press and on public platforms that 95 million people of the Native States, under the Princes of India, together with their rulers, are bound by treaty obligation to the Crown of England, and that the Crown is responsible for their welfare. The implication always is that only the Crown can look after the welfare of these people.

The truth is there are 562 native rulers with their families. The ninety million Indians who live in the Native States have a well-developed political organization, headed by Jawaharlal Nehru. The name of this organization is the All-India State Peoples' Conference. It gives full support to the Indian National Congress, which in turn cooperates and works with the Native States' Conference. The two organizations follow parallel policies. No other popular mass movement exists in the Native States. The Indian Nat'l Congress itself does not authorize the formation of ranches in the Native States. The relationship between the two organizations I have mentioned is friendly and cooperative. The people of the Native States, far from being without political life, have thus established an exceedingly close working relationship with the Congress, and are part and parcel of the vast Indian National liberation movement.

Stories are sometimes told of the wild Sikhs,--that they, too, do not support the Congress. The opposite is the truth. They are, in fact, among the most reliable of all the supporters of the Congress. Recently an attempt was made by the Prime Minister of the Punjab to alienate them from the Congress. Sir Sikhandar Hayat Khan, the Premier of the Punjab, made an offer to the Sikh leadership that he would repudiate the Moslem League and denounce their program of Pakistan ("division of India") if the Sikhs would repudiate the Congress (Incidentally, the Moslem Premier himself is not in agreement with the Moslem League's Pakistan plan.) The Sikhs rejected his proposal. A memorandum of the Sikhs was handed to Sir Stafford Cripps. It stated bluntly that at this moment of world crisis when the life of all nations, and in particular the life of Indian a sa nation, was in the balance, they would not tolerate any proposal to disunite the Indian people. India, they stated, was an indivisible whole.

Such is the real truth about the supposed "opposition" of the Sikhs.

Nor are the Christian in opposition to the Congress. The All-India Christian Congress in repeated resolutions announced its support of the Indian National movement. A great many well known Christians are also well known Congressmen. The Christian Indians have from the earliest periods in the history of the Indian Congress, held leading positions in the National Congress, including the Presidency. No, the Christian Indians are not opposed to the Congress.

But the Colonial Tory mind is would never consent to be ruled by them."

This "martial races" concept is a myth. And even if it were not, is "race" to be the basis of capacity to participate in the fight for liberty, for striking at the Axis?

One is inclined to ask: Are the Chinese peasantry who have fought the Japanese invaders to a standstill "martial races"?

Are the peasants of the Ukrane and the various Asian peoples fighting so heroically on the Soviet battlefronts "martial races"?

And in India--just what is the "race" component in this curious classification of "martial races"?

Among Indian troops are Rajputs, Jats, Pathans, Nepalese very imaginative. It states that the "Congress has no influence whatever with the martial races on whom the defense of India--apart from United Nations' forces—rests. Many of these races."—the Colonial Tories insist—"are divided by unbridgeable gulfs from the Hindu Congress, and Gurkhas, Bengalese, Tamils, Malayalees, Andhras, Marathas, Brahmans, Kshtyrias, Sudras, "untouchables", Moslems, Christians, Sikhs, etc.

This may not mean a whole lot to you, but it's a cross-section of India.

Most of these so-called "martial" people are peasants. From the same families as supply the men for the Indian army, come artisans and peasants and not a few Congress workers. Congress has looked upon the people in the armed forces as the same as the peasants and artisans and professional groups and workers of India. They are no more a 'race' by themselves than are the men in the Indian Government. Men join the army for a living, a better living than tilling the soil with antiquated methods. They do not join because they are of a "martial race", nor do they become a "race" apart after joining.

I hope we have now swept away some of the "trash" of which I spoke earlier. In doing this, I have sought to lay the basis for a clearer understanding of the India problem, especially from this point of view: that India is fully able to organize a united national government, and that various groups in India, assertedly "against the Congress", are in reality staunchly supporting it,--also that the basis of Indian unity is the struggle for freedom as an integral part of the anti-Axis war. The United Nations needs, in India, the immediate and most effective possible mobilization of manpower and resources to help achieve speedy victory over the Nazi-Japanese combination. And India needs freedom in order to accomplish this. Freedom is an immediate war necessity.

The United Nations need the Indian people, and can enlist them in the present struggle because the Indian masses are anti-fascist.

By virtue of India's own national struggle for liberation over the past twenty-five years from British imperialism, India is clearly on the side of freedom. India is beyond any question anti-fascist. For more than a decade the masses of India have proved this by their sympathy for India's heroic neighbor, China, when the latter was first withstanding Japanese aggression. Again: India protested the rape of Ethiopia when Mussolini barbarously ordered the seizure of that country and its people. Furthermore, in Spain, when the democratic government was being assailed by the fascists, India felt keenly that democracy had already come to a life-and-death struggle for survival with the ugly monster Fascism. India sounded an unheeded warning to the West, which was still following Chamberlain-Blum appeasement. Indian leaders took up the battle of the Loyalists by campaigning in every village throughout India until food, clothing and ambulances staffed by Indian doctors reached the shores of Spain. All this time China was kept supplied with the only help the masses of India could give--doctors, ambulances, supplies. If India had possessed a people's army and navy or air force, these would long ago have been fighting in the world front against fascism.

India knows full well that the United Nations' victory will be India's victory. India recognizes the basic aim of the present war: liberation for all oppressed peoples. Of these matters, India is truly deeply aware, believing and knowing that it is to the interest of every man, woman and child in India, Africa and in fact in every part of the globe, to mobilize every ounce of strength and energy in support of the United Nation's war effort. For every man faces the same threat of merciless slavery.

Yet, today, the military situation in India is such that it affects the very outcome of the war. For we are fighting a globial war, and the actual military and political situation on any one front definitely affects every other front.

The Indian masses despite their readiness to participate in the defense of India, have been unable to secure from Whitehall any support of their effort. The people wish to make the struggle for Indian freedom and independence against the aggressor, Japan, a popular struggle, a concern of every man, woman and child in the land. The spirit of a people's war is need in my country if a full measure of help for the United Nations is to be achieved. Even though there are about a million and one-half troops now stationed in India, this number, from the standpoint of the strategic importance of India, is insufficient. It has become a matter of gravest urgency to form a people's army in India.

★ SPREADING JOY

Friendship, is like good wine; it improves with age. Old friendships are rare and beautiful. I ran across an old friend the other day and it was a real joy.

Some thirty years ago there was a group of young men in New Orleans who were members of the best families, and consequently the social lions of that one city where colored people have a code of social ethics that are taken seriously.

One of these young men was Adams Perkins, club man, playboy and lady's man.

If you ever have lived in New Orleans you will remember some of the others who were in the class and could be found at the Iroquoise Club almost any afternoon or evening. Among them was that Prince of good fellows, Harry Woods, of blessed memory, sam Tibbs now a resident of Los Angeles, Howard Guidery, Rioul Maurice, Jimmy Vance, Charlie Harvey, Bob Wilson, John Palfrey, Aristele DeJoise, John Reed, Bennie Dixon, Fred Thornton, Tom Helms, Charles McArthur, Minor Patten, Grant Webb, Walter Newsome, James Lewis, Jimmie Sims, Journe White and many others I do not remember now.

Well I was delighted to see Adams, of course like myself he is some older, also like myself he is married and settled down.

We talked of the good times we used to have in the Crescent City, of the dances and picnics at Millenberg in the summer time, and up town at St. Catherin's Hall where that smart set of young ladies called the Hearts used to hold their formals.

We talked of the folks up town, down town, back of town and in Algiers.

Of the Franklins, the Bernards, the Edwards, Ida Hall, Missie DeLake, Margaret Marshall, Nellie Martin, the Golbs, the Venas, the DeJoise and every one we could remember.

We drove out to Central Gardens, one of the better resident sections of the Eastside of Los Angeles. There on Baird Street nestling in a group of modern bungalows sits, one of the prettiest little white cottages you ever saw. Adams pointed with pride to it and said that's mine. With pretty green lawns back and front, with full white cement drive way running back to a pretty little white garage, and one of those clean sleepy backyards where a few hens were scratching and singing their song of joy. He has a home to be proud of.

I love old New 'leans. 'Gee I'd give the world to see that ole gang of mine, the boys and girls I used to know. There was pretty Viola Hurst, Cecil Marshall, who Garland Anderson used to call, "The Queen", Viola Conally, Nellie Martin, Lena Remy, Sweet DeJoise, Lena DeJoise, Matile Goff, Rosa King, Bertha Thompson, Tessie Thompson, Elizabeth Lewis, Virginia Howard. Among the boys were James and Preston Peters, Picket Davis, Herbert Lofton and that quietism of culture, Mr. Good. I wonder where they are? Where is good old Joe Sarpe, the baker?

I remember the moonlight picnics and the lawn parties in the summer, and the formal dances in the winter.

I understand that many of those we knew are living in California. I think it would be a splendid idea if we could meet in sort ofa reunion, I'm sure Adams and Sam Tibbs would welcome such a meeting.

So if any of the old gang here would like to attend such a getting together of the old home town boys and girls, please drop me a line here at the California Eagle, 4075 S. Central, and we will try and arrange a get together.

Leading the Old Sweethearts Parade this week is Mr. and Mrs. David Brown, who have been that way about each other for fifty-five years. The Browns are the parents of Mrs. Talmond of East 115th street.

AN EXCLUSIVE CALIFORNIA EAGLE SERIAL

"NATIVE SON" ★

From the book by
RICHARD WRIGHT

"Isn't it true you REFUSE to rent houses to Negroes if those houses are in other sections of the city?"

"Why, yes."

"Why?"

"Well, it's an old custom."

"Do you think that custom is right?"

"I didn't make the custom," Mr. Dalton said.

"Do you think that custom is right?" Max asked again.

"Well, I think Negroes are happier when they're together."

"Who told you THAT?"

"Why, nobody."

"Aren't they more profitable when they're together?"

"I don't know what you mean."

"Mr. Dalton, doesn't this policy of your company tend to keep Negroes on the South Side, in one area?"

"Well, it works that way. But I didn't originate . . ."

"Mr. Dalton, you give millions to help Negroes. May I ask why you don't charge them less rent for fire-traps and check that against your charity budget?"

"Well, to charge them less rent would be unethical."

"UNETHICAL!"

"Why, yes. I would be underselling my competitors."

"Is there an agreement among realtors as to what Negroes should be charged for rent?"

"No. But there's a code of ethics in business."

"So, the profits you take from the Thomas family in rents, you give back to them to ease the pain of their gouged lives and to salve the ache of your own conscience?"

"That's a distortion of fact, sir!"

"Mr. Dalton, why do you contribute money to Negro education?"

"I want to see them have a chance."

"Have you ever employed any of the Negroes you helped to educate?"

"Why, no."

"Mr. Dalton, do you think that the terrible conditions under which the Thomas family lived in one of your houses may in some way be related to the death of your daughter?"

"I don't know what you mean."

"That's all," said Max.

After Mr. Dalton left the stand, Peggy came, then Britten, a host of doctors, reporters, and many policemen.

"We will now hear from Bigger Thomas!" the coroner called.

A wave of excited voices swept over the room. Bigger's fingers gripped the arms of the chair. Max's hand touched his shoulder. Bigger turned and Max whispered:

"Sit still."

Max rose.

"Mr. Coroner?"

"Yes?"

"In the capacity of Bigger Thomas' lawyer, I'd like to state that he does not wish to testify here."

"His testimony would help clear up any doubt as to the cause of the death of the deceased," the coroner said.

"My client is already in police custody and it is his right to refuse . . ."

"All right. All right," the coroner said.

Max sat down.

"Stay in your seat. It's all right," Max whispered to Bigger.

Bigger relaxed and felt his heart pounding. He longed for something to happen so that the white faces would stop staring at him. Finally, the faces turned away. The coroner strode to the table and lifted the kidnap note with a slow, long, delicate, and deliberate gesture.

"Gentlemen," he said, facing the six men in the rows of chairs, "you have heard the testimony of the witnesses. I think, however, that you should have the opportunity to examine the evidence gathered by the Police Department."

The coroner gave the kidnap note to one of the jurors who read it and passed it on to the others. All of the jurors examined the purse, the blood-stained knife, the blackened hatchet blade, the Communist pamphlets, the rum bottle, the trunk, and the signed confession.

"Owing to the peculiar nature of this crime, and owing to the fact that the deceased's body was all but destroyed, I deem it imperative that you examine one additional piece of evidence. It will help shed light upon the actual manner of the death of the deceased," the coroner said.

He turned and nodded in the direction of two white-coated attendants who stood at the rear door. The room was quiet. Bigger wondered how much longer it would last; he felt that he could not stand much more. Now and then the room blurred and a slight giddiness came over him; but his muscles would flex taut and it would pass. The hum of voices grew suddenly loud and the coroner rapped for order. Then a commotion broke out. Bigger heard a man's voice saying:

"Move aside, please!"

He looked and saw the two white-coated attendants pushing an oblong, sheet-covered table through the crowd and down the aisle. What's this? Bigger wondered. He felt Max's hand come onto his shoulder.

"Take it easy, Bigger. This'll soon be over."

"What they doing?" Bigger asked in a tense whisper.

For a long moment Max did not answer. Then he said uncertainly:

"I don't know."

The oblong table was pushed to the front of the room. The coroner spoke in a deep, slow voice that was charged with passionate meaning:

"As Deputy Coroner, I have decided, in the interests of justice, to offer in evidence the raped and mutilated body of one Bessie Mears, and the testimony of police officers and doctors relating to the cause and manner of her death . . ."

The coroner's voice was drowned out. The room was in an uproar. For two minutes the police had to pound their clubs against the walls to restore quiet. Bigger sat still as stone as Max rushed past him and stopped a few feet from the sheet-covered table.

"Mr. Coroner," Max said. "This is outrageous! Your indecent exhibition of that girl's dead body serves no purpose but that of an incitement to mob violence . . ."

"It will enable the jury to determine the exact manner of the death of Mary Dalton, who was slain by the man who slew Bessie Mears!" the coroner said in a scream that was compounded of rage and vindictiveness.

"The confession of Bigger Thomas covers all the evidence necessary for this jury!" Max said. "You are criminally appealing to mob emotion . . ."

"That's for the Grand Jury to determine!" the coroner said. "And you cannot interrupt these proceedings any longer! If you persist in this attitude, you'll be removed from this room! I have the legal right to determine what evidence is necessary . . ."

Slowly, Max turned and walked back to his seat, his lips a thin line, his face white, his head down.

Bigger was crushed, helpless. His lips dropped wide apart. He felt frozen, numb. He had completely forgotten Bessie during the inquest of Mary. He understood what was being done. To offer the dead body of Bessie as evidence and proof that he had murdered Mary would make him appear a monster; it would stir up more hate against him. Bessie's death had not been mentioned during the inquest and all of the white faces in the room were utterly surprised. It was not because he had thought any less of Bessie that he had forgotten her, but Mary's death had caused him the most fear; not her death in itself, but what it meant to him as a Negro. They were bringing Bessie's body in now to make the white men and women feel that nothing short of a quick blotting out of his life would make the city safe again. They were using his having killed Bessie to kill him for his having killed Mary, to cast him in a light that would sanction any action taken to destroy him. Though he had killed a black girl and a white girl, he knew that it would be for the death of the white girl that he would be punished. The black girl was merely "evidence." And under it all he knew that the white people did not really care about Bessie's being killed. White people never searched for Negroes who killed other Negroes. He had even heard it said that white people felt it was good when one Negro killed another; it meant that they had one Negro less to contend with. Crime for a Negro was only when he harmed whites, took white lives, or injured white property. As time passed he could not help looking and listening to what was going on in the room. His eyes rested wistfully on the still oblong white draped form under the sheet on the table and he felt a deeper sympathy for Bessie than at any time when she was alive. He knew that Bessie, too, though dead, though killed by him, would resent her dead body being used in this way. Anger quickened in him: an old feeling that Bessie had often described to him when she had come from long hours of hot toil in the white folks' kitchens, a feeling of being forever commanded by others so much that thinking and feeling for one's self was impossible. Not only had he lived where they told him to live, not only had he done what they told him to do, not only had he done these things until he had killed to be quit of them; but even after obeying, after killing, they still ruled him. He was their property, heart and soul, body and blood; what they did claimed every atom of him, sleeping and waking; it colored life and dictated the terms of death.

Before leaving Cleveland, Miss Carroll had heard of the crowded living conditions in the Nation's Capital. A friend had written that she could room with her temporarily, however, so that problem was settled for the moment. Three may be a crowd, but four in one room was too much, so Miss Carroll began to seek new quarters.

By BILL SMALLWOOD

If, in your home, you have a juvenile member—of, say, around ten or eleven—who slips quietly about the place firmly clutching a pad and pencil, and each time you concentrate on some duty, forgetting him, he later gives you the pad and thereon you discover a remarkable likeness of yourself, encourage him! For he may mature into another George Farmer.
